SCHEME TO BLOCK TAFT'S LEGISLATION

Cannon and Sherman Closeted at White House, Afterward Refuse to Talk.

BLOW FOR POSTAL BANKS

Subcommittee Which Has Legislation in Charge Controlled by Bankers—Fight on Tariff Board Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Strong indications that even the few recommendations for affirmative legislation put by the President into his regular annual message will not have an easy road to travel through the House, as at present organized by Speaker Cannon, have already appeared.

President Taft called Vice President Sherman and Speaker Cannon into conference to-day, and for more than an hour the three were closeted in the President's private room, while visitors cooled their heels in the waiting rooms of the Executive office. When Mr. Sherman and the Speaker left they declined to comment on the consultation, declaring that it was not a subject for public discussion and that if any information was to be given out it must come from President Taft. The latter declined to talk.

The opinion is that the conference dealt with hitches in the legislative programme, or some of them. It is known that the President is highly desirous of enacting legislation that will have the approval of the country at large, and he is more or less committed to the establishment of certain policies.

The President's recommendation for the establishment of postal savings banks, which was received so enthusiastically by the progressive element in the Republican Party, has been first singled out for opposition.

The initiative in the House in regard to bills for the carrying out of the President's recommendation for postal banks rests with the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, of which John W. Weeks is Chairman. Mr. Weeks is a Massachusetts banker, and it was common talk last year that he was especially selected for this Chairmanship by the Speaker on account of his hostility to postal banks.

Bankers Control Committee.

Mr. Weeks, who insists that he has no compact with the Speaker, to-day appointed as a sub-committee to consider all bills relating to postal savings banks four Republicans and two Democrats. The Chairman of the new sub-committee is Representative J. J. Gardner of New Jersey, who has already expressed himself as opposed to legislation on postal banks until after the general subject of the currency has been taken up and disposed of. That means a delay of at least two years.

The other Republicans are George W. Huff of Pennsylvania, J. Sloat Fassett of New York, and Cyrus Durey of New York. Mr. Huff is a Pennsylvania banker and as such not friendly to the Government assuming any part of the banking business. Mr. Fassett is Vice President of a bank. Mr. Durey alone is not a banker, being President of a lumber concern.

Here is an issue which the House insurgents are likely to seize under the leadership of Mr. Murdock of Kansas.

Among the Republican Senators of the regular stripe there is a very interesting variance of opinion as to the outcome of the President's demand for the continuance of the Tariff Board while it labors to ascertain domestic and foreign costs of production, contrary to the desire and will of Senator Hale and some of his stand-pat friends. It was again made clear to-day that Senator Aldrich is going to stand squarely with the President in the matter, and that means that a large group of the regulars will not support Mr. Hale. But there is a sharp division among the regulars, and some of the strongest of them said emphatically to-day that the President would be disappointed.

Tariff Board Fight.

"He won't get it," was the positive way in which one of the Senators put it this afternoon, and he is one of those who had a good deal to say about the way in which the Tariff bill finally took shape. When this was reported to one of Senator Aldrich's chief supporters he laughed and replied: "Hale will be outvoted easily. There won't be anything to it when the fight comes on."

The Westerners in the House will welcome a fight over the proposition. Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee is openly for the President's proposition. It affords him an excellent opportunity to "get right" in his part of the country. With Speaker Cannon losing no chance to indorse whatever the President desires, the result in the House is certain. Thus it will take more than an ordinary fight on the part of Hale and his friends to prevent the continuance of the Tariff Board exactly as the President asks.

The insurgent Republican Senators are going ahead with their fight for a permanent tariff commission, realizing all the time that they are probably beaten before they fire a shot, and that the President's action with regard to the tariff board is mainly responsible for their defeat. But they will be forced to vote for the appropriation after their attempt to secure a permanent commission is beaten.

In the meantime the Tariff Board is hard at work on the lines marked out by the President. It is probable a report as to "undue discrimination" against the United States on the part of any foreign nation will be ready about the first of March. Under the law the maximum rates are to go into effect March 31, and if the Tariff Board finds any undue discrimination only about a month will remain for the Administration to secure an adjustment through diplomatic negotiation. The probability is that President Taft will have to ask Congress to postpone for some months at least the date at which the maximum rates shall go into effect.

Senator Raines Improving.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 9.—Dr. Newton H. Collins this morning reported that State Senator John Raines is improving. "He is somewhat better to-day," said Dr. Collins, "and I do not think an operation will be necessary unless other complications develop. The peritonitis subsided materially Tuesday and was even less yesterday."

UNIONISTS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN.

Balfour, Lansdowne, Curzon, and Milner to Speak at Many Meetings.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Unionist leaders who have been much slower in getting to work in the election campaign than their rivals, have now arranged to start in earnest. A long programme of meetings in all parts of the country was issued from the Conservative organization offices to-night. These meetings will be adressed by Arthur J. Balfour, the Opposition leader in the House of Commons; Lord Lansdowne, who holds a similar position in the House of Lords; Lord Curzon of Kedleston, Lord Milner, and others, but the campaign will not be in full swing before January.

Winston Spencer Churchill, President of the Board of Trade, is pushing a campaign of daily speeches in Lancashire with unabated vigor. Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, after a brief vacation, addressed a great meeting at Carnarvon to-night in both the English and Welsh languages.

Austen Chamberlain, ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer, also addressed a great gathering to-day at Groet, Shropshire, but had a bad reception, meeting continually with interruptions. He referred only in the most general terms to tariff reform. None of the Unionist speakers, in fact, has yet grappled with this question. They are probably waiting for a lead from Mr. Balfour, who is expected shortly to issue an election manifesto.

The campaign is still distinguished by the strong line taken by the religious bodies against the House of Lords. The Christian World publishes declarations from some thirty free church leaders, of moderate views against the rejection of the budget.

BOY TACKLES TWO BURGLARS.

Uses a Gun to Protect His Sister and Wounds One of Them.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 9.—To protect his little sister from danger and the home of his parents from burglars, 10-year-old Louis Lanning risked his life last night, chasing away two robbers, who attempted to enter the house at the point of his father's revolver.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanning, who are caretakers of a house at Broad Street Park, a suburb of this city. The parents were away, and little Louis was left in charge of the house and his baby sister.

The boy was entertaining the little girl when he heard a noise downstairs. Courageously he picked up a small rifle and descended to investigate. When he reached the dining room he found two men who were packing up silverware and other articles of value.

The youngster, realizing that they were burglars, brought his rifle to his shoulder and sent a bullet at the head of one of the men. It missed the mark and the burglars swooped down on the lad and disarmed him. Then they gave him a severe beating and threw him out into a clump of bushes, leaving him for dead, while they ransacked the house. They collected a lot of silverware and jewelry and $100 in money, and had carried the little girl downstairs, with the intention, it is believed, of kidnapping her, when the boy, despite his bruises and wounds, darted into the house and got his father's revolver.

The intruders were carrying the little girl out of the house when Louis confronted them with the gun. They dropped their burden and made for the rear door, followed by six bullets from the boy's revolver. Although they took their loot with them a trail of blood showed that at least one of them had been wounded.

The police to-day are scouring the city and vicinity for the burglars. It is believed they will be apprehended, as a good description of them was furnished by the youthful hero.

The parents of the boy believe his courageous action prevented the kidnapping of his little sister.

TO TRY STATE OFFICER.

West Virginia Wants Virginia's Attorney General-Elect for Assault.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 9.—Gov. Glasscock to-day issued a requisition on the Governor of Virginia for the return to Welch, W. Va., of Samuel Williams, Attorney General-elect of Virginia, for trial at Welch on a charge of malicious assault.

Judge Williams was indicted some weeks ago by the Grand Jury of McDowell County as a result of a personal difficulty in a court room in which Joseph M. Sanders, former Justice of the Supreme Court, was struck by an ink well thrown by Judge Williams, who resented a remark made by Judge Sanders. Williams, at the time the indictment was returned, was the Democratic nominee for Attorney General of Virginia and was elected at that office on Nov. 2.

It was stated about that time that he would appear for trial at Welch, but since then it has been said that he would not voluntarily return there, inasmuch as he objected to the fact that negroes had on some occasions been allowed to serve on juries in McDowell.

Gov. Glasscock has had the application for the requisition under consideration for several days.

TRAIN KILLS AN AUTOIST.

Express Wrecks His Machine and He Is Hurled Into a Field.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Dec. 9.—William R. Wicks, in an automobile, was run down and mortally hurt to-day at Krugg's Corner on the Jericho Pike crossing of the Long Island Railroad by the Oyster Bay express. He is said to have been driving at the rate of sixty miles an hour. He died within a hour at the Nassau Hospital. His home was at 642 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn.

Wicks was going east on the turnpike, which crosses the track at right angles. A building somewhat obscures the track from the direction in which the train, due at Mineola at 11:36 A. M., was coming. No gates guard the crossing.

Wicks, it is understood, was testing a new machine and had it full of ballast. Hit by the locomotive the car was thrown clear across the tracks and into a field, a heap of wreckage.

Wicks was hurled 20 feet into the air and landed on his head. His skull was crushed. The telegraph operator at Mineola was notified to summon the Nassau Hospital ambulance, and the new electric conveyance rushed the injured man there, but the surgeons could do nothing for him.

MISS PAUL DESCRIBES FEEDING BY FORCE

American Suffragette in Holloway Jail Lay Abed During Whole of 30-Day Sentence.

REFUSED PRISON CLOTHES

Three Wardresses and Two Doctors Held Her While Food Was Injected Through Nostrils—Now Released.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Miss Alice Paul of Philadelphia, the suffragette who was arrested Nov. 9 and sentenced to a month's hard labor for her share in the suffragette demonstration at the Lord Mayor's banquet at the Guildhall, was released from Holloway Jail this morning on the completion of her thirty days. She left the prison in a cab, accompanied by two wardresses, and went to the home of friends. A doctor was immediately called to attend her there, owing to her weakened condition.

Although palpably ill, Miss Paul was cheerful, telling me she did not regret her conduct, and was prepared to repeat it again if necessary. She was unable to undergo the ordeal of an interview, but later she sent me a short statement by a friend.

Miss Paul said she was the granddaughter of a New Jersey Judge and a Master of Arts of the University of Pennsylvania. She had done a great deal of settlement work in the last four years, and came to London in September, 1908, to study economics. After saying that she was first struck by the contrast between the academic interest in woman's suffrage in America and the lively character of the movement here, Miss Paul told this story of her prison life:

"I practiced a hunger strike until Nov. 11. After that date they fed me twice a day by force, except on one day when I was too ill to be touched. I have no complaints against the Holloway officials. I spent the whole time in bed, because I refused to wear prison clothes. Each day I was wrapped in blankets and taken to another cell to be fed, the food being injected through my nostrils.

"During this operation the largest wardress in Holloway sat astride my knees, holding my shoulders down to keep me from bending forward. Two other wardresses sat on either side and held my arms. Then a towel was placed around my throat, and one doctor from behind forced my head back, while another doctor put a tube in my nostril. When it reached my throat my head was pushed forward.

"Twice the tube came through my mouth and I got it between my teeth. My mouth was then pried open with an instrument. Sometimes they tied me to a chair with sheets. Once I managed to get my hands loose and snatched the tube, tearing it with my teeth. I also broke a jug, but I didn't give in."

Miss Paul lives alone in London. Her friend told me with great gusto how Miss Paul had eluded the vigilance of the police at the Lord Mayor's banquet. It seems she and Miss Amelia Brown, her partner in the escapade, dressed as charwomen, went to the Guildhall at 9 o'clock in the morning. Every time they met any one they asked the way to the kitchen. They had many hairbreadth escapes, and once, seeing a policeman close at hand, they knelt down to escape notice. In the dark the policeman actually put his cape on them. Finally they succeeded in getting to the gallery overlooking the banqueting hall.

Miss Lucy Burns, the other American suffragette, is following Winston Churchill around the country making it as warm as possible for the President of the Board of Trade.

At Albert Hall to-night, where a vast crowd of Suffragettes gathered to welcome Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, just back from her campaign in the United States, the "hunger strikers" received medals. At this meeting also the Suffragette orators announced that they would do everything in their power to defeat the Liberal Party. A collection for the election fund realized nearly $10,000 then and there, two New York women contributing $150.

HAS CLUE TO KIDNAPPERS.

Missing Louisville Child's Mother Says She Will Meet Their Agents.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 9.—Light on the disappearance yesterday morning of Alma Katherine Kellner, the eight-year-old daughter of Frederick Kellner, a wealthy brewer here, was furnished this afternoon when Mrs. Kellner declared that Kate Martin, a negro woman who had been a servant in the family, met on the street this afternoon two people who said that they knew where Alma was. One was a man, she said, but both were dressed in women's clothing. They told her where Mrs. Kellner could meet them and the mother says she will go to the appointed place at the time set to-morrow morning, but refuses to tell where or when.

Except for these mysterious persons only two people here have seen the child since she left her home early yesterday and started for 9 o'clock mass. Father Schumann, pastor of St. John's Church, says she did not come to church, though Alma was seen by Druggist W. B. C. Young as she passed his store, and a few minutes later Postal Carrier William Augustus also saw her, and spoke to her.

George Schaad, a barber, however, says that he saw two women take a child resembling the missing girl, and put her into a wagon in front of his shop shortly before noon yesterday. He says the little girl was crying, "I don't want to go; please let me go home."

The police in every city in the Middle West have been notified to be on the watch for the child.

Three Venturesome Ones Out for a Tramp Warmly Welcomed at Pocantico Hills.

THEY WATCH HIM PLAY GOLF

"Delighted to Have You," He Says; "It's a Fine Game, and We're All Ahead"—Waves Good-bye.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTSDALE, N. Y., Dec. 9.—Three young women from New York who arrived at the Caroline Country Club here last night for a week's stay had an encounter with John D. Rockefeller on the grounds of his Pocantico Hills estate to-day as a result of which they declare that the stories of detectives guarding the grounds from which visitors are warned almost before they set foot on the property, are misleading and untrue. The three, hatless and clad in walking costumes, went to Pocantico Hills this morning and entered the Rockefeller grounds.

They tramped for more than fifteen minutes before encountering any one, and then met a gardener, who waved his hand toward the big house and replied to their question that they might walk there unmolested if they wished. The young women mounted the terrace and were admiring its beauty when they turned a corner of the house and saw, a short distance away, Mr. Rockefeller, Father Lannon, a neighbor and old friend, and four other men playing golf over Mr. Rockefeller's private course. With a wave of his hand Mr. Rockefeller invited the astonished girls to come forward.

"Ladies, we would be delighted to have you watch our game of golf!" he called out, but until a gardener near by nodded and exclaimed at their hesitation, "He means it," they thought his words a gentle hint to go away. As the girls approached the party Mr. Rockefeller exclaimed:

"We are going down the east slope now. You're very welcome, indeed, to accompany us."

The young women followed, one of them presently remarking upon the beauty of the grounds.

"Yes, they are pretty," replied Mr. Rockefeller. "I've only been here five days. Father Lannon tells me they were far more beautiful in September."

Mr. Rockefeller stopped to swing with all his strength at a golf ball, and then continued as the young women held back somewhat embarrassed: "Won't you come around with us? It is pleasanter on this side of the links. We are very grateful for the sun here. It is much colder on the river side."

The sight of the uncovered heads of the girls caused him a moment later to inquire: "You didn't come up from the city, did you?"

The young women explained that they were merely out for a tramp, and one of them added: "We were told that we wouldn't get far in your grounds."

Mr. Rockefeller and the rest of his party laughed heartily at this, and when the girls said that instead of following the game they would take a walk he suggested that they try Butternut Hill, declaring:

"That's a fine walk. You couldn't do better unless you come with us."

But the girls decided that it was time to go back, and so, after leaving the golf players, set out for the front gate to go to Tarrytown. As they were leaving the estate Mr. Rockefeller and his companions hove in sight again, playing another hole.

"So you backed out of your walk, did you!" laughed Mr. Rockefeller, as he caught sight of them. The young women stopped to thank him again for his courtesy and one of them asked how the game was going.

"Fine," replied he. "We're all ahead."

Mr. Rockefeller was dressed in a reefer coat, gloves, goloshes, and a big Scotch cap pulled tightly down on his head. As the young women left the grounds he waved adieu and then continued his game of golf.

CAR RUNS DOWN AGED WOMAN.

Mrs. Comstock Seriously Injured on the Way to Buy Christmas Gifts.

Crossing Third Avenue at Twenty-seventh Street yesterday to purchase Christmas presents for children who attended the missionary schools in which she is interested, Mrs. Ellen Comstock, 72 years old, of 124 East Twenty-seventh Street, was struck by a south-bound car. The aged woman was thrown with great force against an elevated pillar, receiving a fractured left leg, a bad scalp wound, and contusions about the body. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where her condition was said to be serious.

Before the ambulance arrived, Mrs. Comstock was revived, and when Policeman Huth of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station asked her if she wanted to make a complaint against the motorman, she weekly replied:

"No, I don't think he was to blame. I don't want to cause him any trouble."

Immediately after the accident, her daughter, Dr. Elizabeth Comstock, and her brother, former Brigadier General C. B. Comstock of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, went to the hospital, and Dr. Comstock did what she could for her injured mother.

For several years Mrs. Comstock has lived at the address in East Twenty-seventh, and has been connected with church and missionary work in the neighborhood. All of the children knew her, and seldom when she went out in the street did she walk alone, for there was always a boy or girl at her side.

ZELAYA MAY RETIRE WITHIN THREE WEEKS

Authoritative Statement in Managua That He Will Do So—Fears Our Next Move.

HIS TROOPS MAY DESERT

One General Seeks a Conference—Estradist Forces Are in a Strong Position Near Rama.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 9.—It is authoritatively stated here that President Zelaya will surrender his office within three weeks. The intentions of the United States are giving the Nicaraguan Government considerable anxiety, and the Administration is puzzled as to what to do because of the uncertainty of the American Government's next move.

There are no military preparations discernible here, and at Corinto all is quiet. The Captain of the United States gunboat Vicksburg, which is now at Corinto, has received no instructions from Washington.

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, by Wireless Telegraph, via Colon, Dec. 9.—Advices received here from Rama state that Gen. Vasquez, in command of a division of Zelaya's forces, yesterday proposed a conference to Gen. Estrada, the leader of the revolutionists. The latter sent Gen. Fornos Diaz to confer with Gen. Vasquez, but the result of the meeting has not yet been ascertained. It is believed that Gen. Vasquez is seeking an advantageous surrender.

Should there be a battle at Rama between the forces of Gen. Estrada and of President Zelaya, under command of Gen. Oseja, Estrada's position at Rama is thought impregnable. He has sent detachments into the mountains west of Rama which have repeatedly met the Government troops in small skirmishes. Always the provisionals retreated toward Rama, laying waste the country as they retired and leaving Oseja nothing with which to feed his men. It was not Estrada's policy to contest the roads to Rama, but to bring on a general engagement at that point. With Managua 150 miles away and the country between a waste, he calculated that Oseja would be compelled to risk an attack or to starve.

His plans seemed to work well. Oseja's forces, half starved, footsore, and sick from the terrible tramp over the mountains, are converging in front of Rama. Estrada, confident, assured, awaits the attacks behind his fortifications. At Bluefields 1,000 reinforcements await his call, the trip by the Rama River requiring but seven hours.

Whether Oseja has been strengthened by men from Managua is not known definitely. Spies have brought word to the opposing army that Zelaya is afraid to risk more men, fearing that they will desert to Estrada. He has soldiers and equipment in abundance at Managua, but it is said that he does not trust his Generals. Oseja, it is said, is an exception. His men, as a reward of victory, are to have all the loot that they can collect in two days at Rama.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The United States Government has demanded formally the resignation of President Zelaya of Nicaragua, according to a cablegram from Nicaragua received by a business house here to-day. The message adds that this information was communicated by Zelaya himself, who said that his resignation from the Presidency would take effect likely at the end of December.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The State Department this afternoon emphatically denied that any demand had been made by this Government for the removal of President Zelaya from the control of the Government of Nicaragua. It is known, however, that the department has received many cablegrams purporting to reveal Zelaya's plan to put the present burden of the Government on the shoulders of one of his trusted followers with the idea of resuming control when the difficulty with this country has blown over.

The cruiser Tacoma is reported to be returning to Port Limon from Cristobal, though the particular significance of her cruise down the Nicaraguan coast has not yet been revealed. From New Orleans it is reported that the Vicksburg has been joined at Corinto by three other vessels, and that the Vicksburg herself will probably return to Colon for coal. The Des Moines arrived at Bluefields this morning.

FREEZES ON BURNING BOAT.

One Man Killed by Cold, Another Is Drowned, and 13 Are Missing.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 9.—Two men lost their lives by the burning of the steamer Clarion, near Point Peelee, in Lake Erie early to-day. The fate of thirteen other men is unknown.

Six members of the crew were taken from the Clarion by the steamer L. C. Hanna and brought here. Without stopping long enough to tell a connected story of their rescue or their experiences they were rushed to a train and sent to Buffalo, to the headquarters of the Anchor Line Company, the owner of the Clarion.

According to the hurried tale of the six sailors here, all attempted to leave the Clarion as soon as it was ascertained that she could not be saved. Capt. E. J. Bell of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and twelve other members of the crew took to the lifeboat. They left without food and shelter. It is feared that they may either starve or freeze to death before rescued, if not drown as a result of the high seas running on the lake, owing to the recent storm.

The mate was frozen to death, having been overcome by smoke and exposed to the weather before being discovered. One sailor fell overboard and was drowned.

The six men left on the boat after the departure of the life boat crowded toward the stern against the wind, keeping as far from the fire as possible. The flames were near them when the Hanna arrived. Only a few feet of the steamer was left above water when they were taken off.

The Clarion was a 1,700-ton steel boat. She was bound from Detroit to Erie, Pa., to lay up when the fire started.

A Russian photographer had prepared to make moving pictures of the meeting of Prince Ito and Minister Kokovstoff and caught the assassination scene. Japanese officials obtained a film 500 feet long, showing every detail of the tragedy. This will be exhibited at the trial.

ASKS $24,500,000 FROM FINNS.

Demanded as Their Share of Cost of Russo-Japanese War.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 9.—Major Gen. Borotkin, representing the War Office in the Russo-Finnish Commission, has submitted a demand that Finland pay her proportional share of the expenses of the Russo-Japanese war. These amounted approximately to $1,500,000,000, and Finland's share is estimated at $24,500,000.

This proposal has caused great excitement in Finnish circles.

LONG CROSS-COUNTRY FLIGHT

Farman's Brother Goes 42 Miles in 54 Minutes—On Way to Bordeaux.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Maurice Farman, a brother of Henry Farman, to-day made what he declares is a new distance record in cross-country aeroplane flying. Starting from Buc, near Versailles, at 2:52 o'clock and traveling by way of Trappes and Rambouillet, he arrived at Chartres at 3:45 o'clock, having covered the distance of forty-two miles in fifty-four minutes at an average height of eighty yards. There was scarcely any wind, but the weather was slightly hazy.

This flight is regarded as the first stage of a proposed journey by the aerial route to Bordeaux. Mr. Farman expects to-morrow, the weather permitting, to fly from Chartres to Tours, going on the next day to Orleans, then to Poitiers, thence to Angouleme, and so to the final destination. The aeroplane used by Maurice Farman is a new model, described as a cross between the Voisin and Farman types, and is fitted with a Reynolds air-cooled motor.

PASTOR SCUDDER RESIGNS.

Jersey City's Militant Clergyman to Retire on Account of Deafness.

The Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Bergen Avenue, Jersey City, handed in his resignation yesterday at a church meeting, to take effect on July 1, 1910. Failure of his hearing causes him to retire. Efforts to induce him to change his mind were fruitless.

Dr. Scudder has been the head of the First Congregational Church for a quarter of a century, and built the present church. Prior to the building of this church he held services in a church at Henderson and York Streets, known as the Tabernacle, and now occupied as a clubhouse by the Jersey Lodge of Elks.

The "fighting parson," as he was frequently called, has waged many wars for reforms and was usually successful. He built the People's Palace, in Bergen Avenue, where the young folks of the Heights section have a clubhouse and gymnasium. He is President of that institution.

Dr. Scudder frequently lectured on the manly art, and was one of the first ministers in New Jersey to have boxing taught to the boys of his congregation. He was clever with the gloves himself, getting his skill in private bouts with local pugilists.

GIVES PARTY; GOES TO DEATH.

Woman Entertains Friends, Then Submits to Fatal Operation.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 9.—Determined that none of her social obligations should remain unpaid at her death, Mrs. Alma Dodson, a social leader and the only woman lawyer in this county, invited all her friends to a farewell card party and reception immediately after being informed by her physician, that she must submit to an operation that would probably prove fatal.

The party was held the day before the operation was performed. Smiling and cheerful, Mrs. Dodson was an admirable hostess. When the party was over and she had bade her guests good bye, Mrs. Dodson calmly arranged her personal effects and picked out the clothing in which she wished to be attired after death. She then went to the hospital and the operation which was performed there caused her death.

The funeral which was held to-day was attended by the members of the Springfield Bar Association.

LIFE SAVERS RESCUE EIGHT.

Two Motorboat Parties Nearly Frozen to Death in Great South Bay.

Capt. Doxsee and the crew of the Fire Island Life Saving Station saved eight persons from freezing late Thursday night on the Great South Bay.

John Woodward, with four friends, returning to Fire Island from Bay Shore in his motor boat, was blown into sea grass, where his engine stopped. The boat drifted hard aground, and he was unable to push her off.

Their predicament was discovered at sunset, and J. Dougherty, J. Scanlin, and H. McCann went out with another motor boat to their assistance. Night came on before they could find the stranded boat. When they finally got within speaking distance the rescuing boat also went aground.

All hands were doing their best to keep from freezing to death, when about 10 P. M. Capt. Doxsee discovered the boats, and went to their rescue.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 9.—Two carloads of steers sold at the Kansas City Stock Yards to-day at $10.50 a hundred pounds.

DANES TO WEIGH LOOSE'S CHARGE

COOK IS NOT YET LOCATED

Most of His Supporters Are Silent—Loose and Dunkle Challenge Him to Face Them.

The Danish scientists who are preparing to examine Dr. Cook's records accepted yesterday the offer of THE NEW YORK TIMES to submit to the committee the affidavits in which Capt. August W. Loose and George H. Dunkle swore that Capt. Loose had prepared fraudulent observations for Dr. Cook's use. At the same time Danish astronomers and other scientists, basing their ideas on the cabled summaries, expressed the opinion that the charges were false.

The committee of the National Geographic Society at Washington appointed to report on Dr. Cook's claims arranged to examine the false observations prepared by Capt. Loose to-morrow. If the committee considers the proof conclusive, Commander Peary will probably be recognized at the society's banquet next Wednesday as the real discoverer of the pole.

The whereabouts of Dr. Cook remains a mystery. Dr. Pitt maintains that he is at Wells, Me., but there is no confirmatory evidence. Rumors that Cook was in Philadelphia, Copenhagen, and Brooklyn cropped out yesterday.

The one news topic in this city yesterday was the Loose-Dunkle revelations. Experienced navigators agreed that Capt. Loose's story contained its own inherent corroboration. Prof. Parker said that what the Captain had revealed about Dr. Cook's lack of ability to take a scientific observation and evident shortage of polar observations in particular exactly agreed with what he had observed of Cook on the Mount McKinley expedition.

Wellington Wack, the explorer's counsel, was reported by the Associated Press to have withdrawn from Cook's affairs, disgusted by the explorer's silence. Wack would not comment on the revelations. J. R. Bradley, Dr. Cook's financial backer, left town and could not be reached. Charles Wake, the explorer's friend, was invisible, but Dunkle and Capt. Loose were very much in evidence with a challenge to Cook and his partisans to face Cook anywhere and let any competent tribunal judge whether they had told the truth or not.

But from Bushwick, Brooklyn, came a declaration from John A. Rogers, Chairman of the Cook Celebration Committee, in defense of the missing explorer. Cook, says Rogers, would not "dignify those affidavits with a reply. When the Danes in Greenland believed him and Copenhagen University had given him a degree and the New York Aldermen had given him the freedom of the city, who would believe Loose and Dunkle?

DANES DISCREDIT LOOSE.

Committee, However, Will Consider Affidavits Offered by Times.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 9.—A cabled synopsis of the statement by Capt. August Wedel Loose, as published in THE NEW YORK TIMES, telling how he prepared observations for Dr. Cook, was printed in the evening papers here as their principal feature. There is a disposition to regard it as an attempt to influence the committee of investigation, and Cook's partisans in the press vehemently denounce it as an American bluff.

This morning I notified Rector Salomonsen and Prof. Strömgren, President of the examining committee, that THE NEW YORK TIMES would place the affidavits at their disposal, and was assured that the documents would receive due consideration on their arrival. Prof. Stromgren declined to express any opinion of the value of Capt. Loose's statement. He said the committee would begin the examination of Cook's papers, which were lodged at the observatory to-day, probably at the beginning of next week, but undoubtedly would not conclude the examination before the date of arrival of the affidavits.

The Berlingske Tidende says that Capt. Loose is doubtless identical with Wedel Loose of Brooklyn, from whom it received a letter a week ago offering arguments in favor of Cook.

The Danish astronomer Burrau says Loose's astronomy is fantastic, citing his reference to Capella. This star, he says, neither rises nor sets in the polar regions, but remains fixed above the horizon.

Copenhagen Is Amazed.

By The Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 9.—A summary of the affidavits of persons claiming to have aided Dr. Cook in the preparation of his polar data, and published in London and New York to-day, was read here with amazement. Scientific circles are inclined to be incredulous regarding the charges, and some persons, like Dr. Carl Burrau, the astronomer, consider them so improbable that their effect will be to strengthen confidence in Dr. Cook. In an interview Dr. Burrau said:

"Passages in the story telegraphed here give me the impression that the matter is thoroughly untrustworthy. Take, for instance, the statement about Capella. Capella neither rises nor sets in the polar regions, but remains fixed over the horizon. In order to make observations at the north pole a more extended and a more detailed knowledge is necessary than is enjoyed usually by the average ship's Captain.

"It will, however, be easy for the university to determine the truth or otherwise of the charges."

Dr. Torp, rector of the University of Copenhagen, said to-night that the charges published in THE NEW YORK TIMES against Dr. Cook are based on pure fiction. Nevertheless, he added, he would accept the offer to examine the documents prepared by Loose and Dunkle, which THE TIMES has agreed to send to Copenhagen.

Hovgaard and Olafsen Agree.

Commodore Hovgaard, the noted explorer, and Prof. Olafsen, Secretary of the Danish Geographical Society, also discredit the accusations against Dr. Cook.

The National Tidende in an editorial says: "It is natural that calumnies should increase when Dr. Cook's papers are on the eve of examination, the object of his accusers being to influence the committee."

Walter Lounsdale, Secretary to Dr. Cook, who brought the explorer's records to Copenhagen, also declared that the accusations published in New York and London against Dr. Cook were totally unfounded. He said that the papers delivered to the University of Copenhagen contained the original observations made by Dr. Cook during the expedition without alterations.

Mr. Lounsdale stated further that the explorer's report was founded on these, and dictated by Dr. Cook to him, no other person having anything to do with it. Loose and Dunkle, Mr. Lounsdale added, were guests at the Waldorf-Astoria during Dr. Cook's stay there, but the explorer's acquaintance with them was slight.

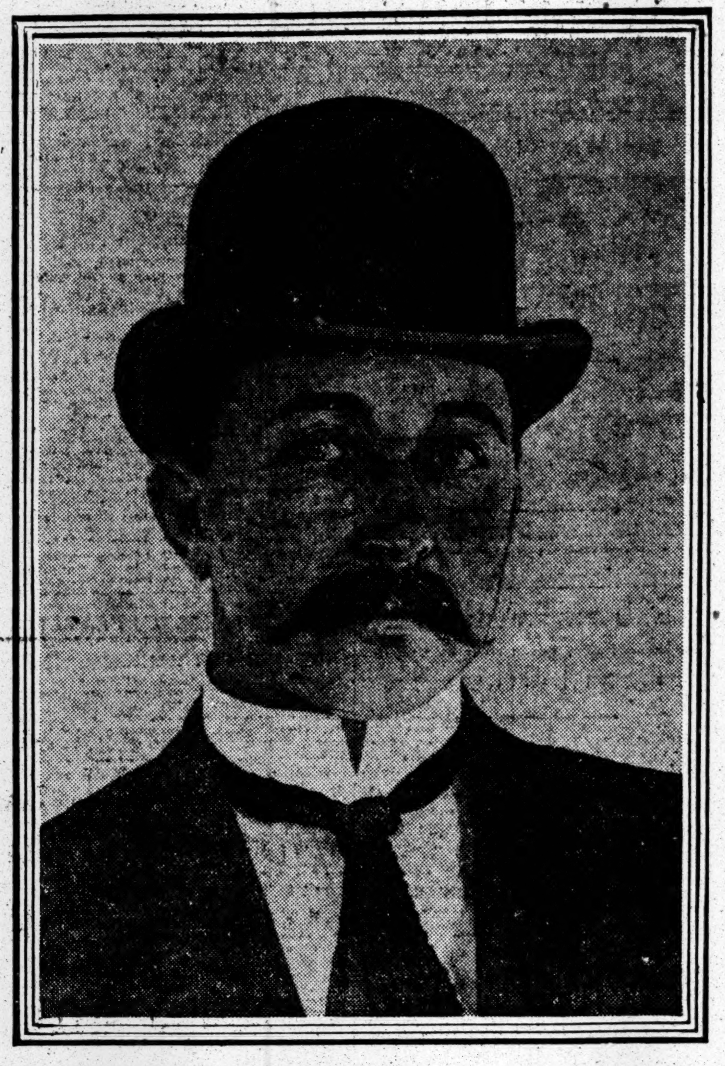
The committee which will examine Dr. Cook's records is composed of the following: President, Prof. Elis Stromgren, Director of the Astronomical Observatory; Dr. C. F. Pechule, astronomer attached to the observatory; Gustav Holm, explorer; Prof. A. B. Yensen, President of the School of Navigation; Dr. Royder, Director of the Meteorological Office, and Dr. F. A. Engstrom, Director of the Lund Observatory.

Article Outlined by Cook.

Capt. August W. Loose, when seen at his home, 437 Thirteenth Street, Brooklyn, last night, verified the statement mode by the Berlingske Tidende of Copenhagen that he had sent it an article favorable to Dr. Cook's claims, and added that he had done so at Cook's instance, while he was in the explorer's employ.

CAPTAIN AUGUST WEDEL LOOSE

Who Manufactured Polar Observations to Fit Dr. Frederick A. Cook's Story.



Copyright, 1909, by Paul Thompson.

"Of course I am the Wedel Loose of Brooklyn that wrote to the Berlingske Tidende," he said, fishing among his documents and producing a thousand-word article written in copper plate Norwegian script. "I sent five copies of this to as many European editors, with a note asking that they publish it and send me the issue of their paper. They were the Berlingske Tidende and the National Tidende, both published in Copenhagen; the Bergens Tidende, published in Bergen, Norway, and the Dagbladet and Morgenbladet, which are the principal journals of Christiania."

"But what was it all about?" he was asked.

"Just a plea for fair play in the Cook controversy. I told how I was greeted with doubt when I crossed the ocean in a small boat and how people declared that it had been carried over in a big vessel until I proved my claim by showing them the barnacles on the bottom of my boat. But, he added with a laugh. "I must admit that I never found any barnacles on the bottom of Dr. Cook's boat."

"It must have been more than three weeks ago that I mailed the five copies of the articles all on the same day. I haven't heard from any of the papers yet, but there has hardly been time."

"And why did you write them at all, Captain?"

"Why," he cried, as though surprised at such a question, "I was working for Cook then. It was at his suggestion that I wrote them to help create a favorable public opinion over there in his behalf. He told me just what to say, too."

"And doesn't the news that The Berlingske Tidende got the article prove once for all that my husband was working for the Doctor at that time?" chimed in Mrs. Loose.

Didn't Say Capella Rose.

Capt. Loose was puzzled and amused over the doubt cast on his story by Dr. Burrau, on the ground that the star Capella never rises or sets in the polar regions.

"He either read my story as published in THE TIMES very hastily, or he has seen only a fragmentary version of it," he declared. "Of course, Capella neither rises nor sets there. I never said it did. In fact I said quite the contrary, in words that would be perfectly plain to any scientist.

"All stars whose declinations are greater than the complement of the latitude do not go below the horizon," he explained. "Capella's declination is greater than the complement of the latitude of Anoratok. Therefore, it is a circumpolar star, and a circumpolar star never rises or sets.

"Why," he continued in growing indignation at the reflection cast on his scientific knowledge, "the very fact that I saw it true north and true west, and explained that I would have seen it true south had it not been for the mountains, would show to any one at all familiar with astronomy that I was talking about a star that stays above the horizon. Capella is above the horizon all the year round at Anoratok, and would be visible if nothing obstructed the view."

Just what Capt. Loose did say about Capella is shown by the following extract from his statement in yesterday's TIMES:

> I determined that Capella, which is a fine star for observation purposes, would be visible from Anoratok. After some little calculation I determined that Capella would be visible in the southern horizon, but on reference to a volume of "The Arctic Pilot," giving descriptions of the shores of Smith Sound, I found that there was mention of a high stretch of cliffs to the southward of Anoratok, and rising abruptly from the beach.
>
> Star's Elevation Low.
> The elevation of Capella above the southern horizon was so low that I was afraid an investigation would show that it could not be seen frm Dr. Cook's igloo. Consequently I calculated the time when Capella would appear in the northern horizon, so that it could be seen out over the ice, as there could be no question of the cliffs interfering with the observation in that direction. I also calculated Capella in the western horizon for a longitude sight, and, assuming the longitude of the point which Dr. Cook had placed on the chart as Anoratok to be correct, this longitude sight enabled me to give him a start for his chronometer time and his difference from Greenwich mean time.

The error seems to have arisen in the reduction of words in Capt. Loose's narrative for cable transmission abroad. The correspondent here who forwarded it evidently left out the pronoun "he" in the statement that "Loose warned Cook that his narrative must say he rose at 4 o'clock in the morning, otherwise the star would be invisible, and the observation would be incorrect," and the editor who filled in the skeleton cable evidently assumed that what was intended to be conveyed was that Loose warned Cook that his narrative must say that the star rose at 4 o'clock in the morning, and filled it in that way.

Dr. Burrau has apparently been misled as to Capt. Loose's qualifications for making and calculating astronomical observations by this error, as his knowledge and experience in that direction are far beyond those of "the average ship's Captain," as certified to by Lewis Nixon, the shipbuilder.

LOOSE KNEW HIS BUSINESS.

An Able Navigator Who Could Easily Fill Dr. Cook's Needs, Skippers Say.

The officers of the Atlantic liners in port yesterday were particularly interested in Capt. Loose's story in yesterday's TIMES in regard to the manner in which he made bogus records for Dr. Cook. They expressed no surprise over the discovery, because, from the first, seafaring men, both in the navy and in the mercantile marine, had been skeptical about Dr. Cook having reached the north pole, though they had all expressed their belief in Commander Peary's exploit. While the skippers and navigating officers interviewed yesterday by a TIMES reporter did not express any enthusiasm over the conduct of Capt. Loose in agreeing to "fake" observations to support Cook's story of his trip to the north pole, they all agree, after reading his story in THE TIMES, that he had worked out the records correctly and was evidently a skillful navigator.

The general opinion was voiced by Chief Officer Simpson of the Cunard liner Carmania and Chief Officer Tibbetts of the Royal Mail steam packet Orotava, who, after examining the set of specimen observations at the assumed pole by Capt. Loose, found them correct, and remarked it was easy for an experienced navigator to work himself from New York to any part of the globe he wished. All that was necessary would be to imagine himself to be in such a place, and then work backward instead of forward, as he would do on an ordinary ocean steamship. The observations could be taken of the sun by Capella or any of the planets or stars or of the moon.

Capt. Loose argued that the fact that Dr. Cook had no chronometer time coupled with his general lack of knowledge regarding navigation made it practically impossible for him to have traveled to the pole as he asserted. Without proper observations, they all agreed, Dr. Cook would have been lost and could never have found his way back, even if he had got to the north pole by accident.

Capt. Roberts, Marine Superintendent of the Cunard Line, said it was quite feasible to work out the sights as Capt. Loose had done. "Fudging" sights, as it is known aboard ship, is frequently practised at sea on the big liners. When a steamship makes a big run and the Captain expects fog or bad weather the next day, he may say to the chief officer:

"Make it 550 instead of 600, so that we have a few miles up our sleeve."

This means that the chief officer has then to work backward and "fake" the latitude and longitude of the ship's position at noon, fifty miles astern of the spot where she really is.

CHICAGO ALSO BELIEVES.

Story in the Affidavits Perfectly Plausible, Says Prof. Moulton.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Absolute confidence is placed in the stories told by G. H. Dunkle and Capt. Loose as printed to-day in The Chicago Tribune by arrangement with THE NEW YORK TIMES, by Prof. Forrest S. Moulton, Professor of Astronomy in the University of Chicago. He declared that the "faking" of records for Dr. Cook was easy for one conversant with astronomy.

"Some may criticise the men for their methods," he said. "They may say 'frame up' with perfect justification. Yet, after all, if their story proves to be true, does not Cook deserve the public condemnation for lying in the first place, and should not Dunkle and Capt. Loose be given credit for exposing such a fraud.

"It always has been a mystery to me why Dr. Cook refused to give out his data, saying he had to get it into shape. There was no excuse for this, especially his reluctance at hurrying up until he finished his lecture tour, which made him financially independent. It looks as if he did not have anything to offer in the first place.

Prof. Thomas C. Chamberlain, head of the Department of Geology, who discredited Dr. Cook from the first day he announced his discovery, declined to make a statement though admitting he has strong convictions on the case. His excuse was that he has finished with the controversy.

Elias Colbert, a veteran astronomer, once connected with the old Chicago University, said: "From the first I thought Cook was faking, but, while always considering him a fool, I did not think he was infernal fool enough to do what Dunkle and Loose say he did. It is simple to fake the records as Loose says he did, and I shall await with eagerness the result of the Copenhagen investigation."

EXPERTS TO EXAMINE LOOSE'S POLAR DATA

Times Grants Request Made by Committee of the National Geographic Society.

MAY DISPOSE OF DR. COOK

If So, Peary Will Probably Be Definitely Recognized at Banquet Next Wednesday as First Man at Pole.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—As a result of the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES of the statements of George H. Dunkle and Capt. August W. Loose that the observations Dr. Cook alleges he made on his dash to the north pole were figured out in New York there is a strong probability that the National Geographic Society, which has a committee at work investigating Dr. Cook's claims, will take action before the middle of next week to decide whether or not Commander Peary is the first and only discoverer of the pole.

This is indicated in statements made to-day by prominent officials of the society, and in the action it has taken. On Wednesday night of next week will be held the annual banquet, which will be attended by Commander Peary. A special medal will then be presented to him, but what will be the wording of the inscription on it depends on the verdict of the committee now engaged in the inquiry into Dr. Cook's claims to the discovery of the pole. The feeling now is that the committee may report on the Brooklyn explorer in time to have the medal presented on Wednesday night with the inscription "Commander Peary, Discoverer of the North Pole."

Following out the idea that such a report within that time is possible a telegram was sent this morning by the Geographic Society to Prof. J. H. Gore, Chairman of the committee, who is now in Virginia, asking him to come back to Washington at once. Soon afterward another telegram was dispatched to the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES containing the following request:

> Will you grant to a committee of the National Geographic Society, composed of Prof. Gore, Admiral Pillsbury, and Dr. Hayes, permission to examine the evidence you have with regard to Cook's case next Saturday?

Indicates Moore's Attitude.

This telegram was signed by Prof. Willis L. Moore, Chief of the United States Weather Bureau, and President of the National Geographic Society. He authorized its publication, with this remark:

"I think it would be unwise for me to make further comment now on the disclosures in THE NEW YORK TIMES, but I think this telegram will indicate my attitude in the matter."

In reply to his telegram to the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, Prof. Moore received the following:

> Will take great pleasure in having Prof. Gore, Admiral Pillsbury, and Dr. Hayes, committee of the National Geographic Society, examine the Cook evidence at the office of THE NEW YORK TIMES on Saturday next.

While the investigating committee has made no announcement, statements made by members of the society point to a vote before the banquet next Wednesday. This decision, if rendered, will not leave much to inference. The resolution under which the committee was appointed—when the personnel was changed from that of the body which examined and reported favorably on the records of Commander Peary—empowered the committee to make investigations and examine records and witnesses to find "if any one discovered the pole prior to Peary."

Gannett Awaits Report.

Whatever action is taken by the Geographic Society will be set in motion by Dr. Gannett as Chairman of the Research Committee, which has charge of all technical investigations. This is the parent body of the committee which examined Peary's records, and of the committee of three which is now looking into Cook's claims. When asked what he thought the National Geographic Society would do about the statements of Dunkle and Loose, Dr. Gannett said:

"I am not prepared to forecast the action of the society, but if the committee now at work announces that it has a report to make, I will at once call a meeting of the Research Committee, which will hear it and in turn pass it on to a meeting of the Board of Governors.

"Personally, I consider the revelations in THE NEW YORK TIMES conclusive. I have felt for a long time that Cook never reached the pole, but these latest developments settle any doubts I might have had. Has anything been heard from Cook? I think it is safe to say he is on the high seas somewhere, because if anything would bring him out, these charges certainly would. The only explanation I can imagine his making would be that his own records were stolen and copied to give Capt. Loose and Dunkle the figures they have. But such an excuse as that won't hold water for a minute."

Dr. Gannett reached into a drawer of his desk and fished out a cigar, which he held up to view. "This is the signal," he said, "of the surrender of one of the few men who have remained straddling the fence throughout the controversy—Dr. A. H. Brooks, of the Geological Survey, in charge of the work in Alaska. He came into my office this morning and finally decided against Cook and gave me this cigar to show he meant it."

Dr. Gannett added that he had direct and authoritative proof that the report that Cook had taken out a foreign money order for $15,000 was true.

Tittmann Suggests Comparison.

Dr. Otto H. Tittmann, a member of the Research Committee and of the Board of Governors of the National Geographic Society, expressed the opinion that no ultimate decision could be reached regarding the statements of Loose and Dunkle until the records sent over to Copenhagen by Dr. Cook were compared with the figures the two men claim they furnished to him. Dr. Tittmann said:

"If, when the records are opened in Copenhagen, the observations are found to agree with those prepared by Capt. Loose, to which he has made affidavit, then the matter will be beyond argument; and it will be evident that Dr. Cook has been imposing on the public's credulity."

Gilbert H. Grosvenor, editor of the magazine published by the National Geographic Society, said:

"This simply illustrates once more how important it was to have the records of Dr. Cook examined in the United States in the first instance. Such an investigation would have afforded an opportunity to determine long ago how much credence should be given to his figures. I believed two months ago that Cook did not reach the pole, but now I realize how incomplete were his records.

Limit of Credulity Passed.

"The National Geographic Society has received a number of complaints of what is termed its slowness in coming to a decision between Peary and Cook. We have simply been trying to give as fair consideration as possible to Cook's claims. But now the limit of patience and credulity has been passed."

Rear Admiral Colby Mitchell Chester, retired, a member of the National Geographic Society and formerly Superintendent of the Naval Observatory, who has already publicly branded Dr. Cook as a fraud, would not discuss the exposé by Capt. Loose and Mr. Dunkle for publication. The Admiral will be one of the speaker's at the society's dinner next week, and it is considered likely that he will then bring his arraignment of Dr. Cook up to date.

It is pointed out here, however, that the story told to THE NEW YORK TIMES by Loose and Dunkle substantiates in a startling degree the points previously raised by Admiral Chester against the veracity of the Cook data. From the outset Admiral Chester has held that the observations of the explorer, aside from being in many cases intrinsically erroneous, were such that Dr. Cook could not possibly have taken them, both on account of the crude instruments he admits having with him and because of the low altitude of the sun, which made all solar observations impossible.

AMUNDSEN DIDN'T SEE COOK.

Sails Away Begging to be Excused from Discussing Revelations.

Capt. Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer who discovered the magnetic pole and was the first man to navigate the Northwest Passage, sailed for Norway on the Scandinavian-American liner Hellig Olav yesterday afternoon much averse to discussing the latest revelation regarding Dr. Cook. Capt. Amundsen had a copy of THE TIMES with him and said he would read the Loose-Dunkle revelations carefully on the voyage across the Atlantic.

"Don't you think this exposure about finishes Cook so far as his claim to have discovered the north pole is concerned?" a reporter asked him before he sailed.

"I have not read the article carefully yet," Capt. Amundsen answered, "and, besides, it's not my affair. Let the University of Copenhagen handle that question."

"When you landed several weeks ago, you said you expected to see Dr. Cook. Did you see him?" was asked.

"No, I did not," was the quick reply.

Then Capt. Amundsen begged to be excused from answering further questions.

REMEMBER CHART PURCHASES.

John L. Bliss & Co. Say They Have a Memorandum Confirming It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement contained in your article of to-day's date to the effect that August W. Loose and George H. Dunkle purchased from us certain charts and books is absolutely true. We are personally acquainted with August W. Loose. We are not acquainted with George H. Dunkle, but would probably recognize him if we saw him.

The British Admiralty charts mentioned in your article were purchased from us on Nov. 16. The numbers are 274, 260, and 275. The sale was a cash sale, and $5.10 is entered on our cash book on that date.

The sale of these charts is of very rare occurrence. In accordance with our practice, we immediately entered these numbers on a memorandum card, which we keep for the purpose to re-order from the British Admiralty Office in London. This card shows that charts 274, 260, and 275 were ordered by us from the B. A. Office in London on Nov. 19, to replace the charts purchased as above. We would also state that we were in absolute ignorance of the purpose for which these charts were purchased.

COOK'S BROTHER SILENT.

Intimates That the Doctor Is Still Here, But Won't Tell Where.

William L. Cook, the Brooklyn dairyman, and brother of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, declined last night to discuss THE TIMES's story of the preparation of Dr. Cook's records. As to the whereabouts of his brother, he was evasive, declaring that, although he knew where Dr. Cook was, he was not at liberty to tell at present. He intimated, however, that Dr. Cook was resting quietly in New York.

COOK'S CLAIM BURIED

And Nothing More to be Said, Is Prof. Pickering's Comment.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—"I don't see that there is anything to be said," was the reply of Prof. W. H. Pickering of Harvard, when he had read THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day. "If those affidavits are honest—and it seems that they are—the matter of the discovery of the north pole is settled."

In further conversation the professor said it looked to him as though the Cook claim was buried and the sod heaped on its grave.

Date of Capt. Loose's Affidavit.

A typographical error in yesterday's TIMES made it appear that the affidavit in which Capt. August W. Loose swore to the truth of his statement concerning the manufacture of bogus observations for Dr. Cook was made before A. A. Greenhoot, Notary Public in Kings County, on Nov. 7 this year. It should have read Dec. 7, two days ago.

There is Satisfaction in Giving a Piano That Everyone Can Play

The piano has always been a favorite gift. The possibilities it represents for musical enjoyment are so great that it appeals strongly to the imagination. In a majority of cases where a piano of ordinary type is given, it proves an incomplete and unsatisfactory gift. The giver virtually says: "Here is a splendid musical instrument for those fortunate enough to be able to play it—I give it to you for what you can get from it, though I know that this will be little enough." How different it is if the gift is a

PIANOLA PIANO

Here is a piano which from the moment it is received will begin to furnish enjoyment. No knowledge of music is required to play the PIANOLA Piano. The instrument itself furnishes a perfect technique for all of the thousands of compositions in its repertory. The indispensable Metrostyle shows even the least musical performer, how to put just the little touches of retard and accelerando in the music that give it "feeling," while the Themodist, Graduated Accompaniment, etc., add the finish that makes the playing of the PIANOLA equal to that of skilled pianists.

In every country of the world the PIANOLA Piano will be bought and given as a Christmas gift this year. It is the only piano manufactured of which this is true. Does not such universal popularity suggest how welcome a Christmas gift the PIANOLA Piano would prove to your family?

CAUTION:—All PIANOLA Pianos have the word "PIANOLA" plainly marked on them. They are on sale in Manhattan only at Aeolian Hall. There are many imitations of the PIANOLA Piano. Not one of these, however, approaches the PIANOLA Piano either in the scientific perfection of construction, or in special features of vital importance like the Metrostyle and Themodist.

COOK STILL ELUDES ALL DISCOVERERS

Cannot Be Found at Maine Sanitarium, Although Dr. Pitt Reiterates That He Is There.

REPORTED IN MANY PLACES

Located by Independent Observations at Philadelphia, Copenhagen, Brooklyn, and White Plains.

Dr. Cook was seen in Brooklyn, he was recovering from a nervous breakdown at a remote sanitarium in Maine, he was in Copenhagen, he was in Philadelphia, and it was even rumored that after all he was at Muldoon's, near White Plains, all at the same time yesterday.. Never in the history of arctic, antarctic, Tibetan, or even mid-African exploration has an explorer made such a puzzling escape from friend and critic alike as the Bushwick Avenue doctor appears to have done.

It would take a small book to tell all the places that the doctor is reported to have been in, or at, or near, during the few weeks that have elapsed since he left Gramatan Inn, Bronxville, for some place or other, of which it now appears that not even Admiral Osbon, H. Wellington Wack, Charles Wake, or John R. Bradley knows the latitude and longitude.

"He has so completely disappeared that we can't find him even with an artificial horizon," one of the doctor's most ardent admirers said yesterday.

Investigation at Wells, Me., where Dr. Cook was reported yesterday morning to be recuperating in a sanitarium, indicated that he was not and never had been there. On the other hand, Dr. T. S. Pitt, Superintendent of the sanitarium, who was in Boston yesterday, reiterated that the explorer was at his institution.

The Evening Post must receive the honor of discovering the Brooklyn explorer nearest home. The discovery, as related in The Post, follows:

> It was said on good authority this afternoon that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the hidden explorer, had been seen with Mrs. Cook on Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday. They had gone to look at furniture in storage.
>
> A representative of the storage company declined to talk about the arctic traveler's visit.

In Copenhagen, Telegram Says.

While The Post wins the honor of the nearest-home discovery, The Evening Telegram gets the furthest-away-from-home record. This excerpt from The Telegram tells its own story:

> Following receipt of word from Copenhagen in regard to the speedy scrutinizing of Dr. Cook's data regarding his discovery of the north pole, there developed to-day the existence of a strong belief among his intimate friends in this city that the explorer himself, not Walter Lounsdale, his secretary, carried the records to Copenhagen. It was declared to-day by several of these friends that Dr. Cook left for Europe late in November with the intention of personally delivering the papers on which he bases his claims to the university authorities, to whom, in recognition of their courtesy and credence, he promised precedence in examination of his polar data.
>
> These friends to-day declare their belief that the explorer is within easy reach of the Danish scientists.

The Evening Sun had this to say:

> Capt. Osbon's opinion of why Dr. Cook departed for some retreat intimately concerns such friends as Wake and Wack.
>
> "Dr. Cook got so tired," he said, "that he found his mind just couldn't estimate and size up the many opinions his friends were handing to him every hour. So he just said to himself 'I'll go where I have no friends. I'll get away from Wake and Wack and Osbon and all of them and I'll get some rest.'
>
> "Now Mrs. Cook had spent several Summers in Maine, and she knew just where to take the doctor. That's why he's there."

Turns Up in Philadelphia.

The finding of Dr. Cook in Philadelphia must be credited to The Evening Mail. This is what it said:

> Dr. Cook is in a private sanitarium in Philadelphia. This was learned positively by The Evening Mail to-day.
>
> It was also learned beyond possibility of doubt that he is under an assumed name, and that the authorities of the institution had sworn themselves to secrecy as to his whereabouts.
>
> There are three men in New York City who know the whereabouts of Cook. One of these was The Evening Mail's informant.
>
> That Dr. Cook is not hiding, but is suffering from nervous breakdown, was the assurance given. The name and location of the sanitarium were withheld.
>
> It was declared, however, that he has been there under medical attendance since his sudden departure from Bronxville.
>
> It was declared that even though the address of the sanitarium was obtained permission to see Dr. Cook would be refused and knowledge of his whereabouts disclaimed.
>
> The discovery of The Evening Mail clears away the mystery as to the location of Cook, which has puzzled his friends, his enemies, and the newspapers for two weeks.

Wake Says Mrs. Cook Knows.

The New York Herald of yesterday said that Charles Wake and Mrs. Cook were the only persons the doctor took into his confidence when he left Bronxville. The story added that it was reported Wednesday night that Mrs. Cook had not known his whereabouts for more than a week, and that she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Mr. Wake later on in The Herald story denied that Mrs. Cook was ignorant of the doctor's whereabouts. She knew the very place, he said.

In The American yesterday it was stated in a cablegram from Copenhagen that Walter Lounsdale had said that the doctor went to a quiet place near New York when he departed from Gramatan Inn. Lounsdale was reported as saying that Dr. Cook was not at all worried, nor at the point of a breakdown, but simply fatigued and seeking quiet and rest.

The controversy between H. Wellington Wack and Charles Wake in the dying days of November will be remembered. H. Wellington Wack said that Dr. Cook was off on the Cunarder Caronia for Liverpool, but Charles Wake promptly came forward and said "Not so," and to this day it has not been proved positively which was right.

The rumored sailing of the doctor for Cuba, the report that he had gone to the home of "Affinity" Earle, near Monroe, and, finally, the much-discussed trip to Muldoon's, which is still a mystery, must all be taken into consideration when the history of Dr. Cook's whereabouts during the latter part of 1909 is written.

And John R. Bradley says that even he does not know where Dr. Cook is, and he is the man who supplied the ship that took Dr. Cook to the frozen North.

COOK NOT SEEN IN WELLS.

Maine Villagers Sure He Isn't There—Pitt Sure He Is.

Special to The New York Times.

WELLS DEPOT, Me., Dec. 9.—If Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the arctic explorer is here, nobody can be found in the town who will admit it. At the Pine Tree Sanitarium to-day, the utmost mystery was made over reports that have gone around that the doctor is a patient there.

Mrs. Margaret Stevens, matron of the sanitarium, expressed profound surprise when informed that Dr. T. S. Pitt, the sanitarium Superintendent, had been quoted in dispatches from Boston as saying that Dr. Cook was a patient there. Mrs. Stevens said early in the day that Dr. Pitt had gone to Cambridge, but she professed not to know when he would return. Asked if Dr. Cook was a patient at the sanitarium, she replied:

"I am not authorized to discuss anything concerning the affairs of the sanitarium. It is our rule not to say anything about our patients or to answer any questions put by outsiders. I cannot say whether Dr. Cook is or is not here. As to the reported interview with Dr. Pitt, I will say that I don't believe he gave it. His orders to us have been never to discuss any detail of the sanitarium affairs outside, and I am sure he has adhered to that rule himself."

More than a dozen telegrams, chiefly from New York papers and press associations, came to the telegraph operator at Wells Station during the day addressed to Dr. Cook in care of the sanitarium, but most of them went back to the senders with the information that Dr. Cook could not be located. Mrs. Stevens informed the telegraph operator that she was not authorized to receive any messages for patients in the absence of Dr. Pitt.

Receives Message for Cook.

She did receipt for one late in the day, however, signing Dr. Cook's name with her own over it. When asked if this signified that Dr. Cook was, after all, a sanitarium patient, Mrs. Stevens assumed a mysterious air and replied:

"Not a word until Dr. Pitt comes."

Wells Depot is part of the town of Wells and has a population of something like 200. It is far from being a secluded spot. The sanitarium is on the outskirts of the village, but there is only one road leading to it from the station and the road is dotted with farm houses. Everybody knows everybody else's affairs, and they have all kept close track of the Pine Tree Sanitarium since it opened up, a month ago. There is no opera house in the village and nothing in the way of a live attraction ever happened along until Dr. Pitt fitted up an old farm house and made a sanitarium of it. Wells Depot set to work as soon as the doctor had got the sanitarium ready for patients to watch and see how many persons with frayed-out nerves came up. They kept their eyes on the road.

About two days after Thanksgiving Day a stranger appeared at the railroad depot at Wells Beach, which is part of Wells but five miles away from Wells Depot. He ordered a hack and was driven over the frozen roads to Pine Tree Sanitarium.

Did he get past the watchers at Wells Depot unobserved? He did not. They all saw him, and at Hilton's grocery that night the wood choppers and the farmers and Bill Drake, who was nabbed by the Game Warden a short time ago for shooting a deer out of season, and all the rest of them who could crowd in talked of the first patient they had caught going to Dr. Pitt's nerve hospital.

No Denial from Pitt.

The next day a report went out over the telegraph wire—no one knows where it started from—that Dr. Cook was at the sanitarium. Did Dr. Pitt, when interviewed by the Boston reporters, deny it? Not he. Wells Depot read that the stranger was the only Dr. Cook, and, whew! how set up they were! Wells Depot had been discovered. Greatest excitement since the civil war. Could Wells Depot be kept off the map now? Well hardly.

And then the next day they found that the stranger was a lumber agent who had put up at the sanitarium for the night; not Dr. Cook at all. Wells Depot folks say all the strangers have been accounted for, and that Dr. Cook is not here. Of course, they might say the same thing at the sanitarium and be done with it, but—well, who ever heard of Wells Depot in the Pines before?

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—"I am tired of this badgering," said Dr. T. S. Pitt this afternoon as he waited for a train to take him back to Wells. "Dr. Cook is at the Pine Tree, suffering from nervous breakdown, but is steadily on the mend. I am running a sanitarium at Wells, not a news-distributing bureau, and I am tired of being pursued by reporters."

Dr. Pitt arrived here this morning from West Milton, where he had been on a quiet visit to former school friends.

DUNKLE AND LOOSE READY TO FACE COOK

Challenge Him to Prove That He Can Take Proper Observations.

LAWYER WACK WITHDRAWS

Can't Get an Answer from the Explorer to the Most Urgent Letters—Bradley and Wake Missing.

The friends and supporters of Dr. Frederick A. Cook were hard to reach yesterday to ascertain their views of the revelations made by George H. Dunkle and Capt. August Wedel Loose on the explorer's methods of supplying himself with polar observations. On the other hand Mr. Dunkle and the Captain faced all questioners and issued a challenge to Dr. Cook to prove his skill with the sextant.

Charles Wake, who has stood by Cook through thick and thin, could not be found at his apartments. Henry Wellington Wack, his ingenious attorney, denied himself to reporters and at first contented himself with this statement:

"During Dr. Cook's continuing absence I shall have nothing to say concerning his case. His own gift of speech and of silence should be sufficient for all purposes of desirable publicity."

Later, however, he found time to declare that he didn't know where the explorer was at present, but rejoiced that at last one fact was conceded by all concerned in the dispute. It was universally admitted that Dr. Cook has sent certain records to Copenhagen.

Last night the Associated Press announced that Wack had severed relations with his client. Mr. Wack refused to confirm or deny this, but the Associated Press declared that it had confirmed on competent authority that after a consultation with his partners Mr. Wack wrote Dr. Cook so long ago as Nov. 30 that he must beg him to seek legal advice elsewhere.

Asked flatly if he had or had not withdrawn from Dr. Cook's affairs, Mr. Wack said:

"This is not the time for an announcement. It might be thought I had deserted Dr. Cook in his need. He may be delirious in a sanitarium or on the ocean unable to defend himself."

A close friend of Mr. Wack reiterated, however, that Mr. Wack had long ago decided to close dealings with a client who did not keep his counsel informed of his intentions or movements.

Mr. Wack's friends make no secret that the lawyer has felt hurt by the secrecy of his client with regard to his intentions and movements. It has not seemed to him to show the confidence a man should have in his legal adviser. Without dwelling on this side of the matter, Mr. Wack did say this last night:

"Dr. Cook disappeared of his own volition and not by the suasion of his friends. I heard from him for the last time by telephone on Tuesday, Nov. 23. Two days before I had seen him. He was highly nervous. He continually clasped his hands over his stomach, as if in pain, and he complained of gastric distress.

"Last night Dr. Cook's friend, Charles Wake, who first came out with the denial that the doctor had sailed on the Caronia, confessed that he hadn't the slightest idea where Dr. Cook is now, and that he had not heard from him since the same day as myself, Tuesday, Nov. 23.

"My urgent letters to the doctor have remained unanswered, though they demanded a reply from any man solicitous as to his affairs. I addressed them to his brother, who is supposed to know where he is."

As a matter of fact Mrs. Cook wrote to Mr. Wack on Dec. 4 and posted the letter next day, so that the lawyer received it on Dec. 6. In this communication she asked Mr. Wack to discontinue all expenses on her husband's account and to forward to her certain papers which Mr. Wack understood to be affidavits dealing with the Mount McKinley controversy. These Dr. Cook had thought of taking with him to Europe in case the University of Copenhagen should desire to inspect them.

J. R. Bradley, Dr. Cook's financial backer, left town on Wednesday evening before the statements of Dunkle and Capt. Loose were published, and will not return till to-day. It was stated, however, by Mr. Dunkle last night that Mr. Bradley knew nothing whatever of the arrangement he and the Captain had made with the explorer.

All Mr. Dunkle told Mr. Bradley was that he had taken part in the attempt to raise the funds for a Cook relief expedition, and that he thought he was entitled to an interview with the explorer on a matter of business.

Mr. Bradley, as reported in yesterday's TIMES, was not told what the nature of this business was and did nothing more than ask Cook to listen to Mr. Dunkle.

In Mr. Bradley's absence it was impossible to learn last night how he now looks on the man he assisted financially in his explorations, and who left town without informing him of his plans.

It was admitted yesterday by some of Dr. Cook's friends that he had availed himself of frequent consultations with Capt. Loose, and that that able navigator had occupied rooms for a time at the Gramatan Inn. They would not admit, however, that these consultations amounted to improper collusion between the explorer and his navigator-in-ordinary.

On the other hand, Mr. Dunkle and Capt. Loose are quite positive that, however far north Dr. Cook did penetrate, he did it without the knowledge of the elements of navigation.

"I think," said the former last night, "that before the University of Copenhagen finally passes on the papers submitted by Dr. Cook, they should take note of the fact that he is under serious charges. The representatives should summon him before them and ascertain for themselves whether he can take observations.

"We now issue an open challenge to him. We will meet him at any time before the representatives of the University of Copenhagen or any other reputable body. We ask the opportunity to take Dr. Cook in an open boat two miles off Sandy Hook Light, to place the best of instruments in his hands, to give him his chronometer time, and to ask him to make three correct observations of his latitude and longitude.

"They should be eight hours apart and we will cheerfully allow him to choose the time of the first."

Mr. Dunkle then spoke of the suggestion that some of Dr. Cook's observations may be missing, because the sun was not visible at the time they should have been made, and he must have relied on the stars or moon.

"Why did the doctor not take an observation by the stars then?" asked Mr. Dunkle. "My contention is that it would have been impossible for him to go any distance from his base unless he was able to find his position by the stars. Capt. Loose and I would be delighted to meet Dr. Cook before the University of Copenhagen or its representatives. We are certain that if a sextant was put in his hands and he was asked by an expert to demonstrate how he took his bearings, the first half dozen questions would prove his utter incompetency to guide an expedition or find out where he was."

Mr. Dunkle was besieged by reporters at the office of the Travelers' Insurance Company, 31 Nassau Street, yesterday morning. The business of the office was interrupted and his superiors suggested that this wouldn't do. Mr. Dunkle sought refuge elsewhere. Inquiries for him later in the day brought this announcement:

"Mr. Dunkle is no longer with us."

No explanation of this was vouchsafed, and direct questions as to whether Mr. Dunkle had been asked to resign were met with the reply:

"Nothing to say."

Mr. Dunkle himself last night had no knowledge that his action in the Cook matter had caused his superiors any more than passing annoyance at the notoriety he had achieved.

It was pointed out yesterday that in failing to pay Mr. Dunkle and Capt. Loose the money he had stipulated, Dr. Cook was folowing the same tactics he had employed in the case of Barrill, the Mount McKinley packer. One man remarked:

"Well, I reckon Dr. Cook thought that it was the easiest way to make $4,000 to take it out of Dunkle and Loose. I don't suppose he had much faith in passing muster at Copenhagen, and he thought he might as well save his money."

Are you thinking of a Player Piano as a Christmas Gift?

Then read this advertisement. It is long, but intensely interesting. You cannot know all you should know of the subject until you have read it.

Doubtless you have already recognized the advantage of a really worthy player-piano as a means for bringing music into the home and educating your children to a loving comprehension of the best there is in music.

But you have still to decide the all important question:

Which Player-Piano?

A Player-Piano is essentially a piano and the worth of that piano is a vitally important consideration.

Of the HARDMAN Autotone the basic instrument is the HARDMAN PIANO, whose position in the Hierarchy of the world's Pianos of Repute has been recognized for nearly three-quarters of a century.

Practically all the great artists who are visiting America: Caruso, Sammarco, Tetrazzini, Destinn—for instance—are using to-day The HARDMAN Piano or The HARDMAN Autotone in their own homes.

The Autotone's Durability.

A Player-Piano is used ten times as much as an ordinary piano, so this "lasting quality" is ten times as important to it.

The HARDMAN Piano is the accepted Piano of the great schools and colleges where durability in a piano is a prime necessity.

For nearly three-quarters of a century The HARDMAN has been known as "The Piano that improves with use."

Which Player Mechanism?

It is comparatively easy to produce a player-piano which will play musical notes in a mechanical fashion.

To produce one that will render music as a musician renders it—with the poetry of romantic feeling and the poignancy of musical expression—is quite another matter.

That the Makers of The AUTOTONE have done just this, is mainly because they are skilled Piano Makers, with years of experience behind them.

The playing mechanism is designed by them and built into The AUTOTONE from its very foundation.

The HARDMAN piano factories—where the AUTOTONE is built—are still controlled by the original owners.

It is under the direction of these owners that The Hardman PIANO (and with it The Hardman AUTOTONE) has reached its present enviable position among the great musical achievements of the day.

Thus "HARDMAN" is more than a mere name—for a name and with it a factory can be purchased.

What cannot be purchased is the ability of the directing genius which makes that name synonymous with the tonal qualities of a truly great instrument.

The Autotone Cannot Be Imitated.

That sincerest of all flatteries, imitation, The AUTOTONE'S Makers must forego, for The AUTOTONE cannot be even colorably imitated.

In the first place there is that most important feature, the Accentor, a patented device.

The Accentor is not automatic—a word abhorrent to musical ears.

Devices for the automatic accenting of phrases or portions of a composition exist in profusion. Musically, however, they are not deserving of attention.

The Accentor gives to the music you play on The AUTOTONE your personality and enables you to express your own—not somebody else's—feelings and ideas in music.

The Accentor does this by enabling you to apply just the degree of force you desire to the touch of the instrument on any key or series of keys as if you were a skilled musician and your own fingers were touching the piano-keys.

An invention marvellously human—it carries out so absolutely your will—with nothing of the automaton about it.

The Accentor does not merely increase or decrease the volume of sound as do most "expression" devices. There is, indeed, quite a separate device for this purpose. It is the pneumatic sustaining pedal, by which even a novice can secure the finest pedal effects.

Melody-Marked Music Rolls.
(Patented by Hardman, Peck & Co.)

The Melody-Marked Music Rolls enable you to read while the music roll is passing through the instrument—as clearly as the words in a printed book—the perforations which carry the melody.

Thus you can accent the "air" because you know which perforations carry it.

No other Music Rolls give you this knowledge.

Plays Both 65 and 88 Note Music Rolls.

By means of the Combination Tracker-Board the AUTOTONE can play both the 65 note or the 88 note music rolls.

While other makers are still experimenting in this direction, The AUTOTONE has successfully accomplished it for three solid years.

To a piano playing only the 88 note music rolls, the 65 note rolls (and this over fifteen thousand popular and entertaining pieces) are useless.

To that playing only the 65 note rolls, the 88 note rolls, taking in the entire keyboard and thus covering the most classical and elevated compositions, demanding the full compass of the piano, are equally a sealed book.

This dual capacity of The AUTOTONE throws open to you instantly the whole field of musical composition.

Other Autotone Patented Features.

Among these may be mentioned the Transposor-Adjustor, which, by a touch of the finger, transposes any composition to a higher or lower key than that in which it is written—of inestimable value in accompanying a singer.

The Selector, which enables you to run through a roll quickly and silently until the particular part you wish to play is reached.

You have merely to press a button to do this.

The Smallest of Player Pianos.

And this may well be of great importance to you.

The AUTOTONE is the smallest of all player-pianos. The combination of a piano of one make with a player mechanism of another results in many disadvantages—among which is ungainly size.

None of the tonal qualities of The HARDMAN PIANO are lost or obscured, and yet the complete instrument takes up less space than any other of its character.

Convince Yourself.

A mere glance over the foregoing—it's a long story but worth the telling—must have done much to convince you that the claims made for The AUTOTONE are based on the reasoning of solid facts.

There is one way, however, by which you can absolutely convince yourself of their truth or their falsity.

Come to our warerooms.

Pick out any music you may fancy, place the roll yourself in the AUTOTONE and then play it.

Don't depend upon the mere hearing of the instrument as played by an expert.

See for yourself how the Accentor gives you personal and complete command of the expression.

Follow the melody on one of our Melody-Marked rolls.

We shall be delighted to see you, even if you have no immediate intention of buying a player-piano.

If you have that intention we shall be more delighted, for we know that you will leave us convinced that you have found the greatest of all pianos.

Many a potential masterpiece of painting or sculpture has been lost to the world because the artist did not stop when the work was finished

It is a matter of record that fine portraits and other works in oil or marble have been irretrievably ruined because the artist, too fond of his labors to stop at the proper moment, kept up his work until he had spoiled what already lacked nothing of completion.

It is but a step from the fine arts to the industrial arts—and among the latter the making of good ready-for-service clothes is certainly entitled to a place.

As with the painting, so with the garment, the designer to achieve success must know when to stop.

There are no "overdone" models among our productions. No point necessary to distinctiveness is omitted, neither is there the labored effect of overwork. Simple elegance, perfection of detail and finish are features of our

MEN KNOWING COOK BELIEVE IN LOOSE

Cook's Lack of Scientific Knowledge Bears Out Captain's Story, Prof. Parker Says.

SHOWN IN McKINLEY CLIMB

He Remembers Dunkle and Loose In Connection with Cook Relief Plans —Jacoby's Comment.

To men who knew Dr. Frederick A. Cook and have worked in the field with him, and to those who are qualified to judge of his equipment as an explorer from his own published statements, there was in the narrative of George H. Dunkle and Capt. August Wedel Loose, published in yesterday's TIMES, inherent corroboration of his description of the way in which the documents were drawn up for Copenhagen University in the facts told in the affidavits.

The one thing insisted upon by Mr. Dunkle and the Captain over ad over again was the inability of Dr. Cook to take ordinary astronomical observations. Capt. Loose dwelt at length on the gaping voids he had found in the explorer's knowledge of the way to ascertain his position and in this he bore out the experience of those who have traveled with Dr. Cook.

Prof. H. C. Parker of Columbia University, speaking yesterday of the attempt he made in company with Dr. Cook to ascend Mount McKinley, remarked upon this also.

Lack of McKinley Observations.

"In all the time I was with Dr. Cook," he said, "I never knew him to take an observation to determine our position, and I am quite sure he had no knowledge of and no interest in the mountain instruments. I speak particularly of these because I was in charge of this set of observations, and he never spoke of them to me and I never thought it worth while to discuss them with him because he was evidently so little interested.

"Of course we had with us one of the finest topographers in the country, Russell W. Porter, and there was no necessity for Dr. Cook to bother about them, but as a matter of fact he is not a scientific man at all, and knows nothing about the requirements that scientific men look for in records. Thus in his book on Mount McKinley, in which he asserts that he went to the top, he gives only a single observation. This was a reading of his barometer, on which he bases his estimate of the height of the mountain.

"This differs slightly from the figure given by the Geological Survey, and has, I believe, been simply taken from that. To make an observation which would be accepted by a scientific body, a number of different data should be supplied. For these the true difference between the barometer at the base and the summit of the mountain could be calculated and the height could be ascertained. Not even in the appendix are any particulars given as to the way in which this solitary reading was obtained and checked.

"As a matter of fact I do not believe that Dr. Cook had with him any barometer which could have been used to show the height of a mountain over 26,000 feet high. The best barometer I had with me would have been useful only up to 18,000 feet, and if Dr. Cook had one he could have employed at 20,000 feet, it was as good a one as he could have had with him."

Parker Remembers Dunkle.

Prof. Parker also stated that he believed that he had met Mr. Dunkle and had heard of Capt. Loose before, in connection with Cook.

"When a small committee of Dr. Cook's friends were seriously alarmed about him and thought he was lost in the arctic," he said, "we endeavored to raise a fund of $30,000 to fit out an expedition for his relief. All we could scrape together was $800. It's a pity that those who now acclaim Dr. Cook so loudly did not come forward when his best friends were in great anxiety about him.

"Then Mr. Dunkle came to us with some advertising scheme, which he believed would bring us in the money we needed. He did not satisfy us as to its character, and so we would not go into it. Capt. Loose would have been the master of the relief vessel, if we could have afforded to dispatch one. We went so far as to take an option on a good ship, which would have cost us about $7,000, but were forced to let it go."

Send the Fakes to Copenhagen.

Prof. Harold Jacoby, Rutherford Professor of Astronomy at Columbia, made a strong point yesterday of the importance of forwarding at once to the University of Copenhagen a transcript of the observations made by Capt. Loose at the Hotel Gramatan. They should be delivered, he said, to the university before there is any possibility of any one but Dr. Cook knowing what is in the records he intrusted to Mr. Lounsdale. For if there is substantial agreement between the Captain's observations and Dr. Cook's figures collusion between them will be absolutely proved.

"It is impossible," said the professor, "for two men to make a long series of observations without divergence, however skillful as navigators they may be. At sea it is a common thing for two or three observations to be made simultaneously by skilled officers, in order to check each other. No man can possibly, except by accident, make a delicate measurement agree with that by another man. If I were to ask you to measure this room with a two-foot rule your exact figures would disagree with mine. You could not get precisely the same result twice running.

"So, if it be found that Dr. Cook has sent in a list of observations which coincide in the main with the figures now in the possession of Capt. Loose the presumption will be that one had been copied from the other, and in this case that Dr. Cook had taken his records from Capt. Loose. The closer the coincidence the more certain the collusion."

Jacoby Always Doubted Cook.

Dr. Jacoby also remarked on the prominence Capt. Loose gave in his narrative to Dr. Cook's entire ignorance of the requirements of navigation. It seemed to the professor to bear out a criticism he had made on the first of the published statements of the explorer.

"I always doubted Dr. Cook's story," he said, "when I found the accuracy with which he alleged he could give the seconds in his observations so near the North Pole. I believed that if he had thoroughly understood his subject he would never have attempted to go into such detail. Capt. Loose's statement entirely bars out my deduction. He shows that he had to coach Dr. Cook on the simplest points of observations."

Prof. Jacoby has confidence in the findings of the University of Copenhagen. He points out that the President of the Board of Investigation is Prof. Elis Strongren, an astronomer of whose skill he has, from a knowledge of his writings, a high opinion. Prof. Pechale, the other astronomer on the board, is also a man of recognized standing in the astronomical world. Dr. Jacoby is certain that with such men as these the scientific accuracy of Dr. Cook's report will be exposed to a thorough sifting.

Russell W. Porter, the topographer of the Mount McKinley expedition, has come in for some criticism since the controversy began on account of the pictures he drew for Dr. Cook of the shelter on the sheer side of the mountain, in which the explorer asserts he and Barrill passed a most uncomfortable night during a blizzard, and of the slow ascent of the ice ridge by cutting a path of steps. Writing to Prof. Parker, Mr. Porter has declared that the idea of deceiving any one by his pictures never entered his mind. He made them, he says, "conscientiously from minute word descriptions of the doctor himself," and he feels aggrieved that any aspersions should have been cast on his motives.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

"The Play Is Over," Writes One—The Eagle Says Cook Should Reply or Sue.

From The Brooklyn Standard-Union.

Every honest newspaper and honest newspaperman owes THE NEW YORK TIMES thanks to-day for a masterpiece, a straightforward, illuminating, and conclusive piece of work, the final act in a drama which for daring and effrontery has never been equaled. Every honest man, too, owes THE TIMES gratitude that it has averted a National disgrace which has cast for months a broad shadow on the fair fame of the American people. Not less deserving of thanks either is the brave man, who knowing the truth, dared from the Far North to say in tones that echoed with indignation, the truth, of which he was of all men most certain, that the American people had been "handed a gold brick," and that the whole structure to which they were paying homage, was one of deceit and fabrication. It is particularly gratifying that a newspaper, with its swift and sure processes, has turned the searchlight upon the miserable fraud and exposed it in all the disgraceful details rather than that it should have been allowed to drag its weary length through scientific commissions and investigations, or even through the devious and often inconsequential processes of law.

Copenhagen is in an embarrassing position. While THE TIMES disclosures are not officially before the university, it is not possible that they can be ignored; and whether the faked and manufactured data are treated with the courtesy of an inspection, or are unceremoniously returned to their consignors, is a matter which the Danish authorities may settle among themselves and at their own convenience. The world no longer concerns itself with their action, as the evidence of this morning has transferred the case from geography to that of psychology. As the most colossal and shameless fraud of history, the achievement may, perhaps, in its own peculiar, despicable class, be without precedent or parallel, and no one is likely ever to arise to dispute its bad pre-eminence.

Just what the persistent, disappointed and misled admirers of the money-grabber whose personality pervades the whole scheme will do now, it is also idle to speculate. Reparation to the reputation wronged, to the distinction earned, is impossible, but the experience will not be without valuable practical results. Exploration will receive a decided upward impulse. Mere adventurers, notoriety and money seekers who think to traffic upon public credulity and to ignore the plain and literal demands of fact and common sense, will be less in evidence, and the real workers, either for definite results in the realm of human knowledge or for demonstrations of loyalty to ideals and the plain American virtue of sticking to it, with a determination to win, will obtain a higher place in the public esteem than ever. In the meantime a very inviting and obvious opportunity is offered for the Brooklyn Institute, which, despite protests and appeals, forced upon its platform and its patrons the embodiment of all this falsity and untruth, to consider what apology or extenuating circumstance it may offer, for there are some sins which charity does not cover.

Dr. Cook Should at Once Reply.

From The Brooklyn Eagle.

The statements published under oath in THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day by August W. Loose, a sea captain of 437 Thirteenth Street, Brooklyn, and George H. Dunkle, an insurance broker of 31 Nassau Street, Manhattan, are either true or untrue. If they are true, they effectually make an end of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's claim to be the discoverer of the north pole. If they are untrue, they are so grossly libelous that Dr. Cook is morally bound, as a measure of self-protection and as a satisfaction to those who still believe in him, to sue THE TIMES for libel.

We do not think THE TIMES is much concerned over what Dr. Cook may or may not do. It seems to have employed every means at its disposal to find the mysterious doctor and obtain from him a reply to the charges of Loose and Dunkle before those charges were published. Failing in that, it had recourse to the policy any live newspaper would have pursued under similar circumstances. It gave the facts to the public and left the public to pass judgment upon them.

Publication of the Dunkle-Loose narrative has been so timed that it should be an easy matter to compare the observations which are printed this morning, and which Capt. Loose says were made to order with the supposed official record of the expedition, now at Copenhagen. The records at Copenhagen cannot in any way be changed.

The motive of Loose and Dunkle in impeaching Cook is announced with commendable frankness. They make no pretense of a desire to do the public a service. They were not paid the amount they claim Dr. Cook promised to pay them, and hence the revelations in THE TIMES. Due weight must be given to this in any estimate of the case they present. The same motive seems to have instigated Barrill, the Western guide, to assert that Cook's story of the ascent of Mount McKinley is a carefully varnished fabrication. Dr. Cook has been singularly unfortunate with his colaborers in the field of scientific effort. We can recall no other explorer who has had a similar experience. Barrill, Dunkle, and Loose constitute a trio of disappointed and vindictive assistants, each with the identical claim that the doctor failed to meet his financial obligations. All of them have had their say. THE TIMES has formulated a terrific indictment. It is now Dr. Cook's move.

Vale Cook.

From The New York Globe.

What shreds of credibility remained to the Cook narrative of alleged polar exploration seem destroyed by the circumstantial story told by Loose and Dunkle concerning the assistance they rendered toward getting the Cook records ready for submission to the University of Copenhagen. The two make a statement as explicit as that of Edward Barrill concerning the non-climbing of Mount McKinley, and furnish a sufficient reason of the delay there was in sending the Cook "records" to Denmark. Ample light is thrown on what the lecturer was doing in his periods of seclusion.

Loose and Dunkle make no concealment of the fact that they have given Cook away because he proved a poor paymaster and did not turn over the sums that he agreed to give for their services. It is, of course, extraordinary that Cook, having placed himself in the power of these two men, should arouse their enmity. But Cook is an extraordinary person, and is not to be judged by the usual standards. He also was in debt to Barrill when expecting Barrill to remain silent concerning the Mount McKinley fraud. In the present case Cook, however, may have assumed that he was done for, and that it would be waste to spend more money to bolster up his claim.

If he follows his usual practice, Cook, confronted with the Loose and Dunkle stories, will deny them in general terms and assert that infamous friends of Peary "bought" the affidavits. But this kind of defense loses its potency when used too often. Perhaps even he now perceives its futility, and disappeared because he knew the explosion was coming. In any event it seems a case of vale Cook. Incidentally there will be born in a great many minds a desire to apologize to Commander Peary for the abuse to which he was subjected when he refused to credit the Cook narrative.

More News from the Pole.

From the New York Evening Post.

Whatever may be the case as regards history in general, no one can deny that in the affaire Cook history is repeating itself with a rapidity and exactness that leave nothing to be desired. One improbability doth tread upon another's heel, so fast thay follow. Moreover, they keep coming in pairs, so prettily matched that, like the spellings of Tony Weller's name, a choice between them is left to the taste and fancy of each individual.

The first story of Cook's conquest of the Pole was improbable; but what could have been pronounced more improbable in advance than that a great university should incontinently confer upon him a doctorate for the achievement unless ample proof had been presented? The episode of the Eskimo youths presented just such opposite improbabilities; and so did the Barrill affair.

And now come an able seaman and his business-man friend, and make affidavit that they supplied the doctor with a complete set of "faked" observations covering his dash to the pole. The affidavits are so circumstantial that it is difficult to doubt their truthfulness; but why did Cook fail to pay them their price, when the betrayal of the secret was sure to follow? There is more in all this than is natural. * * *

The story told by the two worthies has a great deal of interest, quite aside from its evidential bearing on the north pole question. * * * It is interesting to notice the delicacy of the language employed on both sides throughout. Never was there anything more than an implication that the observations of Dr. Cook himself might be non-existent or worthless. Some of the high officials in charge of our relations with foreign countries might take pattern by these unprofessional diplomats in the observance of euphemistic forms to cover unpleasant realities.

MRS. MARTIN SNEAD MAY BE IN VIRGINIA

Mother of Woman Found Dead in East Orange Thought to be Near Christiansburg.

SHE STARTED FOR ROANOKE

But Changed Her Mind and Friends Think Aged Woman Went to the Home of Her Sister.

Special to The New York Times.

ROANOKE, Va., Dec. 9.—It is believed that Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, mother of Ocey Snead, who was found dead in a bathtub in East Orange, N. J., will be found near Christiansburg, where the Martins, Wardlaws, and Sneads formerly owned and operated the Montgomery Female Seminary.

Mrs. Martin is said to be at the home of a sister, two miles from Christiansburg. It is said that on the night Mrs. Martin was believed to have left Christiansburg for Roanoke, three weeks ago, she did not go by train, but called a hackman and drove to a farmhouse in the country. Her sister is with her.

One of the most remarkable stories in the lives of these women was told to-day by John L. Vaughan of Radford, Va., President of the Bank of Shawsville.

"One day last Summer Mr. Vaughan says he was called to the telephone. A voice told him that some one from New York was anxious to see him about a large real estate transaction. Soon afterward a closed carriage drove up to the door of Vaughan's home. In the carriage were Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Snead and her son, Albert Snead. Although it was a warm Summer day the curtains were drawn and the storm robe was up in front.

Mrs. Martin brought from the carriage a bundle wrapped in a newspaper and handed it to Vaughan, saying that they wanted to give the contents to him. He opened the bundle and found that it contained $1,200 in paper money. Mrs. Martin said thel had intended to offer him $2,000 for his influence and name in connection with the sale of the college, but after further consideration were of the opinion that he would be worth more than that to them. Mrs. Martin insisted on his going to Christianburg and looking over the property with her.

Arriving at the college Vaughan was shown to the red room," which was handsomely furnished. He was told that he might consider this his home in future. He was shown over the college building, and asked his opinion as to the cost of putting the school in shape. He was again offered the roll of $1,200, but this time as a retainer. It was then proposed that he should be made Dean of the college, which was to be opened in the Fall in grand style. He was told that they had plenty of money, and as evidence of the fact they unearthed several rolls of money in trash barrels, out-of-the-way closets, and in most unheard of places.

After supper at the home of Mrs. Martin's sister, Vaughan made an excuse to leave, but was taken in hand by Miss Virginia Wardlaw, the woman now under arrest in East Orange, N. J., charged with the murder of her niece, Miss Wardlaw asked him to return to the college, where he spent the night.

The next morning it developed that Mrs. Martin wanted Vaughan to advance a large loan on the college, presumably for the purpose of putting it in repair. He was offered 20 per cent. for his money, and would have advanced it had the woman put up what he considered proper collateral. Since that time Vaughan said he had been besieged on a number of occasions by these women for money.

SNEAD'S BROTHER FOUND.

Colorado Rancher Denies Fletcher Snead Is Living with Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PALISADE, Col., Dec. 9. — Albert Snead, said to be the most important witness sought by the police in connection with the finding of the body of Mrs. Ocey M. Snead in East Orange, N. J., two weeks ago, was found here to-day, but declined to discuss the alleged $9,000 insurance policy carried on the life of the murdered woman, in which he is named as beneficiary.

Snead would not say whether his brother Fletcher, husband of the woman who is now sought by the Eastern police, was in hiding here.

"If Fletcher is here, I have not seen him," Snead said this afternoon.

The attitude of the young rancher is that of a man who is carefully guarding something which is preying upon his mind. He denys knowledge of the tragedy except what he has read in the newspapers, and will not discuss the case.

"I have received no letters from Fletcher or his wife for six months," stid Albert Snead. "I did correspond with them at frequent intervals previous to that time, but I don't want to talk about it, at least at this time. My Post Office box is No. 396 in the Palisade Post Office, but have sent no anonymous letters. My name was signed to every letter I sent from here."

Snead refused to tell about the members of his family.

"They are on one side of the continent and I am on the other," he said, "and I don't want to be drawn into the affair in any way. I have not seen any of them since I left the East in August, 1908. I exchanged letters with my brother and his wife more or less frequently, but I have not heard directly from my brother since last Summer.

"I knew that Mrs. Ocey Snead carried considerable insurance, but I did not know how much. I absolutely refuse to say anything concerning the insurance which was carried in my favor, or whether I will seek to enforce payment on the policy. Newspaper accounts credit me with being named as beneficiary in a $9,000 policy, and others say it is a $4,000 policy."

When told that Miss Virginia Wardlaw, an aunt of the dead woman, who was arrested last week in connection with the case, had not been released by the East Orange authorities, he said: "She ought to be released. She is one of the most loving and self-sacrificing women that ever lived. She never had any connection with Ocey's death."

When pressed to explain how he knew that she had nothing to do with the death of the girl, Snead refused to say anything further.

Snead does not look to be more than 25 years old. He came here more than a year ago and purchased a small tract of fruit land, on which he has lived alone, so far as is known. He has not left the valley since he first arrived. He has been a puzzle to the other residents and has discouraged his neighbors' efforts to get acquainted with him.

TO PASS ON SNEAD NOTE.

Prosecution Retains Kinsley to Examine Bathtub Victim's Writing.

William J. Kinsley, a handwriting expert of 261 Broadway, will be one of the prosecutor's chief witnesses in the case against Miss Virginia Wardlaw, charged with killing Mrs. Ocey W. M. Snead, her niece, who was found dead in a bathtub in East Orange ten days ago.

It was said last night that the note found pinned to the dress of Mrs. Snead at the time her body was discovered in the bathtub of the deserted house in East Orange was already in Mr. Kinsley's hands, together with samples of the handwriting of not only the prisoner but of the mother and the two aunts.

The handwriting expert upon whose testimony the State largely depends for a conviction is expected to testify to-morrow morning in the Recorder's Court in East Orange, when Miss Wardlaw will have a hearing. If he should find that the "suicide" note is indeed in the handwriting of the dead girl, it is doubtful if the case will go to the Grand Jury, but neither the prosecutor nor the police working on the case believe for a moment that he will so testify. The police have all along held that the note was a forgery, or if by any possibilty it was not, that it was written by Mrs. Snead under coercion.

It was said last night that Prosecutor Mott might not wait for the hearing by the Recorder, but present the case to the Grand Jury to-day. Under the New Jersey law the Grand Jury can take up such a case at any time.

Persons living in the neighborhood of 349 West Fifty-eighth Street, Manhattan, where Col. Robert M. Martin died on Jan. 9, 1901, are repeating stories that in his last days he was apparently neglected.

Mrs. Mary Snead, the mother-in-law of the dead girl, spent practically all yesterday with her lawyer, Franklin W. Fort. They were room hunting a part of the time, and after that Mr. Fort took her in a taxicab to see some friends. She is still at 466 West Twenty-second Street, though her stay there is likely to be no longer than it takes to find a more comfortable room.

Lawyer Fort said last night that he, too, had understood that Mr. Kinsley had been engaged by the prosecution to examine the handwriting in the case. He said he had offered to join with the Prosecutor in having the handwriting examined, and for some reason not clear to him, if the prosecution was sure of its ground, the offer had been declined.

Mrs. Snead gave a brief interview yesterday, in which she said she did not know positively that her son was dead. She puts no credence whatever in the reports that he was seen in Brooklyn in October last. Both she and Mr. Fort said that the report that the Hancock baby in Roanoke, Va., was that of young Mrs. Snead was absurd.

Edwin Grasse's Violin Recital.

A large audience gathered in Mendelssohn Hall yesterday afternoon to hear Edwin Grasse give a recital of music for the violin. The programme included three numbers by Grasse himself, still in manuscript; Sinding's suite in A minor, the adagio movement from Brahms's concerto, a Hungarian dance of Brahms, arranged by Joachim; the Bach sonata in E major for piano and violin, and three short numbers. At many times, especially in the more rapid passages, Mr. Grasse produces a scratching tone, which is not pleasant to the ear. At other times he plays with better effect. His facility is usually sufficient and his style of playing, while neither noble nor masterful, at least is lacking in some of the pernicious qualities to which many violinists' bows are heirs.

Insuring Martinolar Teeth

The patient who comes here for dentistry takes no chances.

We do not ask him to assume any risks as to whether or not our work is going to prove successful.

Every piece of work we do is backed by our positive guarantee that it will stand the test of wear and time and be right in every respect.

If at any time any of our work needs readjustment, we do the readjusting without charge to the patient, regardless of what caused the trouble.

This is insurance that insures.

The private practitioner offers his patients his best services and does their work to the best of his ability. If any accident happens to this work, or if for any cause it goes wrong, and his patient returns to make over or repair, he charges the patient the same as for new work, on the theory that dentistry is not an exact science and the dentist no more than the physician can tell what the result of his work may be, so if the private practitioner's work goes wrong he is not the sufferer, but, indeed, is rather a beneficiary.

With us, before starting a case, we explain to the patient exactly what work we are going to do and exactly what the expense will be. We then do the work to the best of our ability, and it is to our interest to do it in the very best, most permanent manner, as should anything happen to the work we repair it at our expense, and we, therefore, are the loser.

Will you let our examining dentist look over your teeth free of charge or obligation on your part?

Send for our Book De Luxe, "The Martinolar Method" (teeth without plates), 40 pages of practical, instructive information on dental work in general. The book is free.

MACVEAGH AROUSES BITTER OPPOSITION

Members of Congress Declare War on Secretary—Criticise His Tariff Speech.

ATTACK HIS OFFICIAL ACTS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, has incurred the displeasure of many Senators and Representatives, and war has been declared against him. Whether this will result finally in his leaving the Cabinet is a serious question. At present the movement is under cover, no Senator or Representative caring to come out openly against the Secretary as yet.

First, the Secretary is charged with running the Treasury Department "as he would a first-class grocery store," to quote a Senator. Next he has aggravated the old charge of being a Democrat by his low tariff address in Boston on Wednesday night, when he criticised the framers of the Tariff bill and declared that tariff bills are merely the result of log rolling, the same as river and harbor appropriations. The assertions in the Boston speech have wounded deeply the leaders of the Republicans in the Senate.

But the crowning sin, and the one which opened hostilities, is the selection of James Freeman Curtis of Boston as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in place of James B. Reynolds, whom the President advanced to a position on the Tariff Board. Mr. Curtis is an agreeable young person, as the world goes, of some 33 years. He is an expert in golf. This, it is jocularly remarked, had great weight with the President. Secretary MacVeagh discovered Mr. Curtis and selected him without consulting either Senator Lodge or Senator Crane, neither of whom recommended him. Secretary Meyer of the Navy declared that he never knew of Curtis until his appointment.

The Finance Committee of the Senate has been called to act to-morrow morning on Mr. Curtis's nomination. It is asserted to-night on authority of members of the committee that the nomination will be fought bitterly, and if possible action thereon will be prevented.

Outside of the act of discourtesy to the Senators in not notifying them of Curtis's election, protests have poured in from business men against the appointment. The post of duty to which he has been assigned includes the administration of the customs, a difficult task, and the most responsible in the department, especially with the new tariff in vogue. The position was vacated by James B. Reynolds, an expert in tariff matters, and it was expected that some person in the department familiar with the intricacies of the workings of the customs would succeed Reynolds.

Mr. Curtis, previous to accepting the Assistant Secretaryship of the Treasury, was an assistant to District Attorney Hill of Boston. He was also an assistant to the Attorney General of Massachusetts, but has had no experience in Federal work. His appointment by Secretary MacVeagh was purely sentimental, the Secretary having known him since boyhood. Curtis, being brainy, the Secretary thought he could fill any position.

Chairman Aldrich has requested the attendance of every member of the Finance Committee, which includes among others Senators Hale of Maine, Cullom of Illinois, Lodge of Massachusetts, Penrose of Pennsylvania, Smoot of Utah, and Flint of California. It is declared that none of those mentioned would care to defend Secretary MacVeagh's course in selecting an inexperienced man for so important a position.

To-night a vigorous movement is in progress to prevent the confirmation of the appointment, which would open the war on the Secretary. It became known to-day that there had been vigorous opposition to Mr. MacVeagh's selection as Secretary from financial and business men. The Senators who oppose Curtis's indorsement declare the administration of the Treasury Department has been such as to call for severe criticism. They declare that Mr. MacVeagh is not in sympathy with the present tariff, and that he has caused serious trouble by his interpretation of the law.

GERMAN NAVY TOPS OURS.

Total Tonnage Larger, Though Race for Second Place Is Close.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The Navy year book for 1909, compiled by Pitman Pulsifer, Clerk of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, shows the race for second place among the navies of the world to be still very close between the United States and Germany.

Of fighting ships (battleships and armored cruisers) built, building and provided for, this country has 45 and Germany 46, but the aggregate tonnage for the United States is 659,241 as against 654,334. Germany, however, has a larger number of small vessels than this country, and her total tonnage is 820,692, as against 785,687 for the United States. Germany's superiority in respect to all vessels is due largely to her torpedo destroyers, of which she has 97 as against our 36. Germany also outnumbers us in the matter of large guns, the number being 208 as against 180.

Of the fighting vessels built and in operation the American tonnage is 75,000 tons in excess of that of Germany. Great Britain is shown to possess 161 fighting ships, with a total tonnage of 1,480,080. France has [illegible] fighting vessels, but her tonnage is more than 100,000 tons less than that of either the United States or Germany. The difference is due to the fact that an exceptionally large proportion of her ships are cruisers.

The American vessels are the only ones carrying 13-inch guns and the German vessels the only ones carrying 11-inch guns. All of the big guns on British ships are 12-inch. Thirty-two of our guns are of the 13-inch calibre.

The year book also shows a total appropriation of $1,416,138,548 for the construction of the new navy since it began in 1883. Of this amount considerably more than one-third has been appropriated in the last five years. The largest appropriation ever recorded was made last year and was $136,935,199. The largest appropriation prior to the Spanish war was $31,541,654, in 1891.

Maxine Elliott to Play at Daly's.

Maxine Elliott will not be able to occupy her own theatre when she comes to New York in her new play, "Deborah of Tod's," on Jan. 3. Her brother-in-law, Forbes Robertson, is doing so well in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" that Miss Elliott has expressed her unwillingness to interrupt his run, so she will bring her new play to Daly's Theatre, driving Frank Daniels to the road, unless the Shuberts find another house available for him at that time. There are to be some other changes in the Shubert theatres about the same time. On Dec. 27 Clyde Fitch's last serious play, "The City," will be brought to the Lyric Theatre and "The Chocolate Soldier" will go to the Casino to continue its run, while Sam Bernard goes on tour. On Jan. 1 Lew Fields in "Old Dutch" will leave the Herald Square Theatre, to be replaced, on Jan. 6, by "The Jolly Bachelors."

Mary Shaw's Father Still Alive.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—An incorrect report was published here on Tuesday of the death in this city of Levi Shaw, father of Mary Shaw, the actress. Mr. Shaw is very ill, but was still alive at a late hour to-night. Miss Shaw was notified of her father's illness on Tuesday night and came on to Boston, where she will remain until there is a change in his condition.

"Gioconda" Repeated at Metropolitan.

"La Gioconda" was sung again at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The cast included Mmes. Destinn, Homer and Meitschik, and Messrs. Caruso and Amato. Mr. Toscanini conducted. The audience was very large.

DEMOCRATS ELECT MONEY.

He Is Chairman and Shively Vice Chairman of Senate Minority Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—At a caucus of the Democratic Senators this afternoon Senator Hernando De Soto Money of Mississippi was elected Chairman and Senator Benjamin F. Shively of Indiana Vice Chairman. Mr. Money will succeed Senator Culberson of Texas as minority leader, while Mr. Shively takes the place left vacant by Mr. Money's advancement.

Senator Money is 70 years old and his election as leader was considered a fitting termination for his years of prominent service in both houses. Mr. Money has a high reputation as a scholar, and on rare occasion has showed a perfect mastery of stinging sarcasm. He is without an enemy in his own party, and his election, to that extent, was a compromise between the factions.

According to the present alignment, the Bryan followers among the minority members of the upper house are grouped around Senator Stone as candidate for leader.

The opponents of Bryan just now look to Senator Bacon of Georgia, a State which has always stood out against the Peerless Leader. Senator Bacon had been mentioned prominently for the Chairmanship, but would not consent to be a candidate if it involved a contest with Senator Money.

Neither Senator Stone nor Senator Bacon has distinguished himself particularly, though both have fondness for speech.

OUR EAST GATE MINED.

Submarine Defenses Now in Deep Water at Entrance to Long Island Sound.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—After years of fruitless endeavor submarine mines have been planted in the deep waters of the "race" at the eastern entrance to Long Island Sound, and New York City is to-day better fortified against attack by sea than ever before. Announcement of the solution of this difficult problem was made to-day by Gen. Arthur Murray, Chief of the Coast Artillery, in his annual report to the Secretary of War.

Until recent experiments were made it was believed by army and navy officers that mines could not be planted in water deeper than 100 or 125 feet. It was found, however, by officers of the Coast Artillery that it was quite as easy to plant the mines in deep water as in shallow if heavy enough anchors were obtainable. So with anchors weighing 1,500 pounds mines were planted in the "race" at a depth of 125, then 200, and finally 300 feet. The complete submarine equipment for the "race" is now being prepared, and will be in place soon.

EARLY STILL IN QUARANTINE.

Railroad Demands $113 for Bringing Supposed Leper to New York.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Troubles seem to pile up ahead of John R. Early, who has been held here as a leper, as fast as his counsel can break them down. Early expected to leave Washington to-day a free man to go to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York for examination. This arrangement was made by his counsel with the health authorities yesterday and Surgeon General Wyman of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, gave a permit for Early's transportation to New York, with the health authorities of the States of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey, through which he will have to pass, concurring.

When the railroad companies were approached a new objection appeared in the rates they intend to charge for Early's transportation. The Pennsylvania Railroad decided to furnish a baggage car to Early for $113, which is the sum of twenty-five single fares from Washington to New York. The railroad claims this is the regular rate for a special car and the law prohibits Early's transportation in any other.

To-day, Early drew all his back pension, $196.80, which is all the money he has in the world, he says, and he doesn't want to pay nearly all of it to get to New York. Early's counsel then turned to the Baltimore & Ohio and negotiations with that company are now in progress.

Meanwhile, Early is still quarantined on the Government reservation in the little brick house he occupied during his long incarceration last year.

J. C. S. BLACKBURN RESIGNS.

Ex-Senator Gives Up His Place on the Isthmian Commission.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—It was announced to-day at the War Department that ex-Senator J. C. S. Blackburn had resigned as a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and that his resignation had been accepted by President Taft, effective Dec. 4.

Mr. Blackburn had been a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission since April 1, 1907.

HILL URGES BETTER FARMING.

Must Increase Yield to Support Coming Population, He Says.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 9.—"Give us a system of farming in the United States which shall greatly increase the productiveness of the soil," advised James J. Hill in an address before the National Corn Exposition here to-day.

Mr. Hill warned the congress that the time is not far distant when the farms as tilled at present will not feed the people of the country.

"We have to transform a growing decline in value and productivity of our soil under continued cultivation into a rapid increase in both," he said. "If the crisis can be seen moving upon us now, and if it took Great Britain over half a century to raise her wheat yield from about fifteen bushels to thirty-two bushels per acre, we have no time to lose.

"All that is needed to turn an impending deficit into a surplus, to support in plenty 150 or more persons to the square mile in the United States, is the use instead of the abuse of the soil; the practice of that knowledge which agricultural schools and experiment stations have already formulated and are daily putting before the people."

The American Breeders' Association also met here to-day. Addresses were made by Prof. W. J. Shillman of Washington, President Waters of the Kansas Agricultural College, and W. M. Hayes, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

DEATH OF CHARLES BAMFORD.

Former New York Newspaper Man Was a Suicide Near Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 9.—The man who killed himself in a lonely field east of the city last Friday has been identified as Charles Bamford, formerly on the staff of The New York World. The identification was made just as the Coroner had ordered his burial here. The body will be sent to New York.

Mr. Bamford was formerly a well-known newspaper man in this city. After about ten years' service in morning newspaper work he retired to engage in stock speculation in Wall Street. For some time he was successful in his operations, but a few weeks ago is said to have met with reverses.

Following his losses Mr. Bamford's health became impaired and he was advised to spend some time in the South. He leaves a widow, who lives in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn.

CONGRESS TO ACT FOR WATERWAYS

"Something Is Doing," Taft Tells Delegates, Promising Important Steps Will Be Taken.

OPPONENTS ARE WON OVER

Secretary Nagel Says to Rivers and Harbors Convention That Government Should Do the Work.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Assurances that steps of an important character toward the development of a system of waterway improvements in the heart of the country would be taken by the present Congress were given by President Taft to delegations which he received in the White House this afternoon. To perhaps 300 committeemen representing the Ohio Valley Improvement Association the President promised to bring what influence he could in favor of the improvement of the Ohio. Later, to the committee of 500 from the New Orleans Lakes-to-Gulf Deep Waterways Convention he said that "something is doing," and that the interest of those in Congress who heretofore have turned a cold shoulder to the entire subject of waterway improvement had been aroused.

Mr. Taft expressed to the Ohio delegation regret that his remarks before the Rivers and Harbors Congress yesterday had "cast a wet blanket" over the convention, and said that he had merely intended to help the gathering along by pointing out the practical method of accomplishing the object desired. "When you approach Congress with a proposal for the issuing of bonds," argued the President, "you are going to arouse great opposition, which will rise up and demand why, and they will demand an answer not in general expressions, not in resounding oratory, but they will want facts and estimates and a statement of something definitely useful into which they are going to put their money, which they may even have to borrow in order to carry through the enterprise. You in the Ohio Valley have an enterprise in respect to which you can give the sufficient answers."

The object of the visit of the Ohio Valley delegation to the White House was to enlist the President's support for a nine-foot channel from Pittsburg to Cairo, all the year round. The President's response was encouraging.

Four Governors and two ex-Governors headed the committee of five hundred, which had been charged by the New Orleans convention to present to the President resolutions asking for a fourteen-foot channel for the Mississippi. Governor Deneen of Illinois presented the resolution and the President replied in part:

"I hope that we are all engaged in a work in which we stand shoulder to shoulder without respect to a particular locality, and that if you gentlemen who are interested in a particular improvement find that your view may not be entirely met and that your particular project may not be the first one taken up in a substantial way, it will not prevent your welcoming a step by Congress that when taken means the embracing of every improvement that ought to commend itself to those who are familiar with Congress."

Mr. Taft said that he had been assured by members of committees which have such legislation in charge that the whole matter of waterway improvement would receive earnest consideration during the present session.

An experience meeting, in which more than a dozen delegates to the convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress told what they thought about the policy of improving the waterways of the country, and the methods that should be pursued, characterized the meeting of that organization to-day. One of the strongest pleas for National improvement of the waterways was made by Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, who declared that the very nature of inter-State navigation made the National Government responsible for providing suitable water courses for carrying on commerce. Neither private enterprise nor State appropriations could be permitted to improve these highways of the Nation, he said, so that if they were to be looked after at all the General Government would have to do it.

SCOTTI RUMPLED OVER 'TOSCA'

Baritone's Explanatory Telegram to Baltimore Angers Metropolitan Directors.

Just at present there is considerable feeling, it is said, between the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House and Antonio Scotti. The trouble reached an open issue on Tuesday of this week, when the baritone sent the following telegram to Baltimore, where he was announced to appear as Iago in "Otello":

"Will you kindly inform the public that my not singin in 'Otello' to-morrow night is not my wish, as the Metropolitan requests me to sing 'Tosca' in Philadelphia?"

After the publication of this telegram in the Baltimore papers and Mr. Scotti's return from Philadelphia, there are said to have been several angry passages between the baritone and his directors yesterday at the Metropolitan.

The trouble all arose over "Tosca," which seems destined to be the bone of operatic contention this season. Miss Farrar, it will be remembered, made her first appearance in the rôle when the opera was first presented this season at the Metropolitan. Mmes. Fremstad, Destinn, and Noria in the meanwhile eagerly awaited their turns to play the part.

It was finally decided that Mme. Fremstad should sing the opera last Tuesday at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia. As it was to be the first time that she had sung the rôle on any stage, the management decided that it would be better not to introduce a new Scarpia on the same night, although both Messrs. Amato and Gilly know the rôle, and Mr. Amato is to sing it on Saturday night here. Consequently, Mr. Scotti was told that he would not sing Iago in Baltimore, but Scarpia in Philadelphia instead. He was also asked to come to a rehearsal, the only stage rehearsal which was given to Mme. Fremstad, on Sunday morning. This the baritone is said to have refused to do, claiming that he was perfectly able to sing the part and suggesting that Mme. Fremsad rehearse with either Mr. Gilly or Mr. Amato.

As Mme. Fremstad was not singing with either of these baritones the management decided, it is said, that Mr. Scotti had better attend the rehearsal. So he did, and he also sang in Philadelphia in no very good humor, as his telegram to Baltimore testifies. Amato will sing with Mme. Fremstad on Saturday evening of this week at the Metropolitan, and on Friday evening of next week Mr. Scotti and Miss Farrar will sing the principal rôles.

HALF A MILLION FOR YALE.

Entire Estate of Charles H. Farnum, Jr., to Go to University.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 9.—By the will of the late Charles H. Farman, Jr., filed in the Probate Court here to-day, an estate estimated at about half a million dollars is left to Yale University to be used for buildings for the Sheffield Scientific School.

By the terms of the will the widow, Mrs. Ruth Stanley Farnam, will have life use of the property, and on her death the university will get it absolutely.

THE BOSTON ORCHESTRA.

A Repetition of d'Indy's Second Symphony—Mme. Samaroff, Soloist.

The chief number upon the programme of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's second evening concert, which took place last evening, was Vincent d'Indy's second symphony in B flat. Mr. Fiedler had just treated Boston to two repetitions of this work within a month, and apparently stands as its champion. It had been twice heard here before from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, once under Mr. Gericke's direction and again under Mr. d'Indy's; both performances were in 1905.

The performance last night was an extraordinarily fine one; it was characterized truly by fervent devotion on the part of everybody concerned in it, and by a minutely perfect mastery of difficulties and complications that are in certain points very considerable. Yet this minute perfection did not interfere with the sweep and freedom of the performance. It was much finer in almost every way than the one that Mr. d'Indy himself conducted.

There are those to whom the outgivings of the modern French composers are as the preludings of a new birth of music. To them d'Indy's symphony presents the quintessence of a new and unfamiliar beauty. Did it present any deeper significance last evening to the general body of intelligent music lovers than it did four years ago? It may be much doubted; and yet in that time they have become much familiarized with the idiom in which d'Indy chose to write. When the symphony was first heard here it appeared a dark saying.

THE TIMES then said that "what is not comprehended to-day may gain clearness and significance when the idiom and the intention of the composer are more fully grasped." The gain that this work has made in clearness and significance to those who hear it to-day is not very great. There is still very much in it that is unmeaning cacophony, a striving after something that is unrealized or unrealizable, a deliberate seeking after new effects that never entered the ken of musicians of the older days. It is d'Indy the cerebral that speaks here chiefly.

It is an elaborate structure built upon a community, development, and transformation of a few themes, some of which appear in all four movements. The modern Frenchmen greatly affect the augmented intervals, that sound peculiarly discordant to the old-fashioned ear, except as passing dissonances, and d'Indy, who piles them one upon the other, has done nothing to mollify their distressful sound. The modern Frenchmen also affect melodic intervals based on what is called the "whole note scale," and the symphony is full of them. They also grate on the aforesaid old-fashioned ear.

It is possible to use these things with effects of real beauty and recondite suggestiveness, as Debussy showed in "Pelléas et Mélisande," but Mr. d'Indy seeks for no mollification. He seems to be one who would reconstitute our ears and force the acceptance of these sounds that now seem so malignant. They may succeed—the human ear has been forced to accept many things in the last three centuries at which it once rebelled. But measured by this symphony there has not been much progress in the last four years.

There are fine passages in this work; they were recognized as such at the previous performances; passages of fine harmony and richly varied orchestral effect, and in which certain of the unpromising thematic materials are wrought into noble and connectedly developed utterance. But these are not, unfortunately, the ruling passages. They are, it may be noted, precisely those in which the composer drops for the moment the obsession of his harmonic and melodic formulas. Of the profound seriousness of this symphony and of the composer's purpose in it there can be no doubt. Only so much the clearer is the difficulty, it makes for even the open-minded listener.

Mme. Olga Samaroff appeared to play Schumann's concerto for piano and orchestra. It was not a performance that did much credit to her poetic feeling, her sympathy with Schumann's intensely romantic spirit, as it is embodied in this, one of the most poetic of all piano concertos. Mme. Samaroff's touch was hard, her interpretation unyielding, and pedestrian. She has played much better than this in New York, and doubtless will again. Her performance was a disappointment to those who have admired her better playing.

Far away from Indy and also from Schumann and their serious strivings was Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite for orchestra that ended the programme. Entirely jocose in intention, it has much that is amusing, much that is striking, much that is very pretty and graceful. It aroused much applause.

German Company in 'The Gipsy Baron.'

The comic opera stock company at the Irving Place Theatre appeared last night in Johann Strauss's operetta, "Der Zigeunerbaron," ("The Gipsy Baron.") The principal rôles were taken by Remy Marsano, Oscar Penke, Emil Greder, Heinrich de Carro, Elsa Bostel, Lina Haenseler, Hans Dobers, Georgine Neuendorff, and Hedwig Richard.

HOOKWORM IN ARMY WORST IN RECRUITS

Surgeon General's Report Declares It Does Not Seriously Affect Service's Efficiency.

SOUTHERNERS LESS ROBUST

Taller Than Other Recruits, but Under Weight—Over 50 Per Cent. Have Disease on First Enlistment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—"In spite of its vast economic importance in the Southern States, the hookworm disease is believed not to affect greatly the health and efficiency of the army," says Surgeon Gen. Torney after a more or less extensive investigation into the prevalence and severity of the disease in the service.

All the observers have noted, declares Gen. Torney in his annual report, submitted to the Secretary of War to-day, that in many cases the infection has no evident effect upon the health or appearance of the individual. Microscopic examinations are necessary to reveal the disease in mild cases. The duration of the disease was one of the features which the military investigators sought to bring out. Observations made by Major Chamberlain at Jackson Barracks, Mississippi, showed that out of 44 Southern-bred recruits 68 per cent. were infected; out of 57 southern-bred soldiers in first enlistment 54 per cent. were infected, and out of 34 Southern-bred soldiers in second, or subsequent, enlistment only 15 per cent. were infected.

Statistics on this point were obtained from an examination of the army of Cuban pacification. Of the 24 cases of infection reported where the length of service of the individual was given 16 were in their first enlistment, 4 were in the second, and 4 had served more than two enlistments.

In an examination of Southern recruits at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and at Jackson Barracks by Capt. Siler and Major Chamberlain 139 infections were found in 168 men examined.

"Capt. Siler and Major Chamberlain agree that the physique of the Southern recruits is less vigorous and robust," says the report, "than is the case with those from other parts of the country, and they attribute this to the injurious influence of this infection in childhood and adolescence. The latter shows that the absolute weight of Southern recruits is less than those from the North, although the former are taller, and that the weight of the infected individuals is less than that of those not infected."

Gen. Torney, however, says that the statistics given by Major Chamberlain deal with numbers too small for safe deductions. The heights and weights of Southern recruits given by him are above the average of white recruits for the whole army for the whole year, and the fact that the weight to height proportion is less than for Northern recruits may be due to racial or other causes, among which a less admixture of recent European immigrants may be a factor. A further study of this question with large numbers will prove of interest.

FEUD AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Kentucky Politicians at War Over Appointment of Federal Official.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The White House was the scene of the outbreak of a Kentucky political feud to-day. The feudists are Representative Edwards, on one side, and Senator Bradley and Representatives Langley and Bennett on the other. The fight is being waged over the appointment of a United States attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky. Mr. Edwards is championing the cause of H. C. Eversole of Booneville, who has the support of the Knott faction of Republicans, while Senator Bradley and his two house followers, are espousing the candidacy of Louis Walker of Lancaster.

Mr. Edwards urged the President to-day to appoint his man, and the other Kentucky faction is up in arms.

District Attorney Applies for Extradition Papers Against ex-President Sheldon—Doctor Says He Can't Be Moved.

Assistant District Attorney Nott announced yesterday that extradition papers had been applied for in the case of George P. Sheldon, ex-President of the Phenix Insurance Company, against whom an indictment was found by the Grand Jury for grand larceny of $45,000 of the funds of the company. No attempt to arrest Mr. Sheldon at his home in Greenwich, Conn., would be made for the present, Mr. Nott said, owing to a letter received at the District Attorney's office yesterday from Dr. Samuel Lambert of 130 East Thirty-fifth Street, who has been attending the former President, and who said that his patient was suffering from myocarditis, a heart affection, and that he was delirious at times and in no condition to be moved. Mr. Nott said he thought Mr. Sheldon was dying, but that steps had been taken to prevent his departure from his home in case he recovered.

With regard to further indictments of officials of the insurance company or former State insurance officials in connection with the recent disclosures, Mr. Nott said no action could be taken by his office until further evidence was supplied by State Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss.

At the office of the Insurance Department in this city, Deputy Supt. Fowler declared that the investigation of the Phenix Company was still being carried on, but that no announcement concerning it could be made. He said that various other insurance companies were being investigated. Some 250 co-operative fire insurance companies, he said, which had hitherto been required merely to file a perfunctory statement with the department annually, have been required by the new law to submit their books for examination by the department upon demand. The policyholders of these co-operative companies, through assessment of whom the losses are paid, have in many cases, he said, failed to pay their assessments. Of the 250 companies 158 have been examined by the department, according to Mr. Fowler, and eight are now in the hands of the State Department for liquidation.

The Phenix Company had not been examined for twenty-two years prior to the recent disclosures. Such a procedure, Mr. Fowler said, was not altogether unusual. He named a number of other fire insurance companies which had not been examined in recent years, together with the dates on which they were last examined. They were the Niagara, Sept. 30, 1897; the Agricultural, (Watertown,) Dec 31, 1898; the Home, Dec. 31, 1900; the Commercial Union, Dec. 31, 1900; the Continental, Dec. 31, 1900, and the Queen, Dec. 31, 1900. The Mutual Insurance Company of Albany, which was examined on Dec. 9, 1898, and the Commerce Company of Albany, which was examined on Oct. 31, 1900, were also examined this year. All the foreign fire insurance companies have been examined since 1904.

Deputy Supt. Fowler declared that the companies were not always examined by the department according to the date of their last examination. Among the companies now in course of examination he named the Phenix, the Great Eastern Casualty Company, the St. Lawrence Life Insurance Association, the Metropolitan Life, and the Fidelity and Casualty Company. The examinations, he said, were due to a variety of causes, increase in capital, change of charter, and the like.

Mr. Fowler said he had no comment to make on the reported statement of former Deputy Supt. of Insurance Robert H. Hunter at Poughkeepsie, denying that $60,040 had been loaned to him by the Phenix Company, as charged by Supt. Hotchkiss, and saying that he had received only $35,000 as a personal loan from Mr. Sheldon upon ample collateral of stocks and bonds.

E. W. T. Gray, who succeeded Mr. Sheldon as President of the Phenix Company, and Henry Evans, President of the Continental Insurance Company, who has been made Chairman of the Executive Board of the Phenix, had no further statement about the investigation to make yesterday.

SPOKE FOR INSURANCE MEN.

Sheldon Upheld Vanderpoel and Hunter at Kelsey Hearing.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 9.—George P. Sheldon, who was indicted for alleged irregularities in his administration as President of the Phenix Fire Insurance Company, was one of the witnesses before the Senate Judiciary Committee in the proceedings following the recommendation made by Gov. Hughes in 1907 for the removal from office of Otto Kelsey, State Superintendent of Insurance.

Mr. Sheldon testified that he had the fullest confidence in Robert H. Hunter and Isaac Vanderpoel, ex-Deputy Superintendent and chief examiner, respectively, in the Insurance Department, who were mentioned recently by Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss as having obtained loans from the Phenix Company. "I think I voice the general sentiment of the officials of insurance companies," he said, "in saying that they had the confidence of all the fire insurance company officers."

HUNTER DEFENDS LOAN.

Money Advanced Was a Transaction Between Friends, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Dec. 9.—Postmaster Robert H. Hunter has finally decided to make a statement explaining his loan transactions with George P. Sheldon, ex-President of the Phenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn. He says that while he was First State Deputy Superintendent of Insurance he accepted a loan from Mr. Sheldon of $35,000, and not $60,040, as reported. As security for the money advanced he turned over 100 shares of Consolidated Gas, 100 shares of Amalgamated Copper, which he was carrying on a falling market, and $2,500 of the debenture bonds of the Consolidated Gas Company, for which he had subscribed.

Postmaster Hunter declares that Mr. Sheldon had long been his personal friend, and when the fall in the market made it advisable for him to take his stocks out of the hands of brokers, he talked the matter over with Mr. Sheldon with the idea of obtaining a loan from a bank. Mr. Sheldon offered to advance the money needed, to which Postmaster Hunter said he demurred on account of the impropriety of such a loan from the Phenix Company while he was a Deputy Superintendent of Insurance. Mr. Sheldon declared that he would take care of the matter personally, and the company would have nothing to do with it, and the loan was finally made on this basis.

Last Spring Postmaster Hunter says that he was advised by Mr. Sheldon to sell his Consolidated Gas stock, which he did. On Oct. 1, 1909, he received a statement from Mr. Sheldon shoking a balance due of $10,331, against which he had as collateral 100 shares of Amalgamated Copper, which at its present price would chow a deficiency of $1,600. A month ago Postmaster Hunter declared he was in New York to see Mr. Sheldon, with the idea of paying teh balance due and taking the stock to sell it, as it was then worth $6, or carrying it in one of the Poughkeepsie banks, but Mr. Sheldon was out of town and nothing was done.

"Whatever loss there is in this transaction," Postmaster Hunter said, "is not a loss to the Phenix Company, or to the policy holders, or even to Mr. Sheldon, but my own loss."

Regarding the publication of a statement that the stock held by Mr. Sheldon was sold out in 1907 at a loss of $18,000, Mr. Hunter said that he did not know what Mr. Sheldon had done in recent years.

"If he was carrying the account with a broker," he suggested, "he may have put up these stocks with stocks of his own as collateral, but my transaction was with him personally, and I presume that he still has the 100 shares of Amalgamated Copper, which I am ready to take up at any time."

Postmaster Hunter asserts that he has receipts, checks showing payments and letters from Mr. Sheldon, which he will submit to substantiate the facts to the managers of the Phenix Company. He further calls attention to the fact that at the time he got the loan from Mr. Sheldon the latter stood high with the State Insurance Department, and there was no suggestion at any time of any investigation of the Phenix Insurance Company.

"It had not been investigated since 1887," explained Postmaster Hunter, "and I came into the department in 1897. We did not then often investigate strong companies, but were engaged in cleaning up the weak ones."

BRINCKERHOFF'S NIECE POOR.

He Has Been 32 Years in Asylum, and She Asks Support from His Estate.

Louise B. Armstrong applied to Supreme Court Justice McCall yesterday for an allowance of $50 a week out of the estate of her uncle, Edwin O. Brinckerhoff, who was long ago adjudged incompetent to manage his own affairs. She says that she is the only daughter of Mr. Brinckerhoff's sister and gives her age as fifty-seven. Her husband died many years ago and left her with four children and no means of support. She was compelled to do needlework to support the family and she says that her earnings were so small that she had to work until two and three o'clock in the morning by candle or lamp light. Her eyesight was impaired by this work, she says, and her eyes are now practically useless. She says that she has no means of support at the present time and that she needs medicine.

Mrs. Armstrong says that her uncle is a bachelor, 78 years old; that he has been in Bloomingdale Asylum for 32 years and that he will never recover. She says that he was kind and generous to her mother, who loaned him money at one time and that he would now return the loan with interest if he knew of her plight. According to Mrs. Armstrong Brinckerhoff's estate on Dec. 31 last amounted to $239,767 and was constantly increasing.

Thomas O. Ollive, who is committee of the Brinckerhoff estate, in an affadavit says that it is immaterial to him whether Mrs. Armstrong is given the allowance she asks, but he suggested to the Court that a referee be appointed to verify her story.

Justice McCall appointed James Ridgway referee.

OFFERS DEFENSE FOR CREDITINDEMNITY CO.

General Agent Treat's Explanation of Acts Which Insurance Authorities Condemned.

OVERDRAFTS PAID IN FULL

Charges of Excessive Dividends to Inflate Stock Values, He Says, Were in Disallowance of Capital Increase.

Charges made by State Superintendent of Inspurance Hotchkiss, acting in co-operation with Frank H. Hardison, Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts, that the American Credit Indemnity Company of 302 Broadway, which was recently ordered to reduce its capital from $1,000,000 to $350,000, had made improper expenditures, declared excessive dividends to establish a fcititious value for its stock, and made misleading reports to the Insurance Departments, as well as permitted its former President, Sidney M. Phelan, and other officers to overdraw their accounts, were discussed yesterday by Alfred B. Treat, general agent of the company, who sought to explain away some of the strictures, while admitting the justice of others.

Mr. Treat admitted that S. M. Phelan, the former President of the company, had overdrawn his account to the extent of about $30,000 in 1906, but said that he had repaid the amount on Dec. 31, 1906. Other officials, he said, who might have overdrawn their accounts had also made clean settlements.

Both Mr. Phelan and Samuel D. Winter, one of the Directors, resigned on Aug. 31 of this year and were succeeded in the Directorate by Julius J. Schotten and G. G. Duffy. It was these resignations, Mr. Treat said, that led the Insurance Departments of New York and Massachusetts to order the investigation of the company begun in St. Louis on Sept. 9.

Lost on an "Inside" Deal.

Mr. Treat denied the charge that the company in 1902 absorbed at an overrated valuation a Louisiana company of the same name, in which Phelan, Winter, and other Directors of the company were interested to the detriment of the New York company and those subsequently entering it. The Insurance Department found that a commission of $50,000 was paid by the company to the syndicate which brought about the absorption and which, rather than the company, should have borne the expense. Mr. Treat declared that the men "inside" the Louisiana company had lost rather than gained through the transaction.

"Our company started in business in Louisiana," he said. "Later, in 1893, when we entered New York, it was found necessary to reorganize under the laws of New York, which required a minimum paid-in capital of $200,000 instead of $150,000, as in Louisiana. In this reorganization the 'insiders' in the Louisiana company lost considerably by the transfer of their stock, which they had purchased at $260 a share, and which was retired at a considerably depreciated value. It cost the company $125,000 to retire it."

It was further charged that the American Credit Indemnity Company had sought to establish a fictitious value for its stock by declaring large dividends, as, for example, 43 per cent. in 1902, when the Louisiana concern was absorbed, and 15 per cent in 1908, following the panic year, when, in the opinion of the department, no dividend should have been thought of. This Mr. Treat explained as follows:

"Our capital stock was increased from $200,000 to $800,000 in 1901. After the increase in 1902 a dividend of $86,000 was paid on the $800,000 capital. The Insurance Department, however, insists that we had no right to issue the dividend on the basis of the business for that year, but that the dividend should apply on the business done with the earlier $200,000 capital stock, on which basis the dividend would be, as charged, 43 per cent. Technically, therefore, the objection may be justified."

Company Misled Itself Also.

In 1903 the capital stock of the company was increased to $1,000,000. The reduction of the capital from this sum to $350,000 and the diverting of the difference to the reserve fund was ordered by the Insurance Department as a result of finding that the company in its annual reports had misled not only the departments but itself as well, by keeping open its books annually until Jan. 20 and adding the cash income of this period to the cash on hand on Dec. 31; by discounting premium notes and reporting them as cash; by understating the aggregate of premium income from policies "not taken" and the gross premiums on policies in force, thereby materially reducing the amount of the required reserves. Instead of the surplus to policy holders, reported on Dec. 31, 1908, as $1,178,090, the insurance examiners found the real surplus on the basis of the New York law, and without loss to reserves on account of policies in force, was but $618,889.

Mr. Treat explained the reduction of capital stock and the addition to the reserve ordered by the insurance department by saying that after the examination the department had required the company to carry 50 per cent. additional reserve, and refused to admit certain assets which had before that time been allowed. The strengthened reserve, he said, now amounting to $1,295,000, with a surplus of $360,119, would afford stronger protection than before to the policy holders. He implied that he had reason to believe that a similar order would shortly be extended to other competing insurance companies, but this theory could not be verified at the office of State Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss, where it was said by Deputy Superintendent Fowler that any additional information concerning the company would come from Albany.

Mr. Treat said he knew nothing of improper disbursements made in advance to agents who were earning no commissions, or to an agent to enable him to meet his obligations to the intra-directorate syndicate, as charged in the report of the Insurance Superintendent.

The American Credit Indemnity Company has its main office in St. Louis, with branches in various other cities. It has done a business of insuring merchants who sold on credit against loss through the failure or dishonesty of their customers or through other causes. Its Directors are mainly St. Louis merchants, including Samuel M. Kennard, A. L. Shapleigh, C. E. Udell, A. D. Brown, Murray Carleton, and John A. Holmes.

ROB JEWELRY SALESWOMAN.

Allen Charged with Taking Gems Valued at $3,800 After Drugging Girl.

Archibald L. Allen, a piano salesman of 23 Mercer Street, Jersey City, was arrested yesterday at the instance of Lieut. Connor of the New York Detective Bureau, on suspicion of having knowledge of an alleged $3,800 jewel robbery committed in Manhattan on Nov. 5. A $500 diamond ring and other valuable articles of jewelry were found in his possession.

Grace Fair, an automobile demonstrator of 16 West Sixtieth Street, identified Allen as a young man with whom she kept an appointment on Nov. 5. Allen, she says, agreed to meet her and Miss Blanche Frazer, a jewelry saleswoman, with a friend of his own. Miss Frazer, who kept the appointment with the friend, complained to the police on Nov. 6 that she had been robbed of $3,800 worth of jewelry by him. Miss Frazer is now in Atlanta, Ga.

After dinner on Nov. 5 the young man asked Miss Frazer, she says, to accompany him to a house at 359 West Twenty-third street, to get his overcoat. While in the house, she charges, a drug was administered to her and she was robbed of the jewelry.

Allen denies he ever met Miss Fair.

OIL SHIP FOUNDERS; HALF HER CREW LOST

Standard Company Hears the Johanna Sank at Sea While on the Way Here.

CAPTAIN OF SHIP SAVED

Had a Crew of 23—Capt. Nickerson, Making His First Trip as Commander, Landed in San Domingo.

The British ship Johanna, loaded with sugar from Iloilo, Philippine Islands, for Philadelphia, has foundered at sea. Half of her crew of twenty-three are missing, and are believed to have perished. A cable message giving only a brief account of the disaster was received by the Marine Department of the Standard Oil Company here yesterday. The message came from Capt. C. A. Nickerson of the Johanna, and announced that he and the starboard watch had been saved. The message came from Samana, San Domingo, where the survivors had been landed.

The Johanna was the first vessel commanded by Capt. Nickerson. She sailed from Iloilo on April 27. On Aug. 17 she put into Port Natal with torn sails and short of provisions. She sailed from there on Aug. 21, and since then has been spoken but once. The steamer Eva, for Philadelphia, reported having passed the Johanna on Dec. 3, 230 miles south. The vessel was then in no trouble.

Capt. Nickerson won his command by his seamanship displayed while third mate of the steamer Schuylkill. In January, 1907, while the Schuylkill was at Formosa, Capt. Nicholas, her commander, died and the chief officer broke his leg. Nickerson, then second officer, assumed command of the ship and took her to Foo Chow, China. For this he and the third mate were presented with gold watches and formally thanked by the Standard Oil Company. It was not many months after this that Nickerson, promoted to Captain, obtained command of the Johanna.

Capt. Nickerson in his message gives no details of the loss of the ship, nor does it tell how the survivors reached shore. It was in cipher and was interpreted to mean that there was no doubt as to the safety of at least half of the crew. It is supposed that the other half of the crew were in charge of Chief Officer A. W. Wyman. No word has been received as to his safety, but the officials of the Standard Oil Company hope that the missing men may have been picked up by a passing craft, or will soon reach one of the West Indian Islands in their own boat.

The Johanna was built at Ablasserdam in 1891 for the Anglo-American Oil Company of London. She was 1,622 tons register, 243 feet long, 23 feet beam. Her commander, Capt. Nickerson, though a Nova Scotian, lives at 139 Washington Avenue, Chelsea, Mass. He is a brother of Capt. Nickerson of the bark Daylight. Chief Officer Wyman lives at 8 Rogers Avenue, West Somerset, Mass. The second officer is H. Wallace, Steward, E. R. Dyatt; Sailmaker, O. Gaelberg, and Carpenter, A. Smitton.

She carried a crew of twenty-three men.

SNOW FRAUD CASE FAILS.

Indictment Against Contractor MacBean Dismissed for Lack of Evidence.

The indictment charging T. Leonard MacBean with grand larceny in connection with the street-cleaning frauds was dismissed by Judge Swann in General Sessions yesterday on the ground that there had been insufficient evidence to warrant it.

The firm of Daly & MacBean, contractors, at 21 Park Row, was among those said to have been involved by the discovery last March that false snow-removal tickets had been issued to truckmen and cashed at the Street Cleaning Department, with the result that the city was sometimes paying twice for snow that was never cleared away at all. The arrest of MacBean followed upon the testimony of one of these truckmen, named Jacobs, to the effect that he had turned over some of the fraudulent tickets to MacBean.

Judge Swann said that while it appeared that Jacobs had entered into a conspiracy with certain truckmen and certain employees of the Department of Street Cleaning, and that some of these fraudulent tickets were cashed by the defendant at Jacob's request and turned into the Department, there was "no legal testimony that the defendant had guilty knowledge of the corrupt agreement," between Jacobs and the others.

Seven men were arrested under similar indictments and it is thought that further dismissals will follow.

WATER FAMINE AT MINES.

Production of Anthracite Near Wilkesbarre May Be Stopped.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 9.—Anthracite coal operators are worried by the water famine at their collieries, which is made the more serious by the freezing weather of to-day and yesterday and the outlook for a long, cold spell. At present they are barely getting enough water for their boilers by extreme efforts, hauling most of it for many miles in tank cars at a cost, it is estimated, of some $12,000 a day. In addition to this, some of the companies are using water which they pump from their mines but which, owing to chemicals in it, is destructive to the boilers. They say, however, that they can do nothing else, as there is such a demand for coal that they have to keep the collieries working.

The belief was expressed that unless there is relief soon many of the collieries will have to shut down, as the cold will freeze up present sources of supply. General Manager S. D. Warriner of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, said to-day: "Probably few outsiders understand how serious a condition confronts the anthracite mining companies. The condition is becoming more serious every day. Our company is hauling on railroad cars a million gallons of water a day to its various collieries in the Lehigh region."

Virtually all of the coal companies in the region are affected.

BERNSTORFF SPEECH VIEWED WITH REGRET

Went Out of Way to Degrade Pan-Germans, Liberal Leader Tells Reichstag.

OFFICIAL DEFENSE LIKELY

Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg in Maiden Reichstag Speech Says Government Is Aloof from Parties.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Count von Bernstorff's Philadelphia speech figured in the opening debate on foreign affairs in the Reichstag this afternoon. Herr Bassermann, leader of the National Liberals, declared that although he himself was not a Pan-German he recognized that the Pan-German Party was actuated by motives of high patriotism. This being so, he viewed with boundless regret the spectacle of a German Ambassador going out of his way to degrade the Pan-Germans before a foreign audience in a foreign country.

The correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES learns, that either the Chancellor or the Foreign Secretary is likely to embrace an early opportunity of defending Ambassador Bernstorff publicly in the Reichstag against the attacks which have latterly been leveled against him in this country.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the silent Chancellor, as he has been called, delivered his maiden speech in the Reichstag to-day. In simple language, and with a matter of fact manner, he set forth that the imperial government's policy was to stand aloof from parties and groups of parties; in short, that the Government of Germany was not a government by party.

Governmental measures would be submitted to the Reichstag for adoption, said the Chancellor, but he was not disposed to define the constellation of parties which he thought would support these measures.

The recent political crisis over the Taxation bill had made no change in German institutions, he continued. Radicalism strove to divide all Germany into two political camps, but the existence of such a dualism was a fiction devised for party objects. It could not contribute to the sound development of the country for every proposal to be classified as either radical or reactionary. Germany needed continuous and steady policies both at home and abroad to satisfy the people to the end that their work, either material or intellectual, might be undisturbed by disorders or experiments.

Dr. Bethmann gave an impression of strength. His view of a government without permanent party connections and his manner of expression were those of a strict bureaucrat. His voice lacked carrying power, his gestures were few and awkward, and his diction without a touch of fire, imagination, or humor, but his every word was placed with dry effectiveness. During the speech the Clericals and Conservatives applauded with animation, and the Radicals and Socialists from time to time uttered exclamations of disagreement and protest.

CHINA ANSWERS RUSSIA.

May Demand Withdrawal of Latter's Railway Guards from Manchuria.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 9.—The detailed protest of China against the Russian memorandum sent to the powers in October has been received here and shows that the Chinese Government declares specifically that the administration of affairs at Harbin and other points in Manchuria does not concern Russia. The protest also calls attention to the fact that the agreement of 1896 between China and the Russo-Chinese Bank creating the Chinese Eastern Railway as well as the Harbin agreement of last May yielded no administrative rights to Russia. On the contrary, the contract of 1896 intrusted the defense of the railroad to China.

It is thought that the protest may be a preliminary to a demand by China for the withdrawal of the Russian railroad guards in Manchuria. M. Kokovsoff, the Russian Minister of Finance, has long urged such a withdrawal, which would save the Government $5,000,000 annually, but the War and Foreign Offices have objected.

The protest corresponds closely with the text of the United States's answer to the Russian memorandum which was delivered early in November to M. Krouponsky, Counsellor of the Russian Embassy at Washington, who in the absence of Ambassador Rosen, was at the time Chargé d'Affaires.

NOBEL PRIZES AWARDED.

Marconi to Divide One—Winner of Peace Prize Not Announced.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—This year's Nobel prizes will be distributed as follows: For physics, divided between William Marconi and Prof. Ferdinand Braun of Strassburg; for chemistry, Prof. Wilhelm Ostwald of Leipsic; for physiology or medicine, Prof. Theodor Kocher of Berne; for literature, Selma Lagerlof, the Swedish authoress.

The Nobel prizes, which are worth about $40,000 each, are awarded annually to those persons who are considered to have conferred the greatest benefit on mankind during the preceding year in the fields specified in the cable dispatch, with the addition of one for the best effort toward the fraternity of nations and the promotion of peace. The recipient of the peace prize has not yet been made known.

The source of the prizes, the Nobel Foundation, was provided by the will of Dr. Alfred Bernhard Nobel, the Swedish engineer and chemist, who died in 1896.

William Marconi, who will divide the Nobel prize for physics, is a native of Bologna, Italy, where he was born on April 25, 1874. He was educated at the University of Bologna. He invented a wireless telegraph apparatus, which attracted the attention of Sir William Henry Preece, engineer and electrician in chief of the English Postal Telegraph, as early as 1890, and soon succeeded in sending messages from Spezia to a steamer at a distance of fifteen kilometers. In 1902 he succeded in establishing a wireless telegraphic system across the Atlantic, and two years later he inaugurated a daily ocean news service on trans-Atlantic steamers by wireless.

Prof. Ferdinand Braun is Director of Physics at the University of Strassburg. He was born at Fulda, Germany, on June 6, 1850, and was educated at the University of Berlin. From 1876 to 1883 he was professor at the University of Marbourg.

Prof. Wilhelm Ostwald, who received the Nobel prize for chemistry, was born at Riga in 1853. In 1887 he became Professor of Chemistry at Leipsic. As an investigator in connection with physical chemistry and chemical affinity he has become particularly well known. His researches have concerned, among numerous subjects, the electric conductivity of organic acids, and the color of ions. He has published several volumes on this and other scientific subjects.

Prof. Emil Theodor Kocher, who will receive the Nobel prize for physiology and medicine, is a Swiss surgeon. He is a native of Berne, where he was bzorn in 1841. He was educated there, and after studying at Berlin, Paris, and London became Professor of Surgery in the university of his native city and Director of the Surgical Clinic. His especial field is the thyroid gland.

LUNATIC MURDERS SHERIFF.

Posse Hunts for Escaped Madman and Homes Are Barricaded.

SHREVE, Ohio, Dec. 9.—A posse of armed citizens, after a day's search, was still beating the woods in the vicinity of Holmesville late to-night in search of Oscar E. Boley, a maniac, who, while resisting arrest, murdered Sheriff Jacob Bell of Holmes County this morning at Big Prairie.

Word has been sent to farmers throughout the countryside to protect themselves against possible assault by the man, and many have barricaded their doors and windows. Boley has a shotgun and twenty-four shells, and further violence is feared. He was last seen entering the woods near Holmesville.

Boley escaped from the Massillon State Hospital yesterday. Last night he attended prayer meeting at the Methodist Cuhrch, sitting in the congregation with a shotgun standing between his knees.

After church he went to the home of Roy Lee. Early to-day Sheriff Bell was sent for. He was met at the door by Boley, who tired Bell died an hour later.

After several hours' pursuit the posse caught sight of Boley in Paint Valley, eight miles from Big Prairie. An attempt was made to surround and capture him, but he eluded the members of the posse.

RAISED FARE IN WESTCHESTER

President of Road Says It Was Not with Approval of Service Board.

William Greenough, President of the Westchester Street Railroad Company, gave out this statement yesterday in regard to the increase in fare on that line: "Reports that the increase in fare on the Street Railroad line between Mamaroneck and White Plains had been approved by an order of the Public Service Commission is incorrect. The commission has taken no action regarding the matter. The increase was made by the Westchester Street Railroad Company on its own authority."

Mr. Greenough said also that the increase merely applied to the part of the line connecting White Plains and Mamaroneck.

AUNT'S SUIT THROWN OUT.

Miss Deutscher Brought Niece Here Without Parents' Knowledge.

Louis D. Deutscher, a Brooklyn tailor, won an action yesterday brought against him in Justice Platzek's part of the Supreme Court by Mrs. Gisa Deutscher for $638 "board and lodging" for his fifteen-year-old daughter, Marie. Miss Deutscher was sent by her parents in June, 1908, to Vienna, Austria, to take lessons on the violin. She lived there with her aunt, who brought the action.

This Spring unknown to her parents Miss Deutscher returned to America with her aunt, of whom she had grown very fond. Her own parents, who learned of her return only by accident, failed to persuade her to return home, and had her arrested on a technical charge before she would leave her aunt. A letter from the aunt saying that the care of Miss Deutscher was "a labor of love" was a factor in the verdict.

SUGAR TRUST HEADS NOT OUT OF DANGER

Government Renews Its Efforts to Find Grounds for Indicting Them.

NEW GRAND JURY AT WORK

Import Clerk Employed by the Trust Summoned to Give Testimony Before It.

It became evident yesterday when the December Grand Jury took up its work that the Government has by no means finished its efforts to indict some of those who were higher officers of the Sugar Trust during the period in which the weighing frauds were going on. The Grand Jury was sworn in before Judge Martin, who is sitting in the criminal branch of the United States Circuit Court for the trial of the six former employes of the trust, who are charged with complicity in the weighing frauds on the docks of the Havemeyer & Elder refinery in Williamsburg.

The jury started right out in pursuit of the Sugar Trust officials. John H. Thompson, an import clerk in the office of the trust at 117 Wall Street, was called as a witness and questioned as to the basis upon which the trust made its payments for sugar imported.

Thompson was a witness last week in the trial before Judge Martin, his testimony there having been the result of action by President Washington B. Thomas of the trust in bidding Thompson tell what he knew to the Government. At the time of his appearance last week, also, he was examined before the Grand Jury.

The story that Thompson told in court on the trial of the ex-employes showed that the main office of the sugar company was kept closely in touch with the weighing as conducted on the docks at Williamsburg, the consular invoices upon sugar imported being, as he said, sent to James F. Bendernagel at the refinery to be checked up with the weights recorded by the city weighers, and payment made accordingly.

Payment was made by the trust on the basis of the city weighers' records, which uniformly showed greater weights than the returns of the Government weighers, on which the duty was paid. It also appeared from Thompson's testimony that there were at times marked discrepancies between even the city weighers' weights and those shown on the consular invoices.

Thompson is understood to have covered this ground in the course of the testimony he gave before the Grand Jury. Another witness, named O'Connell, was examined and gave evidence which is believed to have related to the origin of the steel spring device used to make the Government scales on the Williamsburg docks register falsely.

The miscarriage of the sugar fraud investigation before the last Grand Jury, according to information which came out in the Federal building yesterday, was due to the appearance of former special Treasury Agent Brazinsky, who was assigned to help out Richard Parr in the investigation of the frauds about the time of the discovery of the frauds in November, 1907. Brazinsky was originally looked upon by the Government as one of its best witnesses, but he subsequently disappeared, following a personal row with Parr, and was not available to give his evidence.

Recently Brazinsky reappeared and told the Government prosecutors that he had valuable information to impart. His appearance was hailed as a sign that he had come around to the Government's view of things, but Henry A. Stimson and his assistant special prosecutors, who are putting the sugar cases before the Grand Jury, were dumfounded when Brazinsky told the Grand Jury a story that materially contradicted the one Parr told. This made it appear desirable to take up the weighing fraud investigation before the December Grand Jury.

GOVERNMENT TESTIMONY IN.

Prosecution of the Six Former Sugar Trust Employes Closes Its Case.

The Government closed its case yesterday in the trial of the six former employes of the American Sugar Refining Company, who are charged with complicity in the sugar weighing frauds on the Williamsburg dock of the Havemeyer & Elder refinery. The trial has been going on before Judge Martin and a jury in the Criminal Branch of the United States Circuit Court for the last ten days. The defendants are Oliver Spitzer, formerly dock boss at the Williamsburg plant; James F. Bendernagel, former cashier of the plant, and former checkers Kehoe, Boyle, Coyle, and Hennessey.

As soon as the Government had finished counsel for the defense made lengthy arguments seeking to have the indictments dismissed on the ground that they were not substantiated by the evidence, and particularly on the ground that the crimes alleged were committed in Brooklyn, in the eastern district of New York, whereas the defendants are being tried in the southern district. The arguments to a considerable extent followed the course of those which had been made in the earlier stages of the fight against the Government's case. Clarence Lexow, however, introduced something of a variation by declaring that the only way in which the crimes alleged could be tried in this district under a conspiracy indictment would be to make the American Sugar Refining Company a party to the case.

"The Government has carefully avoided, however," said Mr. Lexow, "going above these men who are now before the court, and when I brought out on cross-examination that their acts must have been inspired from 117 Wall Street, the Government did not press the point further."

The other lawyers, Henry F. Cochrane, George W. MacKellar, and Charles M. Beatty, all made arguments against the Government's testimony. Felix Frankfurter, who is assisting Henry A. Stimson in the prosecution of the case, replied to them.

Before the Government closed its case, Thomas D. Hyatt, the United States weigher who was in charge of the Williamsburg district for many years, was recalled and allowed to tell the first conversation he had with Oliver Spitzer, the former dock boss, when he arrived on the docks in 1897.

"Spitzer came up to me," said Hyatt, "and told me to go to Bendernagel's office to be introduced to him. I declined to do that and asked him what rent the company was charging for the new quarters it was preparing for the Government weighers. He said: 'That doesn't matter; we always turn the rent over to the head weigher, and a great deal more besides,' and he added: 'We never do business with the assistant weighers. At the end of the month you call on Mr. Bendernagel and he will hand you an envelope. All you have to do is to go in and shake hands with him.'

"I declined again, suggesting that they had better wait a couple of months until they saw how they liked my administration. Later on I was introduced to Bendernagel."

"Did you stay there during the term of your assignment?" asked Mr. Stimson of the Government's counsel.

"No," the witness replied, "the assignment was generally for a year, and I remained there only two months and eleven days. I was there for eight months in 1903, and again in 1907 for four months and eleven days. During this last period Richard Parr made the raid on the docks on Nov. 20."

"Did you make any report of your conversation with Spitzer to any superior?" asked Mr. Stimson.

"Yes," replied the witness, "I made a report in writing to Silas Croft. I left it in the possession of his deputy, but it never was heard of. I have searched for the report, and a search has been made at the Custom House, but it cannot be found."

Former Surveyor Croft is now dead. The Government recalled Howard B. Sands, secretary to Supreme Court Justice Bischoff, who used to be employed in the office of Bendernagel. Sands testified that he had seen Bendernagel pay money to men in the customs uniform.

WHITMAN SELECTS HIS STAFF.

Some of Mr. Jerome's Assistants Retained and Mr. Crannell to be Secretary.

From among 2,400 applicants District Attorney-elect Charles S. Whitman has selected a complete staff of assistants and deputies. The full list will be made public to-day or to-morrow.

Mr. Whitman announced that he would retain these members of Mr. Jerome's staff: Assistant District Attorneys: Charles A. Perkins, Robert C. Taylor, Charles C. Nott, and John W. Hart, and Deputy Assistant District Attorney Charles W. Appleton.

Mr. Perkins for ten years or more has been in charge of the Indictment Bureau and the Grand Jury work at the Criminal Court Building. Mr. Taylor has argued most of the important appeals before the higher courts and is thoroughly versed in that work. Mr. Nott has been Mr. Jerome's Chief of Staff and has handled a great number of important cases before the criminal courts in recent years. The other two are younger men who have been highly recommended to Mr. Whitman.

It has been said that Mr. Whitman intended to appoint a woman as Assistant or Deputy Assistant District Attorney. Mr. Whitman denied this yesterday, but said that if some woman capable of filling the position comes forward, and the appropriation can be obtained, he may appoint her as a probationary officer attached to his office. He thought the Public Prosecutor frequently could utilize the services of a woman in that capacity in investigations where women and children were involved.

Mr. Whitman said Clarke W. Crannell, a newspaper man to whom he had offered the post of private secretary, had promised to accept the position. The position pays $3,300.

"I am very glad to have Mr. Crannell's assurance that he will accept the position," said Mr. Whitman. "I am getting his services for less than a quarter of what they are worth."

FRANCHISE PLAN ILLEGAL.

Court Holds That the Board of Estimate Has Exceeded Its Authority.

Justice Seabury, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, handed down a decision declaring illegal the consideration of proposed modifications in the franchise of the South Shore Traction Company by the present Board of Estimate. This decision will prevent the adoption of these modifications on Dec. 23, as was the board's apparent intention. The decision is the result of a taxpayer's suit brought by William Jay Schieffelin, Chairman of the Citizens' Union.

All of Mr. Schieffelin's contentions as to the illegality of various previous steps of the Board of Estimate in this matter are upheld, as well as his contention that final action on the franchise within thirty days after its alleged "first consideration" would be invalid. Justice Seabury writes:

> If Dec. 10 was the meeting called for "first consideration" the resolution could not lawfully be finally adopted until Jan. 9, 1910. Yet the resolution adopted Nov. 19, 1909, shows that it is the intention of the board to act finally upon the matter at its meeting on Dec. 23.
>
> The requirement that thirty days shall intervene between the introduction and final passage of the resolution was intended for the protection of the public interests, and cannot be cut down by the action of the Board of Estimate.
>
> The action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in officially approving of the application, and the resolution for its adoption prior to the meeting of Dec. 10, which was called for the purpose of giving "first consideration," was an illegal official act, and also its act in causing the notice of the meeting of Dec. 23, which was called for final action to be published before the meeting of Dec. 10, was held.

Justice Seabury indicates that the procedure of the board throughout the consideration of the franchise has been to cheat the spirit of the City Charter and the State railroad law, while seeking to comply with the forms thereof.

TRAITORS TO THE HOME.

So Mrs. Mulliner Calls Anti-Suffragettes—Hughes's Attitude.

"Traitors to the home," Mrs. Gabrielle Stewart Mulliner called the women working against the ballot for women at the West End Woman's Republican Club meeting at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon. The women who were unwilling to have it, she said, were cowards. She was talking about patriotism.

"The patriotic woman," said Mrs. Mulliner, "is the woman who seeks day by day in mind and in spirit to make happiness for herself and for others. The normal woman finds the best of life in the home, where it is a family unit. When each woman is looking after the welfare of the family, the whole law of happiness is completed.

"If the woman is too busy to directly attend to these matters herself, she must have others do it for her, but the question of who those others are is of great importance. The legislators carry the lawmakers into power. When the interest of these is in the home it is very well, but when it is otherwise they are opposed to the happiness of the home. It is through the ballot that these things can be influenced."

Gov. Hughes has told the members of the Legislative Committee of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association, it was announced yesterday, that when a large body of representative women showed enough interest in "votes for women" to make it a political issue, he would give his attention to the question. The committee also said that several members of the Legislature have announced their intention of voting for the Woman Suffrage bill.

DEFENDS MONOPOLY OF CITY'S ICE TRADE

The Trust's Business Lawful, Declares Stanchfield, in Last Appeal to Jury.

CASE AT AN END TO-DAY

Prosecutor Osborne Attacks President Oler as the Ice Monarch of Ten Cities.

The Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court was crowded to the doors yesterday, when John B. Stanchfield for the defense, and James W. Osborne for the prosecution, summed up the case for the jury whose verdict, if sustained, will mean the life or death of the American Ice Company. Even the arena-like centre of the room, where the counsel are gathered, was invaded by spectators, and men were lined up in the hall waiting for a chance vacancy.

"The American Ice Company," said Mr. Stanchfield, "was formed in a lawful manner, and conducted in a lawful way as a business suited to its high duties of serving eight million people. If in this process, other ice firms have suffered, why the shores of industrial history are strewn with the wreckage of competition. To monopolize all the business you can has been the law of trade for an eternity, but if the founders of this corporation thought that they could form a working monopoly in ice, they were woefully mistaken."

Mr. Stanchfield said that he touched upon the charge that his company had sent boats up the Hudson to smash the harvests of the independents merely for sentimental reasons, merely to deny them for the honor and integrity of the employes said to have been involved in a trick so contemptible.

"We have shown you," he said, "that the methods we have used are but those used in every big enterprise in this city. Is underselling illegal? Is buying the good will of a business unfair? Mr. Oler is a good, kindly citizen, and I challenge you to find in all his correspondence a single line which violates either the letter or the spirit of the law under which we live. That he was able to conduct the business in such a way as to keep the Sheriff from the doors of the American Ice Company, I consider a tribute to an upright business career, and to a business jury of the City of New York I look for abstract justice."

Mr. Osborne spoke for more than an hour and a half, and his concluding remarks will be made this morning, in time for the case to go to the jury shortly after 12 o'clock.

"You should be glad, as I am glad," he said, "that the American Ice Company has shown me such marked hostility. When the wolf is fighting with your watch-dog, you are safe, but when they begin to play together it is time for you to count your sheep. Mr. Stanchfield has told you that Mr. Oler was in his person responsible for the serving of eight millions of people. Why should it be so? Why should a monarch rule us so? The world fought a thousand years for the destruction of the feudal system, and ours was a nation founded for the integrity of the individual. There should be thousands cutting and selling us our ice.

"The very filing of the certificate of incorporation was a threat to secure the disastrous control. Conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity, they started with $20,000 in cash and $60,000,000 in paper, like a man standing in a tan-yard, and with a shoestring in his possession, scheming to control the shoe market of the city. They tell us that it was impossible to secure a monopoly in so plentiful a commodity as ice, but, as Ko-Ko was told in 'The Mikado,' I say, 'A gentleman may try.' They exchanged $40,000,000 of paper for $40,000,000 worth of competition, and the public paid the dividends on all this wind and water.

"I could rest my case on the testimony that Mr. Oler himself gave, self-condemnatory, every line of it. Heaven knows why he told it all. 'Whom the gods destroy they first make mad.' He claims that Mr. Morse may have been a bad little boy, but that he himself was as good as gold. Why, they were in perfect accord. Oler did so well in charge of the branches at Baltimore and Washington, that Morse summoned him to New York. 'Inasmuch as you have been faithful over two cities, Wesley M. Oler, I will make you ruler over ten.'

"And who says he did not rule? Who says that the independents did not take their directions from headquarters? Why, I would as soon go into a bar and slap Mr. Jeffries in the face as to be an independent and not do as I was told."

He then rehearsed the story of Winne, the independent, who wept when his harvest was smashed by the American boats, and, selling out later, is now in the employ of the defendant corporation.

"Winne wept under Morse, but he died undor Oler—Dr. Oler, with his specific of $1.20 ice, which is warranted to cure all the world of that disease called independence. If you indorse these methods, I will leave the country. Why, I'd rather be an honest burglar, with all the element of excitement in my calling, than to take a little man, with a little business, and slowly but surely drive him to the wall, so that the independence which he, like all of us, had in his boyish dreams and the business which he had hoped to pass on to his children and his children's children must be absorbed into this giant thing with perpetual life and almost limitless power."

Surcharged with the enthusiasm of what he calls a cause, Mr. Osborne spoke infectiously. At times there was perfect stillness in the crowded room, while at others he had the jury chuckling and the court officers scurrying about the aisles restoring order.

PICNIC BEER RAN SHORT.

Scmegyl Now Sues Proprietor of Picnic Grounds and Gets $250 Damages.

Adolph Scmegyl, a prominent member of the Hungarian Benevolent Society, got a verdict of $250 from William Fuehrer, proprietor of a picnic ground at Newtown, L. I., yesterday, in Justice Dugro's branch of the Supreme Court. Scmegyl sued for $5,000. He alleged that as Chairman of the Hungarian Society's Picnic Committee he arranged with Fuehrer last Summer for the use of his park. It was agreed that the society should consume forty kegs of beer. Scmegyl alleged that on the day of the picnic, when the Hungarian Society arrived the grounds were occupied by an Irish and a German society. The Irish and Germans interrupted the Hungarian festivities, Scmegyl charged, and drank their beer. Then Fuehrer and his son beat Scmegyl, so Scmegyl said, and locked him in a room for three hours until he paid $300 for the forty kegs of beer. Scmegyl contended that the Hungarians had had only seventeen kegs.

Judge Has Not Dismissed Teal Case.

Judge Foster, in General Sessions, yesterday denied that he had dismissed the indictment against Mrs. Ben Teal, as was reported Wednesday night. He wishes first to read the decision of the divided Court of Appeals, which granted her a new trial, before settling the motion for dismissal made by Lawyer Blumenthal several days ago. Mr. Blumenthal, who was responsible for the statement that the indictment had been dismissed, said yesterday that it was an unintentional misstatement.

DENIES CONTROL OF WESTERN UNION

Telephone Company Got Less Than a Third of the Stock, Says President Vail.

HE DEFENDS MONOPOLIES

Thinks the Public Will Benefit by the Merger of Telephone and Telegraph Lines.

Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, gave details of the negotiations yesterday, which resulted in his company obtaining possession of $30,000,000 out of the $100,000,000 capital stock of the Western Union Telegraph Company. He intimated that the reason for getting a grip on the Western Union was to build up a national system of combined telephony and telegraphy, which in time will enable a patron of the telephone company to sit at home and send a message by telegraph to any part of the United States or Canada without the delay of sending for a messenger boy, or having the message delivered by messenger at the other end.

Mr. Vail made the disclosures while testifying before the New York Legislature's special committee, which is investigating telephone and telegraph conditions here to discover whether they should be placed under the supervision of the Public Service Commission. He also gave the commmitte of legislators a history of the telephone business, from its inception to the present, and explained the operation of the system which to-day threads the entire country with telephone lines.

There were some things about the business which Mr. Vail did not choose to tell, however. One was the price paid by his company for that block of $80,000,00 in stock of the Western Union Telegraph Company. He admitted that $30,000,000 was the correct figure, however, thus setting at rest the conflicting stories as to just how much of the Western Union was really obtained by the telephone company. He denied, however, that his company had obtained control of the Western Union.

"The American Telephone and Telegraph Company recently acquired control of some of the Western Union stock, but not control of the company," said Mr. Vail in reply to a question from E. J. Page, counsel for the investigating committee.

Question of Control.

Mr. Page wanted to know whether his company had acquired control of the Western Union's share of the New York Telephone Company stock before or after it acquired that block of $30,000,000 in the Western Union. Mr. Vail said that his memory was a trifle hazy as to that, but he believed the two transactions ran side by side, although the final negotiations in one case may have ended prior to the other.

"You weren't letting your right hand know what your left hand did, were you," suggested Mr. Page.

"Well, not exactly that," replied Mr. Vail with a smile.

Then came the question: "Are you willing to state the price paid for the Western Union stock?"

Mr. Vail hesitated a moment and glanced at his lawyer, who sat near by in the council chamber of City Hall.

"I would rather not," he replied.

"Are you willing to state what was paid by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for the New York Telephone Company's stock acquired from the Western Union?" asked Mr. Page.

"I had rather not," said Mr. Vail.

Then Mr. Page wanted to know what advantages were to be gained from the standpoint of the public by a consolidation of the business of a telegraph and telephone company.

Mr. Vail said that two such companies working together could be of great benefit to the public in many ways. In the first place, he said, when a telephone system operates a telegraph system it is a simple matter to build up a system so that messages can be started by telephone and relayed by telegraph to near the point of destination, then taken up and continued on by telephone. He said that the trouble in telegraphing without the adjunct of the telephone is the delay in getting messages to the telegraph office and from the telegraph office to its destination.

"Such a combined system can be built up to a very great extent, making a nearly instantaneous system," said Mr. Vail. "Some day there will be an international system which will be a standard form of service."

He Favors Monopolies.

Mr. Vail was asked if he considered that a monopoly gives the best telephone service in a given community.

"I of course favor a monopoly," said the witness.

"And what do you say as to State supervision over the telephone and telegraph companies?" asked Mr. Page.

"No one has any objection to a proper supervision," said Mr. Vail.

"Do you think they should be regulated as to the quality and character of the service rendered?" he was asked.

"If a company does not have enough interest in its own affairs to give the sort of service that is desired it would not need regulating very long," replied Mr. Vail.

"What do you say about supervision of rates?"

"The theory has not been tried out yet," replied Mr. Vail.

"But do you think there is anything particularly wrong in the theory of public supervision of such a corporation?" persisted Mr. Page.

"I don't think I care to express an opinion as to that," was the reply.

In speaking of returns on capital invested, Mr. Vail said he thought 8 per cent. was a fair rate, and the investigators passed on to the question of a company piling up big surpluses, then capitalizing the surplus instead of letting the stockholders have it in dividends.

"The day of capitalizing surplus is past," said Mr. Vail. "We have abandoned the idea."

"You think public utility corporations should not do it any more?" suggested one of the committeemen.

Scope of Regulation.

"Public utilities corporations can't do it any more," said Mr. Vail.

As a final shot on the subject of supervision Mr. Page asked: "What do you say would be reasonable regulation of the utility corporations?"

"Keeping them from doing that which they ought not to do," said Mr. Vail.

In reciting the history of the telephone business, Mr. Vail told how the telephone was first discovered by Alexander Graham Bell and how Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, happened to be instrumental in the development of it. Prof. Bell had just perfected the "talking telegraph" and had it on exhibition at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. A committee, of which the Brazilian Emperor was a member, was about to pass the "talking telegraph" by when Dom Pedro became interested and insisted on the committee giving the invention close attention.

This brought the "talking telephone" to the public's notice and its development began immediately. Mr. Vail said that the American Telephone & Telegraph Company had gradually absorbed the other companies and built up a system stretching throughout the country. The company of to-day is an evolution of the old New England Company organized in 1876 and 1877.

Mr. Vail talked steadily to the commission for nearly four hours. He promised to come back from Boston and tell them some more whenever they needed him.

BIG FIRE IN KALAMAZOO.

160 Hotel Guests Flee to Streets—Loss Estimated at $750,000.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Dec. 9.—Property valued at $750,000 was destroyed here last night, five firemen were injured, though none seriously, and 160 hotel guests were driven scantily clad into the streets by a fire that burned the Burdock House, one of the best known hotels in Southern Michigan, and laid in ruins the major portion of a city square in the business district. A rumor that an old man had appeared at an upper window and had been burned to death proved to-day to be without foundation.

The combined efforts of the Fire Departments of three cities had not succeeded in extinguishing the fire to-night, though it was under absolute control.

More than thirty business concerns suffered losses by the fire. The heaviest loss was that of the Arcade Company, which owned the hotel and Arcade Building, estimated at $250,000. Among the losers wer e the Postal Telegraph Company, American Express Company, City National Bank, National Cash Register Company, Marshall Field & Co., and six saloons. A dozen buildings were destroyed.

Christmas Number

The New York Times

Literature, Art, Science, History, Religion.

Next Sunday

The Christmas issue of The New York Times next Sunday will be one of the most remarkable numbers ever published by a New York newspaper.

Two special pictorial sections, printed on heavily calendered paper, will be unusually handsome.

Two full pages are devoted to a magnificent half-tone reproduction of "Despised and Rejected of Men," a striking and powerful painting by Sigismund Goetze. Contrasting the Christ figure, meek and lowly, and the pride and vanity of the world to-day, it is a reproachful and vivid delineation of modern aspirations.

Other full page half-tone reproductions are Elsley's "Good-bye," a charming picture of a little child and puppies; F. Andreotti's "Rivals," showing two graceful girls dancing before an outdoor gathering of men and women in the picturesque costumes of the Seventeenth Century, and A. Zatska's delightfully poetic composition entitled "Dance of the Nymph."

A NOTABLE STORY

An especially striking feature is "The Crucifixion," a remarkable story by Leonid Andreyev, author of "The Seven Who Were Hanged," and one of the greatest Russian writers living. In powerful and vivid language he paints the scene at the Cross, the awe of the Israelites and soldiers of Rome, the terror-stricken and remorseful Judas, and the self-destruction to which the unhappy betrayer is driven by his awakened conscience.

The World's Progress in Fifty Years.

Sixty-three leaders of Twentieth Century thought and action have contributed articles descriptive of the marvellous changes wrought during the last fifty years in the sciences, arts and industries.

Practically every important phase of human activity is represented in this remarkable galaxy of noted men and women, and the subjects are treated with the sympathy, authority and enthusiasm which the student and expert brings to bear upon the exposition of his favorite themes.

THE LINES OF LEGALITY.

One of the earliest declarations of President Taft, and one of the most approved, was that the business world would be shown the lines of legality, so that they might be relieved of all honest doubt as to whether or not they were obeying the law. There could not be a better case than that presented by his corporation tax law. The Treasury itself, through its Secretary, professes its inability to construe the law as it is construed by its authors. Mr. Wickersham and Mr. MacVeagh are at odds whether the law means what it says or something different, but more easily capable of enforcement.

There is a tangle regarding "net income" and "net profits," and whether or not those words of accounting are used in the sense customary among accountants, or in some special signification adopted by the framers of the laws for reasons known to themselves. There are accountants and lawyers for and against both propositions, and every sign that, as the matter stands, only those will pay the tax who wish, until the lines of legality are indicated beyond doubt, and made to agree with the lines of practicality. It is all right to enforce the law, of course, but the law might well be made understandable and obeyable before its observance is demanded.

MR. GAYNOR'S OUTLOOK.

The Mayor-elect spoke to the Southern Society in rather a discouraged tone on Wednesday evening. He finds elements of demoralization that make good government difficult. Men dodge their taxes, others bribe the assessors, still others cheat the city in dealing with it as they would not think of cheating private citizens, and, most pertinent to the present situation, men of ability, experience, and special fitness do not show the willingness he would like to see in taking office under him and trying to aid him in the task he, at large sacrifice, has undertaken. He says:

> I have in mind two men here who take a great interest in public affairs. They have studied certain governmental things thoroughly, and speak and write of them with great accuracy. When I told them I wanted them to come into the government and help, they immediately offered excuses.
> They are my friends, and want to help me, but not to their own pecuniary loss. I reminded them that I had given up an exalted life office with a much larger salary than that paid to our Mayor, and I may get one of them yet.

While there is a certain degree of depression manifest in the words of Mr. Gaynor, there is reassurance for the city in the standard of selection he avows. He thinks he may yet get one of his friends. Perhaps he will get the other also, or some one as good. When an example has been set by one or two, it may more generally be followed than now seems practicable to him. In any case it is a comfort for all respectable citizens to know that his troubles come from aiming high. That has not usually been the case with newly elected Mayors. Again it is a comfort to know that he is not seeking guidance from any who are, or are likely to be, included in the class he refers to in the following expressive description

> The long line of officials and bosses who made themselves millionaires out of the government of this city, some of whom live abroad and impudently visit us occasionally now that the Statute of Limitations has outlawed their villainies.

Mr. Gaynor is quite sound in saying that the "kind of government we are to have depends on the morality of the community, and that government resting on universal suffrage can rise no higher than its source any more than water can." But there is logical ground for him not to be disheartened in the application of this truism. Let him reason backward on it. The general level of morality in an electorate that chose him cannot, it would seem, be much lower than that of their candidate. And again, since he himself gave up "a life office with a much larger salary than that paid to our Mayor," he must not despair of finding the requisite number of equally unselfish citizens to fill the more important positions that he has to fill. Meanwhile we assure him that the people of the city, including most of the large number who did not vote for him, are quite prepared to take him at his word, to credit his professions of high purpose, and to approve and applaud his success in carrying them out. There is no denying that his job is a tough one, or that it will be made as tough as possible by the leaders of the party that nominated him. But in every manly effort to perform it honorably and with energy, determination, and fidelity he will find that the mass of the citizens, without any reference at all to party lines, will stand by him.

TWO CURIOUS CASES.

According to the current cablegrams the Reichstag laughed at the announcement of the acquittal of those under charges of frauds in connection with the naval administration. The jest seems a very German one. If the acquittal was undeserved, then the courts were corrupt, as well as the Naval Department, and the matter was rather more serious than farcical. But the Reichstag laughed. It would be interesting to know what might be the German view of a similar joke—or otherwise—which has ripened among us this week.

President Roosevelt's message of April 27, 1908, was one of the strongest of his denunciations of the trusts, and he specified the "evil practices" of certain corporations which had combined to victimize Boston as an awful example. In his words, "the combination resulted in parceling out the work by collusive bids, plainly dishonest, and supported by false affirmations. * * * Surely such a state of affairs as that set forth above emphasizes the need of further Federal legislation * * *" and so on in characteristic fashion. But the telegrams published yesterday declare that there was not even enough of a case to go to the jury. "The court decided before the jury retired that there had been no monopoly, and also that the defendants had a right to combine to advance their own interests." Sixteen were acquitted by direction of the court, and seventeen were acquitted by the jury.

It would be interesting to know just what are the emotions appropriate to the occasion. Shall we laugh in the German manner, and think that it heightens the merry jest to find that we are victimized by the courts as well as by the trusts? Or can it be that the courts have rightly found that there was no such alarming state of affairs as was so feverishly alleged?

It would be rash to decide, but this much is certain—Mr. Roosevelt had no such facilities for learning the truth as the court. The proceedings have been running since September. The lawyers were the most eminent at the Massachusetts bar. The testimony was voluminous, and the jury's attention was such as to elicit the Judge's especial thanks. And there was not enough to go to the jury in many cases, nor even to divide a single jury in the cases they were allowed to consider. The matter is all the more mystifying because other members of this combination have been convicted in other cases. If the facts can be relied upon, they seem to show that the courts can be trusted to convict whenever the prosecution makes out a case, and not otherwise. In other words, we have remedy enough against bad trusts, without agitation. And good trusts escape whenever their deeds do not merit punishment. But that is almost an ideal state of things, and our commercial and industrial affairs have been disordered for years under the hypnotic suggestion that we were trampled to the dust by conscienceless combinations. The simultaneous occurrence of such similar cases on opposite sides of the ocean shows that the phenomenon is not confined to ourselves. Our unrest has been contagious, and there is here a suggestion that the world is torturing itself about evils which are imaginary in some cases at least, and for which there exists ample remedy if the evils are only real.

THE HOUSE OF GOVERNORS.

6.—Length of Human Life.

In his message to Congress President Taft recommended the concentration into one bureau of the Federal instruments which have to do with the Nation's health. But he admitted that, outside its jurisdiction regarding quarantine, the work of such a bureau would be merely advisory upon questions of health affecting all the States. With the States interdependently rests the responsibility of 3,000,000 persons constantly and seriously ill, of whom 500,000 are consumptives. The scientists are convinced that more than half of this illness is preventable.

Such a Federal bureau as Mr. Taft recommends would do much through investigation and research by competent experts. They might advise the House of Governors at their yearly convention how to draft uniform laws that would be instrumental in checking the waste in life and health, which, expressed in dollars, represents at least a billion and a half each year. That measures for the public health may lengthen life is illustrated by the cases of India, where nothing is done and the average has not increased above 23½ years, and Prussia—the home of preventive medicine—where the average life is 47 years, and is lengthening. A score of acknowledged American authorities—medical, actuarial, and hygienic—declare that by methods already known and practicable the average life of American citizens may be lengthened by over one-third.

The House of Governors meeting next January can make a beginning in the drafting of uniform regulations, to the end that the life of each generation may be increased by fifteen years at its age of highest efficiency.

NORTH AND SOUTH.

Secretary Dickinson's remarks, in his speech at the dinner of the Southern Society Wednesday night, on the successful invasion of the North by men of the Southern States, comprehended an eloquent plea for the obliteration of sectionalism. His argument that there were many men of Northern blood among the military leaders of the South in the civil war, while many of the foremost officers in the Northern army, in the conflict for national unity, were of Southern blood, was comparatively new and entirely apposite. It is a fact, nevertheless, that the rank and file in the Confederate Army were made up of Southerners fighting for their institutions and their homes. But the war was finished nearly half a century ago. It is time for the last traces of sectional bias to disappear. The South is prospering mightily, and a fair admixture of Northern enterprise with Southern courage has helped it to prosper. On the other hand, as the Secretary of War declared, the Southerner has appreciably conquered the North, just as the intelligent Scot conquered England by his business ability after the military conquest of Scotland by the English.

The interests of North and South are identical. Commercially, intellectually, morally their people have the same aims, the same tastes, the same ideals. It would be a blessing if the historians would drop the civil war for a while, and the disputes between New England and Virginia or the Carolinas over the exact meaning of phrases that have lost their meaning could cease. A Southern newspaper has lately been resenting the use of the phrase, "a war for the perpetuation of bondage," and a New England newspaper has been proclaiming its accuracy. Let it pass. There is no more bondage, and North and South are working in unison for the same cause—the good of the whole country.

FOOTBALL IN SAFE HANDS.

What passed between President Hadley of Yale, President Lowell of Harvard, and Mr. Walter Camp, the "father of American football," at their conference at Cambridge the other day, will probably never be divulged. But the meeting was an acknowledgment by the two university Presidents that they would feel a certain responsibility for fatalities if produced by mass plays in future games of football between their institutions. They may have told Mr. Camp that the championship game at Cambridge this Fall was not cleanly played; that there was "slugging" in the close formations, and unwarrantable roughness that might have resulted in a broken neck or a fractured skull. They may have remarked that they had been warned beforehand that, if the game should have this fatal outcome, public opinion would not hold them blameless. They may have reminded Mr. Camp, also, of his own published observations to the effect that the game, at its present stage of development, could not afford to lose through accidents men whose skill and long training were essential to the execution of "winning plays." And they may have declared peremptorily that it was now a question of effecting a thorough reform in football or of abolishing it.

What they actually said to each other we do not know. But at the conclusion of the conference Mr. Camp made public this statement: "I am helping to collect facts that will lead, I expect, to the enactment of rules that will produce a fine, open, exciting game with the least danger to the players." That, we think, really means something.

BUGS AND SOCIALISM.

It is a pity that the Government has been compelled to interfere in the case of Jacob Kotinsky, the expert bug man of the Territorial Experiment Station at Honolulu. In the capture of bugs and the conversion of them into complete specimens or illuminative microscopic slides for the study of entomology Mr. Kotinsky has had few rivals, we understand, in the Government service, and to a Federal Government forced into a semblance of paternalism by the acquisition of tropical colonies the dissection and examination of bugs and the filing of the same for reference seem necessary activities.

Mr. Kotinsky, in spite of his ability as an entomologst, or perhaps because of it, is a Socialist, and a colony which is receiving large numbers of Russian immigrants provided for him a fine field for the pursuit of his avocation (bugs being his vocation) as a proselyter. He expounded the beauties of Socialism so persistently and so effectively among the willing Russians that he has lost his paying job. That he can be driven from the islands is not likely. Under the law of this Nation free speech is permitted everywhere. He may continue with impunity to transform immigrants seeking the protection of the United States flag into enemies of that and all other flags, and all existing forms of government, but he can pursue his entomological researches only as a private and unpaid citizen. Socialism as a pursuit does not pay. That is one of its glories.

Entomology is not, generally speaking, lucrative. When a man has had the energy and industry to turn his knowledge of a science into capital, it is too bad for him to throw away his chances by persistently riding a hobby. The relationship between bugs and Socialism, thus revealed, is worth some further investigation. Meanwhile the Government deserves praise for its prompt and just action in the matter of Kotinsky. Agitators and mischief-makers should never be fed at the public crib.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Bed Time and the Star. Among the minor features of Capt. Loose's account of what he did while manufacturing astronomical observations for Dr. Cook at the Gramatan Inn, none is more curious and interesting to the landsman than his description of how one night he decided that it was time to call it a day's work and go to bed. He happened to be without a watch, but there was a telephone beside him, connecting with the hotel office, and presumably there were people passing now and then through the corridor outside his door. Instead of using the one or availing himself of the first of frequent opportunities to ask the hour of a guest or watchman, he took exactly the course he would have followed to get the desired information if he had been aboard ship in midocean. To quote his narrative:

> I looked out of the window and could see Procyon in the east. I got out my sextant and took a sight of the star, using a basin of water as an artificial horizon. I knew the approximate latitude and longitude of New York, and after reckoning it all out I found that it was 11 hours and 2 minutes. "It's time to go to bed," I said, and I went.

He had discovered what he wanted to know by an elaborate method instead of a simple one, but it was a method familiar to the practiced navigator, as the only one available at sea, and, therefore, easy for Capt. Loose. The tables he had been using included one with the positions of Procyon, the most prominent star in the constellation Canis Minor, calculated for the various latitudes by standard time, and from these he could figure out at what hour an observer in New York would see at the altitude which his sextant recorded.

To understand the situation fully, one must remember that a ship's chronometer is never consulted, as we do our clocks and watches, to find the time of day where the ship happens to be. It tells, or is expected and supposed to tell, what time it is somewhere else, often several thousand miles away. Hence are chronometers what landsmen would call "wrong" practically all the time, by minutes and even hours, and that is why a tired and sleepy mariner who wanted to know what time it was would or might seek the answer in the ever-trustworthy stars, without stopping to think that one sufficiently accurate to go to bed by could be found much nearer.

Quite Good Enough as They Are. It is the custom, and with good reason, to congratulate modern children on the number and excellence of the books written and printed nowadays for their especial amusement or edification. Those of us whose childhood is somewhat remote can well remember that much of the literature to which we had access, and practically all we were persuaded or commanded to read, showed no appreciation of the fact that mature and immature minds were not of equally potent digestion. Hence many a weary, dreary hour for the old-time youngster.

But hence, also, did that old-time youngster escape what some of us cannot help thinking the disastrous effects of the cut-down classic—of the old book, big in both senses of the word big, that has been simplified, expurgated, as much lowered in thought and style as decreased in size, and generally mutilated and bedeviled in a well-intentioned effort to bring within the grasp of childish intellects something written with a single view to winning the approval of their elders. Not a few of these products of amiable but misguided ingenuity are very well done, and serve not ill the design of entertaining or instructing their destined readers. The trouble with them is that they decrease or destroy the desire for reading the books they summarize, and take away a good half of the joy that perusal of the real thing would give later.

It is a fact, morover, that a child of more or less bookish tendencies can get both pleasure and profit from books of which he has only a vague, but a steadily growing, comprehension. And it is the parts that the boy or girl shouldn't understand that he or she doesn't understand, so that few real classics, or even near-classics, really require bowlerizing before they can safely be placed in youthful hands. That there should be books for children is well, and very well, but the books should be written up to the child mind, not down to it, and it would be highly desirable if small people didn't try to amend the work of great ones for any purpose whatever.

Within the Law, but Dangerous. Accused of violating the Sanitary Code by treating a patient who had and died of scarlet fever one of the city's more eminent practitioners of Eddyism has just proved to the satisfaction of the Board of Health that as soon as he knew the nature of the disease he had been called upon to heal he called in a real physician, and the existence of the case was properly reported to the authorities. Having thus shown that he was more law-abiding than consistent the Eddyite was held justified by the law and went his way, triumphant and rejoicing.

While the law may be satisfied, however, the facts as disclosed are more than a little disquieting, since they reveal that if this particular healer had stood by his doctrinal guns a little more sturdily, or if his powers as a diagnostician had been a little less keen he would have gone on denying the reality of scarlet fever until a whole neighborhood had been infected with the horrible malady.

The case is one which mothers especially should consider with care, for it has a direct bearing upon the health and life of their children, and hints strongly of the need to use discretion in the choice of their playmates.

Insults to Women.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Working Girl" is not at all wrong in her statements, and "C. S. C.," (whose letter appeared in this morning's issue of THE TIMES,) being a man, probably has not noticed as many instances of this nature which might have occurred in his presence, but if he were a young lady subject to these annoyances he would heartily agree that there are entirely too many insults offered young ladies traveling about in New York.

I take great exception, however, to "Working Girl's" criticism of New York. If she was at all well acquainted with our city she would certainly know it is not the young man born and bred in New York who is the cause of her annoyance, but the riff-raff from all over the world. The writer is well aware of the fact that Southern and Western men are more chivalrous than Easterners, nevertheless a well-bred New Yorker is always courteous to a lady. A NEW YORK GIRL.

TAFT'S FARE PER POUND.

Railroads Charge Him Less Than the Reported Second Class Mail Rate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

President Taft in his message declares that the second-class mail be carried at a loss of $63,000,000 a year, and that it costs 9 cents a pound to transport it. It would be interesting to know how these figures are arrived at. A few years ago the Post Office Department reported that it cost from 5 to 6 cents a pound to carry second-class mail. If it really does cost 9 cents a pound, the Post Office Department is open to severe censure for paying the railroads such excessive rates.

It does not speak very well for the business ability of our Post Office Department, when we look across the border into Canada and find in that country of magnificent distances and sparsely settled as compared with the United States, that second-class matter is carried at half a cent a pound, and the Canadian Post Office Department in some years lately, I am told, has shown a profit of nearly half a million dollars.

The railroads are willing to carry a 200-pound man from New York to Chicago—1,000—miles—for 9 cents a pound, give him a seat, heat the car he rides in, and light it.

In the case of our worthy President, if he were to take a trip from New York to Chicago and pay his fare, the railroads would be compelled to transport him for less than 6 cents a pound.

At one of the meetings, held here in New York, of the Congressional committee appointed two or three years ago to investigate postal matters, it was brought out in evidence that the express companies were willing to transport periodicals quite long distances—in some cases over 500 miles, if my recollection serves me—at less than a cent a pound, so that some publishers found it economical, they said, to use the express companies instead of forwarding their periodicals by mail.

Of course President Taft is not in favor of charging the daily newspapers more than a cent a pound, even if it does cost 9 cents a pound to transport them, but the poor magazines, the religious papers, the agricultural papers, and all the rest that have no political influence must pay excessive rates.

It is to be observed, too, that President Taft makes no attack on the county papers all over the United States which go absolutely free of postage in the counties in which they are printed. Political reasons perhaps also apply in this case.

Neither does he give the second-class press credit for the vast amount of first-class matter which the advertisements produce and which increases the profits of the department enormously.

It has been my contention for years that the Government could afford to carry second-class matter free rather than lose the big income which these publications give in the shape of first-class, third-class, and fourth-class matter.

BOBSLED COASTING.

Wants the Privilege Granted in Van Cortlandt Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the past few years I have noticed your paper alone has devoted more space to Winter sports than any other paper, and particularly to the bobsled races at Huntington and the proposed international races in Jersey, (which fell through,) and wonder if you have ever noticed the number of grown-up people, married and single, who are interested and enjoy bobsled coasting in this city in the vicinity of 110th Street and Cathedral Parkway, Manhattan Avenue and 104th Street, West End Avenue and Ninety-ninth Street at night until the police stop it.

I, therefore, take the liberty of asking you for your help and suggestions and those of your readers to petition the Park Department to allow coasting at Van Cortlandt Park at night and Sundays when possible, as I am sure quite a number would be only too willing to pay for the privilege of keeping their sleds at the Park, and an admission for the right to coast, if necessary. In Summer and Fall golfers have a place to leave their sticks, &c., and as we do not have much ice skating there would be no overcrowding and sleds could be left there also. If you recall twenty-five years ago Broadway from 118th Street to Manhattan Street, and from 136th Street to Manhattan Street used to be filled with happy coasters and onlookers, and I do not recall one serious accident.

I personally have tried to enjoy myself, and have very frequently had my wife and other couples out on one of my sleds at night, and have been the cause of interesting others, who would go any convenient distance to take advantage of the sport.

Just see the popularity coasting causes at Cresta Run, St. Moritz, Switzerland! And I understand the record for that place is held by an American, "Skeets Martin." J. A. F.

MILITANT METHODS.

They Are the Last Desperate Resort of the Suffragettes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to your editorial of Dec. 8, entitled "14,000 Hours," is it not unreasonable to expect that even women, after being kept waiting for seven consecutive days and nights in the street in London weather, and seeing the while delegation after delegation of men from every walk in life ushered through the sacred portals should, finally, despairing, turn meekly homeward to lament the situation over the teacups? The question at once arises, Would that have been dignified? Instead, they made a protest which was one degree more militant than any they had made before. After seven days and seven nights of fruitless waiting any one not possessing the patience of Job would surely have done something that would not bear the scrutiny of an editor after a good night's rest.

And is it logical to argue that militant tactics are the hindrance in the way of Votes for Women being taken up as a slogan in one of the general election programmes where it has never yet been so included, although there have been a score of general elections since the beginning of the suffrage movement, and this is the first since the introduction of the so-called militant methods? The cause was pressed by constitutional means for half a century without bringing it into the arena of practical politics, hence it would be of great interest to know just what the rational means are which your editorial so strongly advocates. The Pullman Porter's Wage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent "Sanitas" in to-day's issue complaining about the Pullman porter and his brush evidently does not know the railroad pays its porters only $25 a month. The porter can be in the service for twenty years, but never receives more than that paltry sum. The tip the porter receives is what he and his family live on, his wages not covering rent, fuel, light, &c. Now, why does "Sanitas" begrudge the porter his only means of existence? A little investigation by "Sanitas" will prove to him the porter's lot is an exceedingly hard one. Night porters run for night after night without rest, and when the relief man takes their car for one trip the company deducts pay for the time they are off.

The Madison Square Contest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The very weak apologetic protest in to-day's issue of my favorite daily paper respecting the inhuman "sport"—if it can be called by that name—going on just now in Madison Square Garden tempts me to reply. Why is it that your paper and all the other journals in the city do not with one strong voice demand that the law should come forward with a mighty hand and put an end to this miserable exhibition which goes on year after year? A contest of this kind, which is against nature itself, should appeal to no one and ought to be discouraged. The only way to do it is to make it illegal. MAO.

CORNELL'S DEMAND.

Why Should She Be Assisted More Than Other New York Institutions?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have noticed in your Wednesday and Thursday issues references to the possibility of making Cornell a State university. I have not yet seen President Schurman's report, and only know his expressed statement from the quotations in THE TIMES.

The question is raised in my own mind, why should New York have a State university? What possible need has our system of education of such a development? I do not think it can be claimed in any true sense that Cornell has been a State university, although the State has undertaken to carry out certain scientific and practical work for its own ends under the general guidance of the university. It is not to be forgotten that the same policy has led to the establishment of a State school at Alfred University. I question any one's raising the point as to the making of that institution a State college or university also.

Has not the voluntary system, as exhibited in our Eastern States generally, done enough to justify itself without adding this new element to our organization? Consider the line of colleges, beginning with Columbia in New York and running through Schenectady, Hamilton, Clinton, Syracuse, Rochester, to say nothing of the women's colleges at Poughkeepsie and Aurora and Elmira, and the many other institutions, including those under the Roman Catholic Church. Surely the youth of this State is well provided for in the matter of education, and no one need suffer for opportunities considering the large amount of free tuition given in all of these colleges.

If the State really proposes a policy of assistance to its institutions of higher learning why not assist all the excellent institutions which have worked as earnestly, and some of them as successfully, for the welfare of the State as has this single and strong university?

THE "POOR MAN'S BUTTER."

Thinks 10-Cent Tax on Oleomargarine Should Be Repealed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your open discussion of the oleomargarine question is not only timely but it brings light upon one of the most important questions of the day. With the price of butter soaring to hitherto unknown heights, the public may be disposed to know the exact facts in the controversy between oleomargarine and butter.

Oleomargarine is a composition of animal fats, almost identical in properties with butter, fully as nutritious and wholesome and equally palatable; in fact it requires a chemical analysis to tell one from the other. All oleomargarine is made from United States Government inspected fats under the direct personal supervision of veterinary and sanitary inspectors. It is absolutely clean in every particular and under the law must be prepared under the most absolutely clean conditions and only from disease-free fats.

Butter is practically the same thing, except that it is manufactured partially within the cow and partially in the churn, but there the comparison ends. Compare any cow-shed or milking place anywhere in the country with the cleanly oleomargarine factories conducted under Government supervision. Think of the swishing of the cow's tail, the unclean condition of the milker's hands, to say nothing of the generally unsanitary condition of the farm property; realize that a very large percentage of our dairy animals are afflicted with tuberculosis and other diseases and you can see at a glance the difference between oleomargarine and butter.

Because of the intrinsic merits of oleomargarine and fearing its rapidly growing competition the dairy interest, now a practical trust, had Congress pass a law placing a tax of ten cents upon each pound of oleomargarine with the hope of taxing it out of existence. In spite of this tremendous burden it has been able to hold a goodly proportion of the trade it had already secured but without it the price of butter would come tumbling down to reasonable proportions and consumers could purchase a better product in every way at a much smaller price.

As the case stands to-day butter is and will be abnormally high—almost out of reach of the average consumer. A perfectly good wholesome, clean, nutritious, palatable food product is handicapped in the interest of a competing product by a law which is the most un-American statute on our books to-day.

If influential papers like THE TIMES would investigate this subject thoroughly and give their readers the benefit of the information secured, the inquitious 10-cent tax on oleomargarine would stand only long enough for Congress to repeal it.

SCHOOL CLASSES TOO LARGE.

Declares That Fully Three-Fourths of Students Are Wasting Their Time.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to express my appreciation of your editorial remarks in Friday's issue on "Cornell as a State University," in which you maintain that the size of the classes in our public schools seriously affects the efficiency of the teaching, and suggest that the first duty of the State lies in the betterment of the public school instruction.

The evil to which you refer is a very serious one, particularly in the case of language teaching. The ideal in the modern methods of teaching all languages, whether modern or ancient, is to provide a pupil with the greatest possible control of the language studied, and it has been a matter of common experience that this control is best obtained by individual practice on the part of the student—of course, under the direction of the teacher. Now it is physically impossible to give the requisite attention to the individual pupil when the class exceeds twenty. As a result, in our crowded classes fully three-fourths of our students are wasting most of their time. The same statement holds good with regard to many freshman classes in college. The individual attention necessary to proper teaching is impossible on account of the size of the classes. In our city we have a school system of which we are justly proud, even if it is not perfect, but the rapid increase of our population has made it almost impossible to provide sufficient school accommodation. So I would not be interpreted as criticising the efficiency of our teachers; they are doing the best they can in the circumstances; but, certainly, if the reproach now directed against all languages, and especially the teaching of Latin, in the schools is to be obviated, it will best be done by diminishing the size of the classes in those subjects. This means a larger number of teachers and a consequent larger expense. I hope that THE TIMES will follow up the suggestions contained in the editorial until the conditions of language teachnig in our schools are much improved.

WHAT TO EAT.

"Eat to live!" The cry appalls!

How can mankind eat to-day
If he has the bills to pay?
How expect to live and still
Pay a decent butcher bill?

One must be a millionaire
To procure substantial fare.
Bread and milk—the staff of life—
Cost too much to keep a wife!

How to feed an extra mouth
Is the problem North and South.
Baby ranks must soon be thinned
If we've got to feed them wind.

Hark how ravening hunger calls!
Eat—but live on codfish balls!

CITY BIDS IN LIENS FOR TAXES UNPAID

Large Public Service Corporations in Arrears Now Subject to Heavy Interest Charges.

FRANCHISES AS A GUARANTEE

No Explanation of the Failure of the Corporations to Settle Before the Collector Sold Claims.

At the continued sale by the Controller of liens on property on which there are unpaid back taxes, the city bid in yesterday more than fifty of the claims, many of which are against some of the largest public service corporations in the city. Why many of these corporations had failed to settle their comparatively small indebtedness to the city could not be understood by the tax officials, and at the offices of the companies no explanation could be obtained.

Collector of Arrears Moynahan announced at the sale that he had been enjoined by the courts against selling liens on the franchises and property of the Bleecker Street and Fulton Ferry Railroad Company, the Broadway & Seventh Avenue Railroad Company, the Central Park, North & East River Railway Company, the Eighth Avenue Railroad, the Forty-second Street and Grand Street Ferry Railraod Company, the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, the Ninth Avenue Railroad, the Sixth Avenue Railroad, the Second Avenue Railroad, the Thirty-fourth Street & Crosstown Railroad Company, and the Twenty-third Street Crosstown Railway Company.

The sale will be continued on Dec. 23. In the meantime it is hoped that all the contentions before the courts will be passed upon.

CASHES 20-YEAR-OLD CHECK.

Executor Forgot About It, but Insurance Company Pays with Interest.

While Vice President Haley Fiske of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company was looking over death claims against the company, which had been sent up to his office from the claim department the other day, his eye caught a Metropolitan Life Insurance Company check which bore an unfamiliar signature.

"Why, that's not President Hegeman's signature. It must be a forgery," he exclaimed.

Then he noticed that a note from one of the claim department's clerks was attached to the check.

"The man who presents this check wants us to pay twenty years' interest on it," read the clerk's note in substance.

The check was for $174. But, as Vice President Fiske looked at it a little more closely, it brought back to him the history of two decades of his company's affairs. It was issued twenty years ago. Its checks and banking system differed materially from what they are now.

"No wonder I thought there was something wrong about it," said Mr. Fiske in speaking about it afterward to his fellow officers.

It was learned that the check had been issued to pay a death claim in favor of several children. The children were otherwise well provided for, and the executor, after receiving the company's check, had, through press of work, forgotten to cash it. It had lain for twenty years among his papers. The children are all grown up now and are prosperous. The executor, in sending the check to the company, asked that interest should be allowed. The company decided to allow the children of the former policyholder interest at 4 per cent., which amounts to upward of $130, almost as much as the check itself.

THINK GAYNOR DIDN'T MEAN IT.

But Some City Officials Resent His Tax Bribery Speech.

None of the city officials was willing to comment for publication yesterday on the insinuations made by Mayor-elect Gaynor at the dinner of the Southern Society on Wednesday night that men with sufficient money can obtain favors from the city government, particularly in the matter of taxes, but all those who were seen were most emphatic in denouncing the remarks.

"It was the old story," said one man, who has a lot to do with the tax assessments, and who felt the reflections most keenly. "The Judge said more than he inetnded to. I regret it very much, and I feel sincerely that he did not intend his remarks to appear the way they did. I think that he started off to show that it is the duty of citizens who can do so not to place temptation in the way of subordinate city officials who have power. Then the thought ran away with him and he said things which he did not mean to at the start. This is what he did many times in the campaign, and I am sure that is what happened last night."

Another city officer said: "If the Judge could only write out his speeches and have them printed he would be all right, but when he gets on his feet he rambles around so that the men who are listening intently to his every word get wrong impressions of his meaning. It's too bad, and it is a habit that he will have to get out of after he takes office or he will find himself in hot water all the time."

DOUBT MRS. HAIG IS TO WED.

Belief That It Is Her Daughter Who Is to Marry William Phillips.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The cabled report from London that William Phillips, former Third Assistant Secretary of State and now Secretary of the Embassy at London, is to marry Mrs. George Ogilvy Haig, daughter of the late Mrs. William Astor, was received here with surprise and incredulity. If Mrs. Haig is in Washington, as reported, her friends here have not heard of it, and she is remaining in seclusion.

Mr. Phillips's friends have understood for some time that he was about to marry Miss Caroline Astor Drayton, daughter of Mrs. Haig. Announcement of this engagement was made about three weeks ago, and it is believed here that the report cabled from London has reference to that instead of to a marriage with Mrs. Haig.

Mrs. George Ogilvy Haig was the third daughter of the late William Astor and Caroline Webster Schermerhorn Astor, who was regarded as the leader of New York society until her death last year.

Mrs. Haig was born in 1858. She married J. Coleman Drayton in 1879. In 1892 there was talk of a duel between him and Hallett Alsop Borrowe in Europe; but the duel never took place. Mrs. Drayton secured a divorce before Chancellor McGill of New Jersey, on March 23, 1896, on the ground of desertion. Her second husband, George Ogilvy Haig, a wealthy Scotch distiller, whom she married in 1897, died of ptomaine poisoning on Dec. 27, 1905, at Chester, where he and Mrs. Haig had stopped a few days before, to break their journey on a Christmas visit to Mr. Haig's family at Dublin.

Mr. Astor, by a codicil of his will, deprived Mrs. Haig of any share in his estate, leaving her portion instead to her four children by Coleman Drayton. Mrs. Astor, however, divided her large separate estate between two of her daughters, Mrs. Haig and Mrs. Marshall Orme Wilson. Mrs. Haig's London home is at 65 Brook Street, Grosvenor Square.

NEW OPERA GIVEN AT THE NEW THEATRE

First Performance in This City of "Il Maestro di Cappella" by Ferdinand Puer.

AN AMUSING TRIFLE

Mr. Pini-Corsi, Mr. Bada, and Miss Gluck Give an Excellent Performance—Miss Sacchetto's Dancing.

Barnaba..............................Antonio Pini-Corsi
Benetto..............................Angelo Bada
Geltrude..............................Alma Gluck
Conductor, Vittorio Podesti.

At The New Theatre yesterday afternoon New York was introduced, probably for the first time, to a work by a composer who was a contemporary of both Mozart and Beethoven, and has been dead near seventy years. It was Ferdinando Paer's "Il Maestro di Cappella," an Italian version of a little opera comique originally written in French, and produced in Paris in 1821. Paer's name is chiefly remembered now as that of the man who wrote an opera on the subject that Beethoven chose for his single production in that field, the success of which, under the title of "Leonore," was the reason why Beethoven was obliged to abandon the title he wished to give to his opera and call it "Fidelio."

Probably "Il Maestro di Cappella" is the only one of Paer's operas that survives. It is given occasionally in France and Germany, and even in London a version of it was brought forward a few years ago. The opera as it was set before the public at The New Theatre yesterday was disclosed as a delightful piece of musical comedy of the highest touch and most mirthful quality. There could scarcely be anything slighter. It is in one act, and engages only three characters, one of whom is merely a lay figure serving for a few introductory pages and then promptly disappearing. The light touch and the drolly humorous ideas that flit through this little score are such as need the intimacy of The New Theatre, the close connection that can be set up between the comedians on the stage and the people in the audience. Nothing has as yet been more fittingly set into the surroundings of this house than "Il Maestro di Cappella," and it would gain in effect in a considerably smaller house.

The situation in this piece of badinage—it can hardly be dignified with the name of plot—ise that Barnaba, a conductor and composer of Milan, wants his cook, Geltrude, to sing scenes from his new opera "Cleopatra," to his nephew, Benetto, whom he has asked to dinner. Geltrude is discovered getting the dinner ready, and wondering how she is going to sing this music, when she knows nothing about singing. Barnaba and Benetto enter; they appear to be credulous folk, for Geltrude seems able to convince them that they hear the cannon and trumpets of the French army. After this harmless introductory scene Geltrude goes out and Benetto is sent off for a bottle of wine.

Barnaba alone runs over the music of his immortal opera recalling and imitating the instrumentation—the bassoons, the horns, the flutes, holding open communion with the respective players of the real orchestra. Is this scene the prototype of many in which latter-day comedians have found an unfailing source of amusement?

Then Geltrude comes in and Barnaba instructs her in the great duet of his opera—in accentuation, in the expression of pathos, of tragis despair; in the trill, in scales, in roulades, and in all the other apparatus of the conventional Italian tragic style of the time. It is a delicious burlesque on that style and on the mannerisms and affectations that its interpreters pursued, and to which, indeed, they were well-nigh driven by its requirements.

The whole point of "Il Maestro di Cappella" depends on the interpreters of these two rôles of Barnaba and Geltrude, especially of the former. In Mr. Pini-Corsi there was a singer who fully understood and entered into the humorous intent of the piece, and who expressed it with a rich unction. He has not, as we have already heard, much voice, but he has enough for the mock roulades and other vocal ornaments which he is concerned with, and which he delivered with much gusto.

Miss Alma Gluck was wholly charming as Geltrude. She was arch and graceful in her action, and her singing had precisely the neatness and fluency that the music needs. Mr. Bada had the minor part of Benetto and fulfilled its requirements.

The music is light and melodious in an old-fashioned way; it suggests Rossini's comic style somewhat, though it is less substantial. But it still sparkles, and is light-heartedly gay. There is a long overture that sounds very much out of date now, and a well-made trio. Both are only introductory to the duet, which is really the whole opera. The orchestral accompaniment has a little more color and substance than might have been expected of such a work, from such a period. "Il Maestro di Capella" is something very well worth reviving for the purposes of The New Theatre.

It was followed by a performance by Rita Sacchetto, "in her art of dance," as the programme phrased it. Her art of dance is largely bound up with pantomime. She represented three scenes; the first, a young woman in an eighteenth century garden, gowned in an effective Gainsborough costume. They used to teach young ladies in those days "dancing and deportment." This scene seemed to present more deportment than dancing. It was danced to music by Handel and Mozart, a sarabande (the air being that of "Lascia ch'io piango") a minuet, and a "divertisement." This was followed by a dance in the costume of a Hungarian gypsy, to Liszt's second Hungarian Rhapsody, and Spanish dances, in costume of the Velasquez period, to pieces by Rubinstein and Moszkowski. In these Miss Sacchetto displayed a remarkably developed technique of the castanets.

There was, finally, a performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Mme. Noria, Miss Wickham, and Messrs. Martin and Gilly, in the chief parts. All but Mme. Noria were heard in the recent performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

SOCIAL REGISTER STATISTICS.

Centre of Fashionable Population Remains at 62d Street and Fifth Avenue.

The New York Social Register for 1910 has just been issued. It has been customary for the Social Register every two years since 1890, when the centre was fixed at Thirty-ninth Street, to ascertain the centre of population of the residences of the prominent families in New York City, and until 1902 the rate of progress has uniformly advanced northward about one block, or 200 feet, per year. After 1902 the rate suddenly increased to 300 feet per year, and the centre was located in December, 1905, at Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue. In 1908 it increased even more rapidly, and was found to have jumped to Sixty-second Street, a few feet east of Fifth Avenue, or at the rate of two blocks per annum.

Upon applying the same test this year the growth has been found for the first time to have been arrested, and remains at Sixty-second Street, moving east about half a block toward Madison Avenue. This arresting of the northward progress can be largely accounted for by the tendency of families to reside in hotels and apartments, and to the fact that while in previous years families, moving from the lower part of the city, scattered themselves more or less at the distant upper points on the east and west side, they seem now to have concentrated within the narrow territory in the upper fifties and sixties between Madison Avenue and as far East as Third Avenue, where the old-fashioned 18 and 20 foot residences have been remodeled into modern dwellings, 25 per cent. of the total residences in the Social Register being found located between Fifty-first Street and Sixty-second Street, from Lexington Avenue to Eighth Avenue.

As a further retarding effect to the growth northward it may be noted that the families occupying old-fashioned residences in Washington Square and apartments in Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Streets, within an area of four blocks, totaling 334, balance all the residences from Eighty-eighth Street to 196th Street.

By referring back to the association's statistics of some four years ago, when the centre of fashionable population was at Fifty-eighth Street, it was predicted the centre would for a long time remain at the Plaza, owing to the barrier presented by Central Park as an obstacle to intercourse between the east and the west side of the city.

Comparing the east with the west, while two years ago there were 10 per cent. more residences on the east side of Fifth Avenue than on the west, there are now just 15 per cent. more on the east side.

About 70 per cent. of the families in the Social Register are residing on Manhattan Island, about 25 per cent. are in the suburbs, 1,170 families are west of the Hudson, of which New Jersey claims 923; 552 families to the east in Long Island, and 871 families to the north, including Westchester County and Connecticut.

During the year 654 persons were married as compared to 662 last year, and there are noted the deaths of 221 women and 291 men, as compared to the deaths of 208 women and 249 men last year, a considerable increase in the mortality.

Hobart's farce, "The First Night," which Mr. Hobart adapted from the German of Rosen's "Der Halbe Dichter." Others in the company will be Julius McVicker, Sydney Booth, Albert Andruss, George E. Mack, Ben Turbett, Susanne Westford, Millicent Evans, Leonora Oakford, and Saidee Williams.

Charles Bordes Dead.

Charles Bordes, who was considered by César Franck one of his most distinguished pupils, has just died at Toulon, France, where he had lived in practical retirement for several years. He was born at Vouray sur Loire on May 12, 1863, and after studying with Franck he received a commission from the French Government to collect the folk songs of the Basque provinces. Mr. Bordes had learned from his teacher to perfect the old music, and in 1890 he founded the society of the singers of St. Gervais, which was devoted especially to the old church compositions of the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries. Similar organizations were founded by him in Lyons, Montpellier, Marseilles, and Toulon.

GEORGE GRAB, considered the largest member of the Elks Lodge in the State, and who for many yearsr was proprietor of the Central Hotel at New Rochelle, died yesterday aged 90 years. Mr. Grab for many years weighed 400 pounds, but sickness reduced him to about one-half that weight at the time of his death. A few years ago he sold out his hotel business in New Rochelle, and went to Germany for his health. His hotel was the rendezvous for many yachtsmen, clubmen, and politicians.

When Marquis Lafayette landed at the Battery on his visit to the United States in 1824 Mr. Seaman, who was then 5 years old, was taken by his grandfather to see the great General. Half a century ago Mr. Seaman was the proprietor of one of the largest wholesale grocery establishments in this city.

Previous record, 1,903 miles 5 laps, made by Hills-Demara in 1908.

All of last evening up to almost midnight was marked by the greatest sprinting for speed and distance ever seen in a six-day race in this country. From 5 o'clock to 11, in almost continuous fashion, the twelve teams still in the race hit up a clip such as Madison Square Garden had never witnessed before.

The terrific spurts of Rutt and Clark (a new team made yesterday noon after the withdrawal of Stoll and MacFarland on account of injuries) during the afternoon, the same team's efforts at night when it regained the lap it had lost in the making of the team, Stein's magnificent recovery of a lost lap all by himself, and the wonderful sprints made by Walthour and Collins, and Root and Fogler to gain a lap—well, ordinary adjectives fail to tell it at all. It had to be seen to be appreciated. The oldest timers remember nothing like it.

Krebs left the track without warning at 12:48 and his team lost three laps thereby. He complained of fatigue and refused to continue until after he had been refreshed by sleep. Cameron then went on the track, and, while tired, managed to keep up with the leaders, who were maintaining a slow pace.

Keegan, who was compelled to withdraw from the race early yesterday morning with a burning fever and a severe congestion of the lungs, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where it was said last night that a slight attack of pneumonia will keep him in bed for several days. Galvin, his partner, was unable to find a partner, and the Irish-American team was officially declared out of the race at 6:30 yesterday morning. Galvin watched the race last night from his old training quarters. Along with the rest of the spectators he was wildly excited, and applauded heartily the success of the Clark-Rutt and Stein-Hill teams to regain lost laps.

Undoubtedly the sensation of the morning was the withdrawal of Johann Stoll and Floyd MacFarland. Both of them popular favorites, with the latter backed heavily to win and his partner, Clark, receiving an equal share of favor, the betting situation was much complicated. MacFarland had been badly bruised by his fall of Wednesday night, and a broken finger caused him untold pain. He held on as long as he could, until his teammate could get another partner, and then withdrew in favor of Rutt at 12 o'clock.

Stoll, Rutt's mate, gave up the going shortly before 8 o'clock, because of a bad knee. It had failed under the continued strain, and the track surgeon diagnosed the trouble as "water on the knee" and several badly torn ligaments. MacFarland kept riding until 11:50, thus giving Clark a good sleep, and quitting only in time to permit of the new combination within the four-hour limit. The breaking up of these popular teams, and that of Keegan and Galvin the night before, because of Keegan's serious illness, left twelve teams in the race out of a total of seventeen entries.

Yet there has never been a race where withdrawals had been so infrequent and gradual. In previous six-day races it has often been the case that as many as five teams would leave in one day, whereas this year the splendid condition in which all the riders entered the long grind is attested by the large percentage remaining on the track and the speed they have maintained throughout the heart-breaking fourth day. But their staying power is equalled by that of some of the "watchers of the night" in the seats.

The crowd looked forward all afternoon to speed bursts from Clark and Rutt, the fastest sprinters on the track, but it wore on unrelieved by any very fast or spectacular work except at rare intervals. From 1 o'clock until 5 the riders were content to grind around the track without even occasional bursts of speed. While the men were fresh and looked to be in better condition than in any previous six-day grind, the strain was nevertheless beginning to tell. The lead which they had gained over the 1908 record dwindled constantly, unti, at 5 o'clock, the eighty-ninth hour, they were only four miles and five laps ahead of Hill and De Mara's figures.

But 5 o'clock had passed by only fifteen minutes when the large crowds were brought up standing, shouting, cheering, and whistling themselves hoarse. The cause of all the excitement was orange-jerseyed, pleasant-faced Clark. Hill jumped to the front as he saw his partner, Stein, prepare to relieve him, in the conventional spurt which marks these reliefs. Clark was different minded, however, and just as the riders were settling back to a steadier clip, the Australian pulled high up the bank at the Madison Avenue end, and, gathering speed with every inch, shot well ahead of the field before the others riders knew what was going on. Quickly Clark increased his lead, with Root spurting desperately to keep up with him.

But Clark was not to be denied. He opened up yard after yard on them all, and, as his lead increased to about fifty yards, was relieved by Rutt, who tooled the riders around the track as if pursued by a Nemesis. The Australian and German team had gained a lap over all the riders except Root and Fogler, and were half a lap ahead of this combination when De Mara repeated his performance of last night and slipped, slid, and fell to the floor well out of the way of the other riders.

He was taking, as he phrased it yesterday, "a long chance," and it won out. The bell was rung, and Clark and Rutt's splendid efforts came to naught. There was much hissing among the spectators at this, but it was mild to what came a few moments later.

The crowd was ready for anything. Apparently all the riders were not. For no sooner had the bell signaled the resumption of the race than Clark, who had relieved Rutt after the spill, started another terrific runaway. The battle of the clans was on again in a moment. Clark opened up a half lap on all but Fogler and then Rutt relieved him, carrying the team still further into the lead. Just at this moment when it seemed sure that this combination's hard, earnest, constant efforts to regain the lap lost by the new team-making of midday was to be successful, Leon Georget took a slow fall, and bang! went the gong again, saying that the lap-regaining efforts had been futile. The crowd was wild with disappointment, hissing De Mara, Georget, and the officials indiscriminately and for long periods.

The falling epidemic continued with Krebs taking a header, caused by Pye, at the Madison Avenue end, and he was relieved by Cameron. Then Vanoni slid gracefully to the floor. None of those who fell was injured. That the spectators were incensed by these tactics was made very plain, and the Garden resounded with jeers and catcalls. The officials spoke sharply to the riders and warned them against any recurrence of the tumble-bug methods of the preceding half hour.

Following these sprints and fallls the pace fell considerably, and for almost two hours the riders were content to keep up a nineteen-mile pace. The Garden in the meantime filled up and by 7:30 the galleries and balconies were packed to overflowing. These spectators arrived just in time to see some more desperate riding, started by E. Georget and Vanoni and helped along by Rutt and Fogler. Every man on the track was alert and, to put it mildly, suspicious. Did a rider go up the bank, even were it not his intention to shoot into the lead, the other men kept him carefully out of it. So that the efforts of the Frenchman and Italian went for nought except to amuse the crowd.

Another desperate spurt at 8:10 attempted by Hill, who had precipitated the sprints of the late afternoon, was well timed, and he had gained about forty yards on the field when another fall—again by De Mara—stopped all idea of lap gaining for a while. This was De Mara's second tumble in three hours, and each time it was during a furious sprint that his wheel "slipped."

From 9 o'clock to 10 there was little out of the ordinary. The riders increasd their speed a trifle, enough to make their lead over last year's record three instead of only two miles. The crowd was quiet and eager, but the riders did not feel quite so eager. They were on the lookout for anything, especially from the Rutt-Clark team. Particularly were they careful to keep Rutt well in back of the bunch and tied pretty closely to the rail.

This state of affairs continued until 10:30, when, during the relief of Clark by Rutt, a terrific sprint ended in Walthour falling and West and Pye going over him on the Twenty-seventh Street side. West had three teeth knocked out and had to be carried to his quarters in pretty bad condition. Pye and Walthout suffered only minor bruises and scraping of skin.

The tenseness of the crowd after this was not for nothing. Rutt, as soon as the gong sounded the fact that all was again right, jumped into the hottest pace of the day. Round after round he rode like mad, with the field badly strung out. Clark relieved him midway, and soon had a half lap on all, and a whole lap on the Georget brothers.

Clark kept up the terrific gait, and at 10:20 had regained the lap lost by teaming up with Rutt, and two over the Georgets. These four minutes were the liveliest that even the Garden, rich in tales and scenes of excitement, has ever witnessed.

Following Clark and Rutt's successful endeavors to get up with the leaders, Walthour started several sprints in an attempt to catch the Australian-German team tired and unprepared. But neither his efforts nor those of Root, Pye, and Stein to accomplish it bore any fruit. But these sprints certainly did keep the building in an uproar louder and more prolonged than has ever been the case in a six-day race.

Stein's magnificent spurts, after Pye had subsided, would alone have been enough, but with four teams all after a lap it is really remarkable that none of the "fans" died of heart disease.

Then to cap the climax Stein set out in earnest and succeeded in carrying his team even with the leaders. So Stein was in possession of the coveted lap, the leaders again numbered seven, and the spectators were supremely happy.

From 11 o'clock to midnight the scene abated not a bit of the excitement of the previous hour. Even Prunty's attempted announcement of the mileage was not permitted by the crowd, which just as he started to tell the results yelled its approval of a sprint by Walthour. The announcement that the Clark-Rutt and Stein-Hill teams were with the leaders called forth a mighty cheer, and Rutt and Hill made their happy acknowledgments of the crowd's plaudits.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 9.—D. M. Bomeister of Brooklyn to-day won the title of strong man of the freshman class at Yale. He made a total of 1,712 points against 1,611 for F. L. Samuels and 1,575 for F. Gilmore, who was third. Of the members of the class sixty-three call tennis their favorite sport, forty-six walking, thirty-three swimming, twenty-six baseball, seventeen football, and sixteen track athletics. This is the first class at Yale to put football practically at the bottom of the list of their favorite sports.

YALE AND HARVARD MEET ON FOOTBALL

"BIG" COLLEGES IN CONTROL

Little Fellows by Virtue of Numbers May Force an Issue That Will Be Far Reaching.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—While President Lowell's avowed and subsequently announced intention in requesting President Hadley and Walter Camp of Yale to meet him and Percy Haughton, Harvard's football coach, in Cambridge on Tuesday last, purported to result from a desire to reform football, it can be said on the authority of a man who stands very high in Yale athletic councils that this was by no means the dominating impulse of the conference.

The private consultation, saved from being a secret one only by the admission that the two great university heads and football directors had met, had for its object what may be called "conservation." But in reality it was a phase of football conservation quite different from the commonly accepted one which was discussed with fervor and anxiety.

It was the growing strength and virility of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association, headed by Capt. Palmer E. Pierce, U. S. A., which to Harvard and Yale seemed to threaten ancient and established prerogatives, that worried these two big universities. For Harvard and Yale, excepting only Princeton and Cornell, are alone in their refusal to recognize or join the union of (now) fifty-seven colleges, whose President Capt. Pierce is. But more even than the strength of these fifty-seven colleges, it was their increasing independence which precipitated Tuesday's conference.

Football revision Harvard and Yale are both willing to have. As to whether it shall be radical or conservative, whether it shall tend to a more open game or a return to old football, that, Harvard and Yale think, should be left entirely to the Intercollegiate Rules Committee.

The "big" colleges have no idea of permitting the domination of football to pass from their hands if they can prevent it. They have no feeling about letting the "little fellows" in except under their terms, not the "little fellows."

The Intercollegiate Athletic Association has gained in a large measure the approval of the public in its efforts in the field of suitable rules revision, a revision which shall be as good for the small college as for the big one, for the preparatory schoolboy as for the university man. Harvard and Yale, with Princeton and Cornell, are at last learning respect for the strength and position of Capt. Pierce's association.

They realize that, if the close football corporation which is now the Rules Committee, shall legislate in too conservative fashion or with the same eye to Yale and Harvard desired that has obtained in the past, then the Intercollegiate Association may promulgate a set of its own rules, revised radically to suit the needs of the situation, and say to Yale, Harvard, Princeton, and Cornell: "You may play under our rules or can play with none of our colleges. If you do not want to do that, find other institutions for your practice games."

Perhaps the real Yale-Harvard view of the conference is best expressed by the following statement by a prominent Harvard man, writing in a Boston paper the morning after the conference. He said:

> It is the Harvard-Yale view that the brains of Yale and Harvard will be sufficient, taking into consideration all the suggestions that have come to the ears of their football men, to mold a game of football which will be satisfactory to Harvard and Yale, and that a sufficient number of colleges will adopt Harvard-Yale rules to provide the Blue and Crimson with practice games. In fact, it is doubtful if any college or group of colleges which will decide to continue playing football would consider it worth while to conduct the game according to a different code of rules than that of Harvard, Yale, and, presumably, Princeton and Dartmouth.
> If necessary, Harvard and Yale will break away from the Football Rules Committee and make rules of their own. That is the meaning of the conference in which the two university Presidents and their football advisers participated.

In other words, Yale and Harvard threaten alone to do what fifty-seven universities have already said they might do. What is for the good of the fifty-seven may not be good for Yale and Harvard. Ego, regardless of whether what the fifty-seven do improves the game or not, Harvard and Yale will make their own set of rules. It is this phase of football conservation which prompted the meeting of Presidents Lowell and Hadley, Coaches Camp and Haughton.

And in the meanwhile public opinion about the Rules Committee is perhaps best expressed by the opinion of a Yale man, who said: "If the Intercollegiate Rules Committee wants to show its desire for real reformation of the rules, let its sessions be open to all."

Kansas in Western Conference?

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Kansas University is about to enter conference football company. Coach Stagg of the University of Chicago has announced the probability of a game for next Fall with the Westerners, and the game will be the beginning of a permanent gridiron arrangement between the members of the Missouri Valley Conference and the "Big Eight." The Chicago enthusiasts think Kansas may be taken in to replace Purdue, although Coach Stagg refuses to say that the Indiana men are to be shelved.

Stuyvesant High School Games.

In keeping with their reputation as a model and vigorous set of athletes the members of the athletic association of the Stuyvesant High School of New York have arranged an attractive programme for the fifth annual indoor meet of the school, to be held at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, to-morrow evening. Among the events will be a 220-yard dash for High School boys, an 880-yard relay race open to High School freshmen, and an eight-lap High School relay teams to consist of four boys, each to run 352 yards. There will be eleven closed events, a 300-yard handicap open to ex-members of the Stuyvesant Athletic Association, and a 220-yard dash open to the Faculty of the school.

Junior Aero Club Contests.

The Junior Aero Club of America will compete for the L. R. Adams Cup at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory, Sixty-ninth Street and Broadway, to-morrow at 1 P. M. The contest will be conducted under the auspices of the West Side Branch Y. M. C. A.

FIGHT IN SALT LAKE CITY.

Rickard Scores Critics of Fourthcoming Jeffries-Johnson Bout.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—"The Jeffries-Johnson bout will be held in Salt Lake City, and it will be no fake," was "Tex" Rickard's positive declaration to the local sports to-day.

"I am sick of this fake talk," said Rickard, "and I will give any one $5,000 if he will show me anything crooked in the arrangements.

"I knew the day before the bids were opened that Johnson would stand by me and that Jeffries would be with Jack Gleason, so we got together and talked the matter over and came to an understanding. Coffroth told Gleason to go ahead and come in with me. That let Coffroth out of the whole affair, and I want the public to know he has nothing to do with it.

"The understanding between Gleason and me is that if the bout should be held in California he was to get the permit, and if it takes place in Salt Lake, where I am satisfied it will, or Ely, Nev., I was to look after the permit.

"I will not have to fix any official in Salt Lake in order to pull the bout off there. The bankers, brokers, and business men of the city, who want me to hold it there, have given me all the assurance necessary that it will not be interfered with. The Salt Palace, where the bout will be held, will, with some alterations, hold about 30,000 people."

It was said here to-day that Eddie Graney will be the referee.

GIRLS KEEN FOR BASKET BALL.

Barnard College Students Turn Out Strong for the Sport.

When Dr. Edgar Fauver began to coach the Barnard College students in basket ball about four years ago he had a hard time trying to get out enough girls for one team, but this year there are so many candidates that he has four teams, besides the 'Varsity team. Regular practice began two weeks ago in the Thompson gymnasium, and the coach has already discovered several stars in the freshman class, the most conspicuous one being Miss Dorothy Cheesman, who was Captain of the first team at the Horace Mann School for three years. She is one of the best players that has ever come to Barnard.

Although the 'Varsity team is minus the famous Smithers twins this year the girls hope for a winning team, for they still have the old stand-bys, the Misses Nanette Hamburger, Lilian Schoedler, Molly Conroly, Marie Wegener, and Ethel Leveridge.

Five or six games with outside teams have already been arranged for, but the contest that is causing the greatest sensation is the alumnae game, to be played shortly after the Christmas vacation. The alumnae team will be composed of all ex-'Varsity players. Among them are the Smithers sisters, also Josephine Prahl, Florence Sammet, Adelaide Richardson, and Helen Cooley.

At the end of the basket ball season members of the 'Varsity team will be presented with white coat sweaters and large blue B's.

Xavier A. A. Indoor Games.

Four events were decided last night at the monthly indoor games of the Xavier Athletic Association at the clubhouse, 205 West Fourteenth Street. The feature event was the mile and a half handicap run, from the clubhouse to Washington Arch and return. B. McCherry, with a handicap of one minute, captured the event by fifteen yards from J. Robertson, who started from the same mark. The summary:

Mile and a Half Run, Handicap.—Won by B. McCherry, (1 minute;) J. Robertson, (1 minute,) second; J. Vetell, (45 seconds,) third. Time—9:30.

Salome Race.—Won by J. Gowardi; D. Barrow, second; J. Walsh, third. No time taken.

Potato Race.—Won by J. Marquart; J. Walsh, second; T. Mangan, third. Time—0:35.

Running High Jump, Handicap.—Won by J. Walsh, (5 inches,) height, 5 feet; C. Larkin, (5 inches,) height, 4 feet 11 inches, second; H. Heilland, (scratch,) height, 4 feet 3 inches, third.

Testimonial to Harry Hillman.

Men prominent in the city's professional business, social, and athletic life will be invited to serve on the committee of fifty which is to have charge of the testimonial to be given to Harry L. Hillman when he retires from the amateur ranks next month. A preliminary meeting was held at the Irish-American Athletic Club last night, and a large number of interested athletes were present. W. L. Jones acted as Chairman and George Matthews secretary. Among those who have been invited to serve on the Committee of Fifty are James E. Sullivan, Secretary and Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union; Gen. George W. Wingate, President of the Public Schools Athletic League; Major Clarence Smith, Everit J. Wendell, Gustavus T. Kirby, Robert T. Kammerer, Commissioner John Cloughen, P. J. Conway, President of the Irish-American Athletic Club; Major Sidney Grant, J. T. Mahoney, Captain of the New York Athletic Club, Commissioner James J. Hogan, and many others.

700 Schoolboys Enter Indoor Games.

Dr. C. Ward Crampton, Secretary of the Public Schools Athletic League, has already received more than 700 entries for the elementary schools indoor track championship to be held in the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory to-morrow afternoon. Among the strongest of the relay teams entered are those of Public Schools 19, 7, 24, 6, and 77 of Manhattan; 83, 28, and 10 of the Bronx, and 128, 144, and 9 of Brooklyn. A feature of the meet will be the lightweight and heavyweight relay races.

Athletics at Berkeley School.

The basket ball team of Berkeley School will be well tested to-morrow when it faces the five of Hackley School on the latter's court. The Berkeley representatives will be: Sumner, right forward; Cortorda, left forward; C. Shaw, centre; Jetter, right guard; Jimenis, left guard. Coach Williams has just announced these records for the gymnasium class in November: Indian club race, E. Miller, 0:20 3-5; obstacle race, T. H. Blackmore, 0:23; running high kick, E. Miller, 7 feet 2½ inches; standing back jump, E. Miller, 5 feet 10 inches; standing broad jump, I. Rothstein, 8 feet; putting up forty-pound dumbbell, J. Jetter, 32 times; dips on the bar, E. Pittwood, 15 times; climbing the bar, C. Walton, 13 times.

Notes of the Turf.

A regular monthly meeting of the Jockey Club was held in the Windsor Arcade yesterday afternoon. The meeting was purely a routine one, and at its conclusion the stewards met, though no other than regular routine business was considered.

The Deutscher Sport publishes a list of the winning owners for the year on the racetracks of France, England, Germany, Italy, and America, showing that William K. Vanderbilt leads with a total of $230,000; the Imperial Stud of Austria is second, with a total of $190,425. Mr. Fairie is third.

Board of Review Adjourns.

The meeting of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association, which has been in session for the past two days, was adjourned yesterday morning until the second Tuesday in May, 1910. The Board completed all its important work Wednesday and just a few routine matters remained to be disposed of. The National Trotting Association Congress will be held in this city in May, 1910.

HERRMANN IS HERE TO ELECT HEYDLER

Cincinnati Magnate Stands Firm for National League President.

CRITICISES THE OPPOSITION

Advance Guard Arrives in New York to Attend Baseball Meetings Next Week at the Waldorf.

August Herrmann, President of the Cincinnati Baseball Club and Chairman of the National Commission, arrived in the city yesterday, and made it plain to everybody concerned that he was out for the re-election of John Heydler for the Presidency of the National League. Mr. Herrmann is stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria, and was besieged last evening with questions concerning the situation in baseball. One thing is very certain. Mr. Herrmann and Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg, two of the most influential men connected with the sport, are strong for Heydler, and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion among baseball men last night that, in spite of the opposition to the present head of the League by Charles W. Murphy and Charles H. Ebbets, present indications pointed to his success in the League meeting next week.

Mr. Herrmann has never been so outspoken on League politics before an annual meeting as he was yesterday. "When Heydler's name was first mentioned to succeed the late Harry Pulliam," said Mr. Herrman, "I was opposed to him because I did not believe him qualified for the place. But developments since that time in the National League have made it clear to me that he is a capable, efficient man. The objections that have been raised against him in some quarters have been silly, and it looks very much as if some of the managers wanted to go on the diamond and umpire their own games. Even then some of them would not be satisfied. Heydler has made mistakes. Every man makes them. If I had a man working for me who didn't make a few mistakes I would think that he was lazy and wasn't doing any work. Why, I make mistakes every day of my life."

Mr. Herrmann said that it was the decided stand that Heydler has taken in backing up his umpires against irate players that has given the public such great confidence in his administration, and he said when the public realized that the head of the League was square and running things in the best interests of the patrons of the game, baseball was lifted to a high standard and was at the height of its prosperity.

"There has never been so much interest in the game as during the past year," said Mr. Herrmann, "and it was all because the public knew that what was going on on the diamond was on the level."

The Red's President gave a whack to Charles W. Murphy when he stated, "I am against Murphy and any 'game' he tries to start. I don't like the 'game' he is playing in this affair and am strongly opposed to it."

Mr. Herrmann was busy yesterday afternoon. He said that he had to go uptown to look over some important papers. He wouldn't say what they were, but it is supposed he was closeted with John T. Brush of the Giants, and was looking over the papers concerned in the recent deal in Philadelphia. Last evening, when asked about the Phillies, Mr. Herrmann said it was all a puzzle to him. He stated he has not been able to find any one yet who understood the baseball situation in Horace Fogel's town.

"Nobody seems to know who is behind the Philadelphia purchase," said Mr. Herrmann, "and therefore I cannot talk with any authority on the matter."

Mr. Herrmann intimated that the election of John M. Ward would undoubtedly cause a serious breach with the American League. He said that he had had official communication with the American League, (presumably President Ban Johnson,) and there was no doubt in his mind that if an attempt was made to elect Ward it was not unlikely that some trouble would follow. He said that these communications gave several reasons why Ward was objected to, but he would not state what they were.

"Every criticism that has been made by club Presidents against Heydler's judgment on the appeal of umpires' decisions," went on the Cincinnati President, "is a criticism of the Board of Directors, because we have stood back of the President in all these decisions. Why, Ebbets himself has voted to uphold the President in some of his decisions, where he was not an interested party. So if Heydler goes down in this election we, who have supported him in his decisions, must go down with him. If he falls we fall, that's the way I look at it."

A fanning bee was held at the Waldorf last evening. Besides Mr. Herrmann there was President Heydler, who had a long confidential talk with the Cincinnati President. Also Secretary Fred Knowles of the New York Club, Clark Griffith, manager of the Reds, and other well-known baseball men. Billy Murray of Philadelphia is also in the city, but he had nothing to say about his position in the new Philadelphia deal.

Lake to Manage Boston Nationals.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Fred Lake, manager of the Boston American League baseball team during 1909 and part of the 1908 season, to-day signed a contract to manage the Boston National League team for one year. Mr. Lake will take the place of Harry Smith of Massilon, Ohio, who had charge of the team during part of the season. He will assume his new duties at once and attend the major league meetings in New York next week.

WATSON TRIUMPHS IN RING.

Baltimorean's Four-in-Hand Beats Moore's at Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 9.—C. W. Watson of Baltimore scored his third four-in-hand victory this evening when he won in the park fours from Judge W. H. Moore of New York. The Baltimore enthusiast carried off the blue ribbon with Lord Baltimore, My Maryland, Lady Baltimore, and Virginia. Mr. Moore's team was composed of Minerva, Debator, Robin Hood, and Wallenstein.

In the class for harness horses, women driving, Mr. Moore's Lady Seaton received the blue ribbon, Mrs. Ambrose Preece of London driving. The second prize went to C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore, driven by Mrs. Watson.

Henry R. Rea's Indian Flower won the blue in the ladies' saddle horse class and his Dr. Crockett received second prize.

One of the interesting classes during the afternoon was that for ladies driving pairs of harness horses for the Stanley Field trophy. The prize went to C. W. Watson's Kitty Grey and Norena, Mrs. C. W. Watson holding the reins. Judge Moore took second place with his Amaryllis and Phyllis.

Judge Moore carried off a share of the prizes during the afternoon, however, winning in the class for horses over 15 hands 2 inches that have not won a prize prior to Nov. 20 this year. He won with Quicksand. Irvington Farm was second, with Squire Irvington, and Moore took third with Hinocker.

Judge Moore's bay gelding Crator won the blue in the class for combination horses, and in the runabout class he finished third with Lady Gay.

During the morning hackney mares held the ring. Judge Moore's Lady Seaton carried off the blue in the class for four-year-olds, Pabst's Rosadora being second and Watson's Moonshine third.

In the championship class Lady Seaton easily carried off the honors, Truman's Queen of Diamonds being awarded the reserve.

Kennedy Beats Mango.

"Fighting Bill" Kennedy fought six rounds with "Willie" Mango at the Long Acre Athletic Association last night and had the better of it all the way, xcept in the third round, when Mango woke up and pushed his left rudely into Kennedy's face. Kennedy was substituted for "Kid" Rose, who meant to attend last night's meeting of the club, but had another engagement. Kennedy had a liking for pummeling Mango in the ribs and on the wind. That sort of thing is tiring, and Mango had all the appearance of being somewhat distressed. A goodly number of members saw the fun.

American Football and Its Name.

It developed at Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Education that the game of football as played by American colleges and schools has no name. Commissioner James E. Sullivan in his criticism of the school Superintendents for recommending the abolition of the game, said that they didn't even know the name of the game when they called it Rugby or American Rugby. Then some one asked Mr. Sullivan the correct name of the game. Mr. Sullivan was too wise to make an answer. The game has no name. It is called half a dozen different things. Certainly, everybody knows it's football, but what kind?

Princeton's Hockey Schedule.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 8.—Eleven games will be played by the Princeton hockey team this season. Three of these will be the matches with the Yale hockey team, which are annually held in Pittsburg. These games have no bearing on the championship series. The schedule follows:

BROOKLYN JUNE STAKES.

List Shows Many Changes and 2-Year-Olds Are Benefitted Chiefly.

Announcement was made yesterday of the stakes of the Brooklyn Jockey Club that are to be closed Jan. 3. There are thirteen in the list, and with the five two-year-old stakes that closed in October the list shows four more than were decided at the June meeting this year. Many of them are constructed along the same lines as the old stakes, while some show a very material increase, and altogether the list is a good one.

As was predicted, the Brooklyn Handicap is made $6,000 guaranteed instead of $5,000, as it was last year, and of the other stakes the best increase is shown in the races for two-year-olds. The Great American and the Tremont were of $2,500 guaranteed each last season, and for the coming year they have been raised to $6,500. The Criterion was a stake of $1,000 added, and it has been made $3,500 guaranteed, and a like valuation is fixed for the Expectation and Hudson, two stakes that were not run in 1909. The other fixtures that have been added since the last meeting are the Clover, of $2,000 for two-year-old fillies, and the Hanover, of $1,500 for selling plater two-year-olds.

The stakes that have already closed show the Great American with 103 entries; Criterion, 94; Hudson, 94; Tremont, 96, and the Expectation, 93. Taking a line from this response, it is safe to predict that the stakes to close Jan. 3 will show good lists.

SAYS PUBLIC OPINION MAKES THE LAWS

Mayor McClellan Gives His Views of Legislation to Princeton Students.

THE THIRD TERM PROBLEM

Grant's Defeat for the Nomination in 1880, He Thinks, Settled the Question Finally.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 9.—Mayor George B. McClellan of New York delivered the first of his two lectures to-day on "Present Day Legislation" at Princeton University. His discourse was confined mainly to a definition of the origin, growth, and scope of legislation and the relations of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments to the functions of law-making in this country.

The Mayor began by saying that in its broadest meaning legislation includes the making of any law by any part of the Government charged with law-making functions by the sovereign power. Under this definition a decision by the Supreme Court giving to a law a new application or a new interpretation is legislation. Reduced to its simplest terms, the Mayor said, legislation is the modification of law by the exercise of the sovereign will.

"In this country," he said, "we say that all sovereignty was originally lodged in the people of the several States who have yielded a part of that power to the Union, but that, here as elsewhere, the ultimate sovereignty is not in the States, but in the people who compose them.

"Theoretically, legally, and sentimentally this statement may be satisfactory; actually it is not.

"Sovereignty is lodged in a part of the people sufficiently large or strong or able to neutralize all opposition and to enforce its will. The manifestation of its will we call public opinion, and the expression of public opinion in concrete form we call law."

The Mayor then discussed the gradual growth of laws in this country, ridiculing the prevalent theory that legislation holds a panacea for all ills or power to right all wrongs

Unenforceable Laws.

"There are many laws on the statute books to-day," said the Mayor, "that are not enforced because they are absolutely unenforceable. And this is because public opinion is opposed to them and will not tolerate their enforcement.

"There are other laws upon the statute books, laws to which public opinion is opposed, that are enforced with more or less vigor and consistency, but whose enforcement leads inevitably to corruption, perjury, and bribery.

"Enactments upon the statute books that are not supported by public opinion are not worthy to be called laws. Either they are not enforced at all, in which case they are no better than so much waste paper, or if they are enforced they become offensive, or as Mr. James C. Carter puts it, they 'are not so much law as tyranny.'

"It is quiet within the power of Congress to enact, the Supreme Court to sustain, and the Executive to enforce a statute that is counter to prevalent public opinion. But the enforcement cannot continue for long, for sooner or later public opinion will assert itself and the statute will either be repealed by Congress, made void by the Supreme Court declaring it unconstitutional, or become a dead letter through nonenforcement by the Executive.

"At the last analysis that which gives life to the statute, that which transforms it from an empty threat into the living, breathing law, is the vitalizing force of public opinion.

The Law of Public Opinion.

"Law, then, as we understand it, being the concrete expression of public opinion, consists for us in this country of, first, the Constitution of the United States with its amendments, constitutional and formal, and its amendments, unconstitutional or extra-constitutional and informal; and, second, treaties, the laws of the United States, State Constitutions and State laws which have the sanction of public opinion, and have not been declared unconstitutional, and the common law so far as it is applicable.

"When the fathers in framing the Constitution distributed the powers of Government among three great divisions, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial, the separation of each department from the other two was clearly marked, the only overlapping of powers being the share in legislation given the President in his qualified veto power, and in his power to make treaties; the executive function given the Senate of advising upon and consenting to the appointment of certain officers of the Government, and the judicial function given the Senate to try impeachments.

"With these exceptions it is perfectly clear that the framers of the Constitution intended to limit Congress strictly to the exercise of legislative powers, the President to the exercise of executive powers, and the Supreme Court to the exercise of judicial powers.

"Much and sincerely as we may deplore the fact, custom, or rather public opinion, has decreed a certain redistribution of governmental powers scarcely contemplated by any of the framers of the Constitution, and not provideed in that instrument itself. With the exception of the Senate's power to approve appointments and treaties and to try impeachments, Congress is still limited chiefly to the exercise of its original legislative functions, but this power has been largely deprived of its exclusive character, for Congress has shared it with both the other branches of government.

Readjustment of Powers.

"It has yielded to the Executive, or to the commissions appointed by him, certain distinctly legislative powers in the making of treaties and in the control of corporations, in the fixing of customs duties and of railway rates. The excuse is that these powers are only ministerial, Congress enunciating the general principle and the President carrying it out.

"An example of the length to which this theory may be carried is found in the recent Hepburn act, where Congress merely proclaims that the rates shall be reasonable and without discrimination—both mere expressions of the common law—and leaves the determination what is reasonable between the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the Supreme Court, neither of them legislative bodies. The common law may, indeed, be decided by a judicial body; but it is difficult to see why the alteration of the common law is not legislation.

"The great legislative rival of Congress is the Supreme Court, for the sanction of public opinion has been gradually giving it greater and greater power, so that to-day under the legal fiction of constitutional interpretation and application it amends and vetoes at will any act of importance that comes before it.

"It is true that the court has not, or rather never has seen fit to exercise, the power of passing upon an act per se, and that the act comes before it only indirectly as the result of an appeal from the decision of the lower court on the determination of the litigation between parties to an action. But, nevertheless, sooner or later important acts are brought before the court in this way, and the court then holds them constitutional or unconstitutional or amends them by declaring them to have a meaning never contemplated by their authors.

The Constitution.

"The attitude of the American people toward the Constitution has during their history passed through three distinct phases. During the period immediately succeeding ratification they regarded it as almost a work of divine origin. It was considered near treason to criticise it, for upon the subject of government it was supposed to contain the sum of human wisdom.

"Then followed the civil war period, during which the Constitution fell from its high estate, the fathers were ridiculed by some of their unworthy sons as a lot of slaveholding old fogies, (see Anti-Slavery Tract No. 1,) and the instrument, itself looked at askance for sanctioning slavery, was treated with neither affection nor respect by those who were called, in the excitement of war, to govern under its provisions.

"But the pendulum has swung back again, and the Constitution once more occupies a warm place in the hearts of the American people. It is true that we recognize the fact that the Constitution was made for man and not man for the Constitution, yet the sentiment of reverence and love which we feel for it is quite beyond the comprehension of those not of our blood.

"So our Constitution is no obsolete panacea for political ills, but the living, vital force of our National life. It expresses the will, not of those who are dead and gone, but of those who are alive to-day. We have made it mean, not perhaps what its authors meant, but what public opinion of the present wishes it to mean. As it derives its sanction and its life from public opinion, so public opinion has adapted it for present use.

The Basis of Law.

"As the law is nothing but the concrete expression of public opinion, and has neither force nor real existence without the sanction of public opinion, so the Constitution, which is nothing more than fundamental law, derives its very life from the support of public opinion. If public opinion sanctions the disregard, the modification or the violation of any provision of the Constitution, such disregard, modification or violation becomes as much the law of the land as though it had been decreed by formal amendment in the orderly, proper and constitutional manner.

"Some of these extra constitutional amendments, constituting what Prof. Tiedeman calls 'the unwritten Constitution,' have been due to the slow growth of custom, gradually acquiring the force and power of formal and literal constitutional amendment, while others have been nothing but the open violation of the Constitution either by the legislative, executive or judicial branch of the Government, approved and ratified by the sovereign power of public opinion.

"The Constitution has been amended by custom in two important particulars: First, in limiting the service in the Presidency of any one man to two terms; and, second, in entirely altering the method of the Presidential election.

"Washington, who doubtless could have held the Presidency as long as he lived, in his Farewell Address declined a third term on the ground that the safety of our republican institutions required the fixing of a limit to the Presidential eligibility, and fixed that limit at two terms. The custom was still further established by Jefferson, who, whether or not he made a virtue of necessity, announced his determination to decline a third term. Madison, Monroe and Jackson never thought for a moment of disputing the unwritten law.

The Third Term Question.

"In 1876 General Grant, who was anxious to be nominated a third time, was with difficulty dissuaded by his friends from making the attempt. In 1880, however, he made a desperate effort to break the custom, contending that Washington had meant that no man should serve for three consecutive terms, but had not meant to preclude the holding of the Presidency by the same man for an indefinite time, provided each period of eight years was separated from the last by an intervening period of four years.

"General Grant never mustered more than 313 delegates, less than a majority of the Republican National Convention, and had the mortification to see Gen. Garfield, his personal enemy, receive the prize that he had so ardently coveted. This second defeat of the effort to nominate Gen. Grant for the third time has been generally accepted as the final decision of public opinion that no man shall be President more than twice.

"It is true that recently there has been some idle and academic discussion as to whether or not the people would elect a man who had served nearly but not quite eight years in the Presidency. The argument that Washington meant to limit the service of any man to two full and elected terms has not been taken very seriously by the country."

The Mayor reviewed at length the origin and history of the various amendments which have been made to the Constitution, as indicating the intention of the framers.

The second lecture of the series will be delivered a week from to-day.

COST OF LIVING GOES UP.

Commodities on Dec. 1 Higher Than Ever Before on That Date.

The continuous upward movement of the prices of the necessities of life is again illustrated in Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices as of Dec. 1, which shows an increase of 1.7 per cent. over Nov. 1. The Dec. 1 index number is $9.1262, which is within a small fraction of 1 per cent. of the highest level of prices of commodities ever reached, which was registered on March 1, 1907, when Bradstreet's index number stood at $9.1293. The low level for this year was made on March 1 last, and this month's figure shows a gain of 11 per cent. over that date. It is the highest Dec. 1 figure on record.

Commenting on the conditions, Bradstreet's says:

> The situation bears very heavily on a goodly number of the public, and while it is no doubt enjoyed by the producer, it is, on the other hand, very embarrassing to manufacturers as well as railway interests. These latter important entities in the commercial world have already felt the pinch of high prices, and now they are being confronted with demands for higher wages, which demands are predicated on the increased cost of living. If higher wages are granted and materials continue high, as seems quite likely, there will have to be considerable manoeuvring to conserve profits.

TO CUT SALT CAPITAL IN HALF.

Plan of Reduction Under Consideration by International Company.

Reduction of the capital of the International Salt Company is being considered by the company's officials and its large stock and bond holders. Although nothing definite has been done, it was said yesterday that one of the proposals is to cut in half the present capital of $30,000,000. Of this amount $18,228,000 is outstanding, on which no dividends have been paid since December, 1906.

The company has a bonded debt of $10,052,000 and a floating indebtedness estimated at about $2,500,000. Of the bonds outstanding, $2,500,000 are the first 5s of the Retsof Mining Company, $132,000 the first 6s of the Hutchinson-Kansas Salt Company, underlying companies, and $6,420,000 first consolidated collateral 5s of the parent company.

It is proposed to supplant the first collateral trust bonds of the parent company by mortgage bonds, of which the collateral bond holders would receive 50 per cent. of their holdings and 50 per cent. in the reduced stock.

The next interest payment on the collateral bonds is not due until April 1.

BANK OF ENGLAND RATE CUT.

Reduced to 4½ Per Cent. on Continued Ease in Money.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Bank of England reduced the minimum rate of discount from 5 to 4½ per cent. to-day. The directors apparently had some difficulty in reaching a decision, as the meeting was longer than usual.

That the Bank maintained the 5 per cent. rate for some weeks against the open market rate of 4 per cent. or lower was attributable to a desire to ascertain the full effect of the political crisis, but no material change followed the throwing out of the Budget, so the directors concluded that the reserve, which is higher to-day than a year ago when the rate was only 2½ per cent., was sufficiently strong to justify them in relieving trade of the abnormal rate instituted to attract gold here after the depletion of the reserve in October.

The change in the rate had little effect on the Stock Exchange. Consols were steady at the opening, but declined 3-16 later.

Baltimore & Ohio Re-elects Murray.

The Directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad re-elected yesterday President Murray and the other officers of the road, Assistant Controller Booth being promoted to the Controllership to fill a vacancy. The report that Mr. Murray means to retire from the Presidency brought a statement from Directors of the road that Mr. Muray had made no reference yesterday to any such intention, but in the same quarters the previous discussion by Mr. Murray of such a plan was not denied.

M'CARTY HOLDS ON TO SHOOTING TITLE

Wins Amateur Championship for the Second Time at Travers Island.

MISSES ONLY TWO TARGETS

F. A. Hodgman of New York A. C. Finishes Second and A. Lindley is Third After Triple Shoot-Off.

George S. McCarty of Philadelphia retains the amateur trapshooting championship of America, which was held for the fifth time yesterday at Travers Island and under the auspices of the New York Athletic Club. The Philadelphian, like last year, when he carried off the honors and broke the record for the event by scoring 96 out of 100 targets, made another new mark by smashing 98 out of the allotted 100.

Fred A. Hodgman of the New York Athletic Club was not very far behind the winner, tallying 95, while for third prize A. Lindley of the Smith Gun Club of Newark, N. J., beat C. E. Mink of Philadelphia and H. C. Kirkwood of Boston in a shoot-off after each had broke 93.

It was an ideal day for shooting, notwithstanding the fact that a strong cross wind hindered some of the shooters after the first gun was fired at 10:30 o'clock. Newcomb of Philadelphia, after making the high score of 96 in the preliminary competition on the previous day, failed to approach that mark, while the winner, McCarty, improved his score by 15 points. The best work of the two days, however, was made by Hodgman and Newcomb, each having 187 targets to his credit, while C. E. Mink of Philadelphia finished with 186, Al Ivins 183, and McCarty 181.

When the first twenty-five targets had been shot only three of the 89 amateur contestants, F. A. Hodgman, A. Lindley, and George Piercy, had clean scores, McCarty being credited with one miss. The second string found only McCarty and Kirkwood of Boston with straight scores, the leaders at the close of half of the competition being McCarty, 49; Hodgman, 48; Lindley, 48, and Kirkwood, 48. In the last two strings McCarty kept up his excellent work, losing only one target, as did C. E. Mink, his fellow-townsman. Hodgman weakened in his second and third strings, losing four out of fifty.

McCarty shot with much coolness, using a single-barreled breech-loading gun rigged with a ventilated rib. He missed one target in his first string, then broke fifty straight, and lost one blue rock in his last twenty-five. Al Ivins of Red Bank, N. J., who was second in the preliminary shoot, with a score of 94, did his best work in the first string yesterday, and then weakened perceptibly.

George K. Kouwenhoven of the Bergen Beach Gun Club was expected to keep up his reputation established in the metropolitan and cosmopolitan handicaps, especially after placing 92 targets to his credit on Wednesday, but yesterday the best he could do was to score 89.

John H. Hendrickson, the first winner of the championship, broke only 82, while W. M. Ford of Wilmington, Del., who succeeded Hendrickson as champion, finished with a total of 91.

Among the seventeen professionals who shot with the amateurs Lester German and Sim Glover each broke 95, J. A. R. Elliott and H. S. Wells following with 94. The scores:

May Break Four-Mile Record.

So sure are the managers of the Sixty-ninth Regiment games that a new world's record will be made in the four-mile race, which is scheduled to be the feature of the meet to-morrow night in their armory, that they have already ordered the special prize which goes to the man who makes the record. The very best distance runners in this section are entered, and they are so evenly matched that it is almost impossible to pick the probable winner in advance. While it is expected that George Bonhag will start, Jim Crowley, John Daly, Joe Malone, Tom Collins, George Obermeyer, and others have a host of followers who are banking on them to win. There are about a dozen other events on the programme.

Two Aquatic Events at Columbia.

The first swimming contest for the Trubenbach medals was held at Columbia University yesterday afternoon. The interest shown was the keenest that has been shown in any swimming work this year, more than forty men entering for the two events. The summaries:

Fancy Diving.—Won by R. R. Stewart, '11; A. H. Patterson, '11, second; A. Stern, '13, third; B. W. Dunn, Jr., '13, fourth.

50-Yard Dash.—Won by G. E. Crawley, '13; G. W. Dunn, '13, second; W. W. Campbell, '13, third; L. Dinkenspiel, '13, fourth. Time—0:30 3-5.

Boxing Bouts at Sulzer's Casino.

The National Sporting Club of America will hold its first boxing entertainment of the season for its members at Sulzer's Casino, 127th Street and Second Avenue, next Monday evening, when Jim Kenrick, champion of England, and Johnny Daly of this city will entertain the members for ten rounds of boxing. Three six-round preliminaries between the best men in their respective classes will precede the main event. Eddie Graney will referee the main event.

Georgetown to Play Columbia.

TOY DOGS ON BENCH.

Society Attends Show Held in the Astor Gallery.

Two hundred aristocratic bred dogs were benched yesterday in the Astor Gallery at the Waldrof-Astoria, when the judging began at the seventh annual exhibition of the Toy Spaniel Club of America. It was an exclusively social function, and every aisle was crowded during the day. The space limited the judging rings to two, and as a result the progress in the work of judging was slow, but an eager crowd watched the work of the officials in the ring.

The exhibits ranged from English toy and Japanese spaniels to Pomeranians. Some dainty toy bull terriers that could almost be smuggled through a keyhole, were exhibited, while the baskets were decorated with lace and ribbons. National and international champions passed in review before the judges, while many of the exhibits were carefully tended by white-aproned maids.

Competition was of the keenest character. This was particularly the case in the Pomeranians, which easily led all the other classes. The feature in this class was the reappearance of champion Shelton Brown Elf, exhibited by Mrs. P. Williamson Roberts of Philadelphia, purchased at the previous toy dog show for $1,500. Shelton Brown Elf, after sweeping the boards in this country, was taken to Paris, where he captured the championship of his class. His entry was refused by the management of the Crystal Palace show, near London, owing to the quarantine regulations, which are very stringent in England. After winning in the open class Shelton Brown Elf met an unexpected defeat at the hands of Fox Hills Perfection, winner at last year's New York show. The consensus of opinion, however, was in favor of Shelton Brown Elf, which was in splendid fettle.

Miss Anna Sands swept the boards with her Pom Patch Tufnell, which, as Cobham Jack Spratt, was a big winner in England, but in the championship class shared the fate of Sheldon Brown Elf by being defeated by Fox Hills Perfection, Mrs. J. Leggett Puetz's recent importation. Offley Mite's Sable Fly secured several well-merited ribbons, while Mrs. M. Thorpe's Clayton Gold Reef was awarded the premier award over Fox Hill's Oriole, which was beautiful in bloom and rare color of orange sable.

In the winner's class for King Charleses, black and tan, the most prominent blue ribbon winner was Mrs. A. Ronalds Conklin's Rodanthe Advocate, while in Blenheims Fred Schwerdferger's champion Featherwing, an international winner, came out victorious. In the Prince Charles breed the dogs were headed by Miss Mary Henderson's champion Walkley Victor, while in the opposite sex Miss Charlotte Watkin's St. Anthony Mischief was deemed the best in its class.

In the class for Japanese spaniels the entries were a very disappointing lot, with Mme. Robert Loonen's Faro San the best of those exhibited. The other classes were well contested, but the quality was somewhat below the average.

Mrs. Richard P. McGrann, who was to judge the Pekingese spaniels, was unable to be on hand owing to the Chicago Horse Show, but a telegram was received from her announcing that she had left Chicago and would be on hand to-day to judge the class. The judging will be continued to-day.

Among those noticed in the aisles and around the judging ring were:

Miss Anna Sands, Mrs. W. T. Adams, Miss Irwin-Martin, Miss Elise Ladew, Mrs. Edward H. Clarke, Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, Jr., Mrs. H. Lee Anstey, Miss M. Henderson, Mrs. James Doig, Mrs. Katherine Harris, Mrs. George H. Pell, Mrs. A. L. Reynolds, Mrs. M. E. Harby, Mrs. A. R. Conkling, Mrs. M. Dreicer, Miss Charlotte Watkins, Miss Christina C. NEW TRACK ASSOCIATION.

C. C. N. Y., St. John's, and Pratt Institute Form New York Organization.

The Intercollegiate Track Association of the City of New York is a new organization just formed by athletes of the College of the City of New York, St. John's College and Pratt Institute of Brooklyn. Columbia University, it is said, looks favorably on the new association and will probably become a member. Fordham University declines to enter this year, but has given assurances to the officials of the new track body that it will be represented in the proposed meet, which will likely be held on Saturday, Feb. 12. College relays will be a feature.

According to the compact agreed upon by the representatives of the three institutions which organized the Association, the membership is limited to colleges of Greater New York, and each institution will be entitled to be represented at the meetings by one undergraduate and one faculty member. The governing body will be made up of representatives of the Association. Indoor meets will be held annually and other meets will be scheduled as the officials deem advisable.

Skating Races at St. Nicholas Rink.

The first skating races of the season will be held at the St. Nicholas Rink on Monday, Dec. 20, and in anticipation of several strenuous contests the "speed merchants" have already begun to practice. Try-out periods are held at the rink on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Wednesday and Friday nights, and an opportunity is given ambitious novices to test their racing abilities against the men who have become famous in championship races. The events to be held on Dec. 20 consist of a half-mile race, Class B, for only skaters who start at fifty-five yards or over; a mile handicap for the most experienced skaters, with Clarence Granger, last year's champion, on scratch, and a quarter-mile novice race.

CONTROL OF NEW YORK LIFE.

President Denies That It Is in Hands of J. P. Morgan & Co.

President D. P. Kingsley of the New York Life Insurance Company issued this statement yesterday denying that the New York Life is in any way controlled by J. P. Morgan & Co.:

> Since J. P. Morgan & Co. secured a controlling interest in the stock of the Equitable Life Assurance Society the statement has been widely circulated that Messrs. Morgan & Co. also control in some way the New York Life.
>
> I wish to deny this in the most emphatic manner. The New York Life has no capital stock and is controlled only by its Trustees and officers. It has no alliances directly or indirectly with any other corporation or firm.

Parker was appointed Chairman of the Committee, whose other members are John G. Taylor and A. D. Cushing. A meeting will again be held on Dec. 18 to hear the report of the Committee.

POLICE MISHANDLE GIRL STRIKE PICKETS

Torn Clothes and Bruises Shown as Evidence of Rough Treatment in Waist Strike.

RIGHTS IGNORED, GIRLS SAY

Want a Court Ruling the Police Will Obey—Yonkers Strike-Breaking Factory Shuts Up Shop.

Officers of the striking Shirt Waist Makers' Union are anxious to obtain a judicial interpretation of the rights of pickets. Several recent clashes between representatives of the union and the police have led to this desire. The representatives of the union believe that pickets have the right to approach strike-breakers and persuade them peacefully to stop work. The agents of the employers, and as the girls say, the police have been diligent in their efforts to prevent the strikers from accosting the workers.

Miss Henrietta Mercy of 58 West 115th Street called at THE TIMES office last night to relate her experiences as a picket yesterday. Miss Mercy is not herself a striker, but the private secretary of a woman of wealth. She is a sister of Dr. Anna Mercy of 132 West Houston Street, and is herself a graduate of the Normal College. She wore a tailor-made coat with a fur turban and stole. She showed a TIMES reporter a torn sleeve in her waist which she said had been ripped by the roughness of policemen.

"While not a striker myself," said Miss Mercy last night, "I am deeply interested in the girl workers of the east side. As secretary of the East Side Equal Rights League, I went out yesterday afternoon as a volunteer picket with Lena Cohen of 395 Grand Street, a striker.

"There were about a dozen of us picketing a shirt waist factory at Greene and Grand Streets. We girls walked peacefully up and down in pairs. I was with Miss Cohen. We had no intention of creating any violence. All we wished to do was to speak to the girls kindly. We were awaiting 5 o'clock when the strikers should leave the factory.

"As the girls got ready to come out of the factory, between twenty and thirty special policemen employed by the factory as guards for the workers, formed a double line on the sidewalk, one line on the curb line and the other along the building, or the Greene Street side. They hurled themselves upon us and threw us off the sidewalk onto the pavement. They threw us so hard that some of the girls fell on the stones. We tried to get back on the sidewalk and they shoved, elbowed and even kicked some of us to keep us in the street.

"I managed to break through the line. A uniformed policeman picked me up and pinned me against the wall. I was so excited I forgot to take his number. The special policemen seized the other girls and pinned them against the wall till the strike-breakers had passed by. I said to the policeman who held me:

"You are supposed to be impartial, All we want to do is talk to these girls and you have no right to hold us against our will. It's our privilege to talk to them if tehy want to. He replied:

"'You can walk and talk all you want to, after they're gone. But keep still now, or I'll run you in.'

"I got free after the girls got away and started to run after them toward the elevated stairs at Grand Street and East Broadway. One of the special policemen seized me and threw me against a hydrant. I narrowly missed having my skull fractured. I picked myself up, and managed to reach the uptown stairs where several of the strike-breakers had gone.

"The special policemen followed and nearly pulled the clothes off me to keep me from going up the stairs. They called me the most vile and insulting names, and finally dragged me from the stairs. I was weak from struggling and mad with shame when I reached my sister's office in Houston Street with my clothing all disarranged and my waist torn. I believe that I should have been badly injured if a crowd had not gathered and shamed the men."

Jacob Berbarinder of 28 Norfolk Street and Pauline Kushner of 19 Rutgers Street were fined $5 in Essex Market Court yesterday for assaulting Oscar Shapiro of 106 Division Street on Wednesday evening. Miss Kushner and Derbarinder both denied that they were striking shirtwaist makers. The assault on Shapiro was an incident of strike disorder.

Shapiro was walking along Grand Street, near Eldridge Street, with a bundle under his arm, when some one cried out, "Scab! Scab!" A crowd of 500 persons collected and started to pummel him, crying, "Lynch the scab!" Special Policeman Herman Albert rescued Shapiro and arrested Miss Kushner and Derbarinder. Shapiro is a pipemaker. The bundle he carried contained old clothes. It was mistaken by the crowd for a bundle of shirtwaists made by strike breakers.

STRIKERS WIN IN YONKERS.

New Shirt Waist Factory There Forced to Close Down.

The Yonkers branch factory of the Triangle Shirt Waist Company of New York will be closed down this evening. The factory was opened ten days ago, at the beginning of the shirt waist strike in New York. The strikers, however, carried the war to Yonkers, and after eight days' picketing have won.

Most of the strike breakers were New York girls, imported for the factory. Many of them went to Yonkers under the impression that they would escape picketing. The arrival of pickets, however, spread consternation in the ranks of the girl strike breakers. Many of them stopped work. Other girls were imported from New York to take their places, but the company found that it was a losing game.

There have been several hand-to-hand fights between the pickets and the more determined strike breakers, which have been followed by arrests. The testimony in the cases in the Yonkers Police Court was so conflicting that all parties were discharged with a warning.

The management passed out word yesterday morning that to-day will be the last day they will attempt to run the Yonkers branch factory. It is said, however, that when the strike is over, a permanent factory will be established in Yonkers and local girls trained in the trade.

Lawrence, founder of Lawrence Park in Bronxville, and also of the Lawrence Hospital, which was opened last June with a historical pageant, learned yesterday that he had successfully passed through a serious operation in the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he went for special treatment which could not be provided in the hospital which he founded.

So critical was Mr. Lawrence's condition prior to the operation that his whole family and his private physician, Dr. John W. Smith, accompanied him to Baltimore.

Morgan Man in American Telephone.

H. P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. and John J. Mitchell of Chicago, it was announced yesterday, have been elected to the directorate of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company to fill vacancies. J. P. Morgan & Co. have been closely identified in the past with the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's financing, and on Wednesday Mr. Davison was one of those elected to the Western Union directorate, representing the telephone interests.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat Reaches High Levels and Closes Steady—Cotton Advances Rapidly, but Market Lowers on Profit Taking.

The wheat market was active and strong, with prices at new high levels for this movement, followed by a loss of considerable of the advance, but the close was very steady. The cash situation appeared to be very largely the factor of importance in the market. Since the labor trouble began receipts have been small, and the Western movement for four days has decreased heavily, compared with last week. Cash wheat has been strong, and the December deliveries have been readily advanced in all markets. Weather conditions have also been against the movement on account of bad storms and heavy snows.

Argentine news was bullish, although it is impossible that the damage may be discounted. Cables were received estimating the damage from the frost at 14,750,000 bushels. Such loss, if deducted from the preliminary estimate of the crop of 171,000,000, would leave the present promise about 6,000,000 less than the final of last year. The Argentine preliminary estimates, however, are always big, and it is possible there may be further reduction this year.

While there is good snow covering West, the new crop situation does not for the moment appear to be entering into the market owing to the strength of the cash position, failure of stocks to accumulate, and the Argentine reports. Europe, however, is not disturbed sufficiently over the Argentine news to come in as a buyer.

Corn was strong and active. Receipts were not as large as expected. Country offerings were small, and there was quite active commission house buying, which absorbed the offerings. The weather conditions were favorable, but the colder weather has not apparently created any selling tendency on the part of the country.

Oats were active and also very strong, advancing to new high levels for the movement. Cash oats were higher, with receipts light, and the improvement in values has apparently not materially affected the volume of country offerings.

PROVISIONS.—The market was quiet but stronger, selling up on the firmness of feeding grain, and on the moderate movement of hogs, while offerings of product were small. Prices eased off with grain.

COTTON.

There was a very active trade in the cotton market again, with prices advancing to the highest levels of the season. The market opened up and advanced with a rush, owing to very large commission house buying and heavy purchasing, credited to both Southern and to mill interests. There was again very large realizing sales, and after midday the effect of these sales was shown in a general reaction in values, with the market somewhat unsettled in the late trading.

The influence of the ginning report, which was undoubtedly responsible for the advance of the past two days, was evidently to bring in a great deal of covering by interests which had held out, hoping for a larger crop showing. In addition to that it intensified the confidence of Southern interests, who bought heavily, and it also induced a large amount of promiscuous buying through commission houses.

Large selling following the very heavy disposals of Wednesday checked the tendency toward much higher prices. The fact that certain interests, generally believed to be the old bull party, were ready to sell enormously on the advance brought before the trade the idea that the bull party, or, at least, some members of it, were ready to accept present values regardless of the talk of 17@20c cotton, which has been so industriously circulated.

The Government report will be issued at 2 P. M. to-day. Private estimates the past few days have been from 10,000,000 to 10,250,000 bales. The crop in previous years in 500-pound bales has been as follows:

	Government. Bales.	Census. Bales.

COFFEE.

There was comparatively little feature in the coffee market, prices closing unchanged to 5 points advance, with the total sales yesterday amounting to 2,000 bags. The Havre market was somewhat irregular, closing unchanged to ½ franc net advance, while Hamburg was unchanged to ¼ lower. There were no reports from Brazil on account of the holiday there. The coffee market is in a peculiar position. Prices are moving within a narrow range, and the market shows no decided tendency either way. The firmness in spot positions and the very small offerings from Brazil, resulting from the fact that Santos has already sold its export allotment this year, discourages selling, especially as holders of coffee could not readily replace stocks except at higher prices. On the other hand, there appears to be so much coffee hanging over the market which might be sold at a slightly higher level, that operators are slow about taking heavy risks on the long side.

The Havre market is now within about 25 American points of the level where half a millian bags of Valorization holdings can be sold if desired.

Receipts at Rio and Santos so far this season were 512,246,000 bags, against 8,595,000 last year and 6,824,000 two years ago. The visible supply of Brazilian coffee in and afloat for the United States is 4,484,380 bags, against 3,764,148 last year.

Spot coffee was steady at 8½c for Rio No. 7. Contract prices follow:

For Twenty Years the purchasers of our selections of bonds have enjoyed larger incomes and profits than any other banking house.

Example No. 2.

In 1907 The Mobile and Birmingham R. R. was an independent property. We then sold its prior lien 5s at 82%, yielding more than 6%. Later this Company was acquired by the Southern Railway. Present price, 108—an advance of 25½ points; meanwhile our clients have enjoyed a large income return.

Recurring Opportunities

We now offer the first mortgage bonds of a neighboring property limited to $8,000 per mile, to yield over 5%. Earnings are double interest charges. Conditions and prospects are similar to those obtaining when we offered Mobile and Birmingham 5s. The bonds combine absolute safety and a liberal return with reasonable assurance of large profits.

Safety of Principal
Liberal Income Yield
Reasonably Broad Market

Our Circular No. 119 describes a carefully selected list of bonds yielding 4½ to 5½%. In our judgment, it is practically impossible in these days to purchase bonds combining safety of principal and a reasonably broad market at prices to yield in excess of approximately this return.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Active and Strong—Call Money Rates, 4¼@5 Per Cent.

PENNSYLVANIA ISSUES UP

Subsidiaries Rise on Reports of Dividend Increases and English Bank Rate Reduction's Significance.

The unexpected action of the Bank of England in reducing its discount rate from 5 per cent. to 4½ per cent. was the chief happening of the day in the financial world and undoubtedly supplied so far as the stock market was concerned, an incentive for the consistent strength displayed by prices throughout the session. A percentage of reserves so high as the 56.71 per cent. reported by the English Bank yesterday, practically without precedent at this season of the year, compares with an average of 44.57 for the past nine years. This accumulation in itself affords a ready explanation for the Bank's decision to lower the rate, but presumably the strength of its reserve position was not the sole explanation of the reduction which may be taken as most significant in the light which it throws upon the sentiment of the English banking community with respect to the existing political situation in that country. That the rate was not summarily cut to 4 per cent. shows that the Directors of the Bank believe the situation still requires careful handling, but on the other hand the concession made, small as it is, seems to indicate a very decided diminution of the anxiety felt and openly expressed over the future of the money market when it first became evident that the Lords would reject the Budget. The Bank's step should make for ease in all money markets and that it will do so in our own eventually was made certain by the further action of the Bank during the day in releasing above $2,500,000 gold for shipment to South America whose demands have of late fallen almost exclusively upon our own banks. The foreign exchange market was easier in tone, but the local money market seemed for the moment uninfluenced by the news from London.

In the stock market notable strength was displayed by the Pennsylvania group of stocks, including Pennsylvania itself, Norfolk & Western and "Panhandle." The current explanation, and one rather enforced by the common movement of these shares, was that within a reasonable time the dividend upon Pennsylvania was to be restored to the old 7 per cent. rate. In preparation for this higher payments by Pennsylvania subsidiaries are looked for and such holdings of the stocks of these subsidiaries as are still in the hands of the public are naturally affected by the prospect of larger returns. There was a further extension of the demand noted on Wednesday for a number of the higher class railroad and industrial shares, but along with the advance in these issues there were sharp rises in stocks where speculative operations were plainly under way. At the moment, the disposition of Wall Street, so far as it may be deduced from the stock market's course, is to ignore the various unfavorable features of the financial situation to which it was so acutely sensitive a week ago, including possible legislation in Congress of an anti-corporation character and the unsettled position of affairs with railroad labor, and to consider only the more cheerful happenings coming to light from day to day.

MIAMI AT HIGH RECORD

Under Active Trading Shares Rise to 19⅛, Which Is the Highest Level Yet Reached by This Stock—United Cigar Mfg. Active.

Recessions from opening prices occurred in most of the Curb coppers yesterday, although in many instances the opening was not the highest level of the day. Miami, which reported transactions of 8,500 shares around 18⅝, was an exception, and made a new high record at the latter price, which represented a gain of ⅛ over the opening level. Ray Consolidated was another issue to show strength, rising from 22⅜ to 22⅞ on sales of 1,500 shares. Boston Copper dropped from 21⅛ to 20¼ on transactions of 6,500 shares, closing at 20¼. Greene-Cananea, Nevada Consolidated, and Ray Central closed slightly below the opening prices. In the industrial list interest centered in United Cigar Manufacturing, which reported transactions of 3,000 shares between 81 and 83.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Pennsylvania Stocks Strong.

Continued activity and a further rise in Pennsylvania Railroad stock, accompanied by greater strength in two of the road's subsidiaries, Norfolk & Western and the Panhandle, gave especial prominence yesterday to the Pennsylvania group. The suggestion was advanced that the recent increase in the dividend on Norfolk & Western common from 4 to 5 per cent. was in keeping with a policy on the part of the Pennsylvania to increase at this time its income from its holdings of other railroad stocks, and report had it that the Panhandle dividend, which now stands at 4 per cent., may also be raised. Such increases would add to the available surplus of the Pennsylvania, and would facilitate an increase in its own dividend above the present rate of 6 per cent., should the Directors favor such a change. Norfolk & Western sold up to 100⅞ yesterday, and closed with a net gain of 2 points. Panhandle, which rose to 96½, showed an advance of 1½ points. The activity in Pennsylvania Railroad brought the trading in that stock up close to 100,000 shares. Its price touched 134¾, and the close at 134 showed a net gain for the day of 2¾ points, the largest advance in Pennsylvania in any one day for a long time.

H. C. Frick Said to be Large Buyer.

Some of the buying which helped to advance the Pennsylvania group of stocks was credited to H. C. Frick, who is understood to have been for some time the largest individual holder of Pennsylvania stock. He is credited now with considerable activity in Norfolk & Western, and lately he was understood to have added largely to his holdings of Reading Company common. In the latter company Mr. Frick's influence, it is said, is being exerted in favor of an increase in its common stock dividend, a fact which adds interest to the coincidence of yesterday's reports regarding Frick buying of the Pennsylvania stocks, and the possibility of increases in the dividends on Pennsylvania and some of its subsidiaries.

Green Bay Debentures.

A new high record for the year in Green Bay debentures, which sold up to 19½, was accompanied by reports that the affairs of this road, which have been made in the past the occasion for many plans looking to improvement in the road's affairs, are passing into the control of Newman Erb. The latter some time ago acquired control of the Wisconsin Central and turned it over to the Canadian Pacific, and has been active in a number of other railroad enterprises. Mr. Erb is largely interested in the Ann Arbor and also, it is understood, in some smaller railroads in Michigan. The Street was inclined to regard as well founded the report that he was interesting himself in the Green Bay & Western Railway.

M., K. & T. Active Again.

With the exceptions of Pennsylvania, which was the most active stock of the session, and United States Steel, which held second place, Missouri, Kansas & Texas developed more activity than any other stock in the list. Reading fell short of the sales of M., K. & T. by several thousand shares, and Southern and Union Pacific together supplied no more business yesterday than did the stock of this latest addition to the Hawley group of roads, if the 'Frisco in which Mr. Hawley has most recently taken an interest be excepted from this grouping. The sales of Missouri, Kansas & Texas amounted to more than 16,000 shares, and showed a net gain of 2 points.

Philadelphia Company Melon.

There was more in the reappearance of the stock of the Philadelphia Company in the trading of the last few days after six years' absence from the tape, than was at first apparent. The announcement yesterday that the company is about to issue, at par, to both preferred and common stockholders, 55,200 shares of common stock, goes to support the old saying about "coming events." Yesterday's price of 103 represents a gain of around 20 points since the last sale reported in 1903. The first sales since then, made on Tuesday, were at 99½, so that the profits of the wicked stockholders with advance information were not sensational. The privilege to subscribe to the new shares accrues to stockholders of record of Dec. 18, and Dec. 30 is the latest date at which payment in full must be made. The entire new issue has been underwritten by Ladenburg, Thalman & Co., and the Swiss Bankverein of London.

No Agricultural Chemical Dividend.

After the meeting of the Directors of the American Agricultural Chemical Company yesterday, it was announced that "the question of inaugurating common stock dividends was fully discussed, and the unanimous decision reached that in view of the large expenditures required for extensions and improvements to plants, it was deemed inexpedient to pay an initial dividend at this date. During the trading yesterday, before the Directors' decision was made known, there was a strong tendency in the stock which put it up 2 points. This was largely on the strength of a statement circulated as coming from the company that yesterday's meeting was "to consider the declaration of an initial dividend on the common stock." Officers of the company denied yesterday that this statement, which was put out in typewritten form, ostensibly coming from the company, had any official character or had issued from the American Agricultural Chemical offices. At the close, yesterday, the stock was ½ point below Saturday's closing price

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Americans Close Firm After Improvement on the London Exchange.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Money was in good supply and fair demand on the market to-day, and discount rates were easy.

On the Stock Exchange the reduction in the bank rate did not have any material effect on the markets, which were a trifle irregular, home rails, Consols, and Kaffirs suffering fractionally on profit taking, while foreign bonds and foreign rails continued firm on Continental buying. Industrial shares were better on trade prospects.

American securities opened a fraction higher, and continued to advance on fair buying. Norfolk & Western, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, and United States Steel led the market until the early afternoon, when irregularity developed. Wall Street, however, bought well in the late trade, and prices improved and closed firm near the best point of the day.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—The local market broke to-day, and trading was active at advancing prices in local securities. Gains were made in prices all along the line, the one conspicuous exception being United Gas Improvement shares, which continued heavy. General Asphalt stocks, both common and preferrred, rose sharply. There was continued buying of Lake Superior Corporation stock, which forced the price up ⅞, to 28¼ a share. A feature of the final hour was a sudden spurt in Philadelphia Rapid Transit of ⅝, the final sale being at 28¼. About 2,000 shares changed hands, the movement being purely a speculative one, based on a steady increase in the earnings of the company. It was significant that Union Traction did not share in the advance to an appreciable extent.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Barton Chapin has sold for the Sandford estate and Joseph W. Sandford the block front on the easterly side of Broadway extending from Seventy-eighth to Seventy-ninth Street, being 204 feet on Broadway and 103 feet on both Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth Streets.

This block has been held by the Sandford family for seventy-five years. The buyers, a syndicate of New York business men, will erect a twelve-story housekeeping apartment of the highest class covering the entire Broadway front.

The same broker has arranged a building and permanent loan of $1,200,000. This plot has been held at $700,000 by the Sandford heirs, and slightly less than this amount was obtained. This syndicate will hold the property as an investment. Building operations will begin in the Spring.

Sale in Disputed Territory.

An important sale of a lot on the south side of Thirty-fourth Street, which is in the disputed Murray Hill district, was made yesterday by Tucker, Speyers & Co. The property was the sixteen-foot dwelling at 54 East Thirty-fourth Street, formerly owned by Tarrant Putnam, and which has been sold to the Madison Realty Company represented by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company. The price paid was $150,000, which is believed to be a record for that street east of Madison Avenue. Figured out, it shows that the selling price was $91 a square foot, or $9,370 a foot front, the lot having a depth of 100 feet.

The addition of this plot increases the frontage formerly acquired by the realty company on Thirty-fourth Street to 72 feet. The company was formed a few years ago by the late Dr. William T. Bull for the purpose of securing a good-sized plot for the erection of a private sanitarium. The dwellings, 48 to 52 East Thirty-fourth Street, running through to Thirty-third Street, taking in the numbers 33 to 43, giving a frontage of 113 feet on that street, were acquired some time ago, the highest price formerly paid being $122,500 for the 18-foot lot at 52 East Thirty-fourth Street.

The increased price at this record figure is doubtless due to the increasing tendency for business occupancy of that section of the street. The new Cameron building on the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street hsa just been completed, and the twenty-story Vanderbilt hotel is soon to go up on the Park Avenue corner, which will be within fifty feet of the recent purchase for the projected sanitarium. It was the Cameron building against which J. P. Morgan, Mrs. Sarah C. Goodhue, and others instituted court proceedings on the ground that it violated the old Murray Hill restriction, but the application for an injunction was denied this week. The restriction also covers the south side of Thirty-fourth Street.

Important Deals in Loft Section.

William R. Mason has sold to Reckling & Vallender the two three-story and basement private dwellings, 244 and 246 West Thirty-ninth Street, on a plot 37.7 by 98.9.

J. Arthur Fischer has sold for the estates of Caroline A. Brigham and Alexander Lyle to Reckling & Vallender the two four-story brownstone dwellings, 223 and 225 West Thirty-eighth Street, each on lot 20.7 by 98.9, making a plot 41.2 by 98.9.

S. B. Goodale & Co. have sold for the Orthaus estate 210 West Twenty-ninth Street, a three-story building on lot 24.10 by 98.9.

New Loft Building for 26th St.

Heilner & Wolf have sold to a client of the William Lemberg Company 130 West Twenty-sixth Street, a three-story building, on lot 25 by 98.9. The buyer will erect a seven-story loft building on the site.

The H. M. Weill Company have sold for W. J. Goldstone to Charles Gachot the four-story building at 138 West Twenty-sixth Street; also for a client to Edward Baer the plot 161 and 163 West Twenty-sixth Street, 44 by 107. This property was recently sold by the same brokers for Jeremiah Dimick, the carpet manufacturer.

Frost, Palmer & Co. have resold for Edward Baer the premises 158, 160, and 162 West Twenty-fifth Street and 157 West Twenty-fourth Street, being a plot 55 by 98.9 on Twenty-fifth Street and 20.10 by 98.9 on Twenty-fourth Street, to Frank L. Morrill.

Tenth Street Plot Resold.

Jacob Kottek and David and Harry Lippmann have resold 204 and 206 West Tenth Street, two two-story dwellings on plot 39.9 by 94.10. The sellers bought the property at auction about ten days ago for $20,600.

The Hope estate has sold 655 Second Avenue, a three-story dwelling on lot 24.8 by 100, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets.

Aaron Coleman has resold 221 West Forty-first Street, a two-story stable on lot 25 by 98.9. The buyer will remodel the structure. Mr. Coleman recently acquired the property from the Van Valkenbergh estate.

Buyers For Harlem Flats.

Porter & Co. have sold for Capt. Stephen McDermott a five-story flat at 416 St. Nicholas Avenue, size 32 by 125.

Frost, Palmer & Co. have sold for the Raymore Realty Company to an investor 1,475 Madison Avenue, a five-story tenement, 25 by 90, between 101st and 102d Streets.

Arnold, Byrne & Baumann have resold for Israel Lebowitz to an investor the northeast corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 163d Street, a five-story apartment house on plot 34 by 100.

Bronx Sales.

Edward Polak has sold for Mary E. Coughlin the southeast corner of Tremont and Arthur Avenues, vacant plot, 60 by 100; also, for William C. Bergen, the brick dwelling on the east side of Aqueduct Avenue, 420 feet south of 183d Street, 37½ by 100; also, for John Lysland, Lot 62 of the Waring estate, on Gifford Avenue, 175 feet west of Swinton Avenue.

The Mulhall Realty Company has sold to Mrs. Leona A. Terwilliger 714 Coster Street, a one-family brick dwelling on lot 18.6 by 100, between Lafayette and Spofford Avenues, in the Hunt's Point Estates property. The house is the third of a row of eight sold within the last month. It is in the section where the American Bank Note Company is building its model plant.

Supreme in Financial Advertising

During the eleven months of 1909 The New York Times published 86,000 more lines of financial advertising than any other New York daily newspaper, morning or evening.

673,189 lines of financial advertising were published this year, as compared with 594,983 lines during the corresponding period last year. This gain is especially significant, in view of the fact that The New York Times rejects all fraudulent and doubtful advertising.

The circulation of The New York Times exceeds 175,000 copies daily. It is read by more bankers, financiers, investors and business men than any other New York newspaper.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The cold weather has reached the Atlantic Coast, and low temperatures continue in the interior as far as the Rocky Mountains. There was, however, some slight moderation during Thursday in the Southwest.

West of the Rocky Mountains general rains and snows continue, with heavy rains in California. The Pacific storm is still central near the north coast, but a well-defined secondary disturbance has reached Northwestern Wyoming. This secondary disturbance probably will move southeastward attended by snow Friday in the Rocky Mountain region and the plains States, continuing Saturday and extending into the Missouri and upper Mississippi Valleys and possibly the lower Ohio Valley and the western upper lake region, accompanied by rising temperature Friday in the plains States and Saturday in the central valleys and the upper lake region. In the East and South the weather will be generally fair Friday and Saturday, with slightly higher temperatures in the interior.

Storm warnings are displayed on the North Pacific Coast.

Flood warnings have been issued for the Sacramento River.

Steamships departing Friday for European ports will have moderate west winds with fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Eastern New York—Fair and continued cold Friday and Saturday; light to moderate west to northwest winds, becoming variable Saturday.

New England—Fair, continued cold Friday and Saturday; moderate west winds.

DECRY USE OF OFFICE FOR POLITICAL ENDS

Too Much Party Power in Federal Employes' Hands, Say Civil Service Reformers.

ELIOT FOR A PENSION PLAN

Presidents Better Leaders in the National Cause, He Says, Than Congress—League in Session Here.

The National Civil Service Reform League, of which President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard is the President, began its twenty-ninth annual meeting yesterday at the City Club. The meeting will end with a dinner to-night at the Hotel Knickerbocker. Richard H. Dana, Chairman of the Executive Council of the league, in his annual report attacked the pernicious political activity of some of the public officeholders serving under the Roosevelt Administration, who are not now under civil service rules. Most of the delegates are from New England and the Middle West.

"During the year," said Mr. Dana, "the league has made two notable efforts. One is the investigation into the political activity of Federal office holders, and the other the fight against the patronage features of the census bill. Political activity was found to be confined almost entirely to those who were not under the Civil Service rules. By an order of President Roosevelt of June 3, 1907, the employes in the competitive service were prohibited from doing more than voting and expressing their opinions privately among their friends.

How Roosevelt Divided Them.

"In the unclassified service the story was entirely different. By the President's order these officials were not prohibited from political activity provided they did not neglect their duties nor cause scandal. Evidence was wholly lacking to substantiate the charges of coercion of officeholders by the President in order to secure the nomination of a particular candidate.

"A comparison of the official roll of delegates to the Republican National Convention at Chicago with the latest Government blue book showed that 10 per cent. of the delegates were officeholders; that in the Southern States an average of 33 per cent. were officeholders, and in some Southern States more than one-half. The officeholders in the South generally controlled the Republican Party organizations in their respective States, and frequently resorted to unfair means in order to retain their power. Their chief motive for retaining power was to hold in their hands their offices and what patronage went with them.

123,000 Out Beyond the Rules.

"One hundred and twenty-three thousand appointees in the Federal service are still outside of the Civil Service rules. Many of these are high officials, wielding wide political influence, subject to possible dictation from Washington, and will constitute a constant menace to free institutions until their political activity is curtailed by regulation, or their tenure is made independent of political results, which would curtail it by natural process.

"As to the remedy, we trust that the application of the civil service rules to a number of the fourth-class Post Offices will gradually be extended to include them all. This will take nearly one-half of the most 'active' unclassified officials out of politics. We trust, too, that ways may be found for putting second and third class Postmasters either directly under civil service rules, which will require legislation or the consent of the Senate, or that some such method of selection may be applied as is now in effect in the Consular service."

Dr. Eliot's Annual Address.

At the session of the league last night at Mendelssohn Hall, 133 West Fortieth Street, President Eliot delivered his address. He said in part:

"The goal of civil service reform is a public service, National, State, and municipal, exclusively composed of men, each of whom possesses the knowledge and skill needed for his own task, well disciplined, devoted to their work, and to the public authority which employs them, and regarding their occupation as an honorable and satisfactory life career. In order to constitute well and maintain well such a body of men, some form of retiring allowance after long and creditable service is indispensable. * * *

"The league has not failed to observe that the wishes of the American people in regard to the introduction of the merit system throughout the National civil service has been of late years better understood and more effectively furthered by the National Executives than by Congress. The extensions of the classified service have proceeded from the Presidents and the members of their Cabinets and in several cases it has been the urgency of the Executive which brought about additional good legislation.

"It will be an interesting and somewhat unexpected development in the working of the Constitution if the President, elected by the whole people, turns out to be a better interpreter of the people's wishes and purposes in an ethical and economic reform than the members of the two legislative bodies, elected by State or by districts.

E. M. Shepard Sees a Menace.

Edward M. Shepard, speaking at last night's meeting, said that members of the league should realize that the associations of a great many of the civil service employes have become an actual menace to good government. He referred particularly to policemen, firemen, and school teachers, who use their associations in political campaigns to gain unequal advantages over employes unable to bring such aggregate power to bear politically.

Mr. Shepard referred to George McAneny, President-elect of the Borough of Manhattan, as a sort of "junior saint of us Civil Service reformers." Charles H. Strong, President of the City Club, in welcoming the delegates yesterday afternoon, said he was sure that Mr. McAneny would do some thorough housecleaning in Manhattan when he went into office.

Walter L. Fisher, the special prosecutor employed by the City of Chicago to conduct the investigation of its municipal departments, also spoke.

Charles J. Bonaparte, former United States Attorney General, made a short speech yesterday afternoon, telling about the civil service work in Maryland. Both the morning and afternoon meetings today at the City Club will be public.

POSTPONE OUSTING AHEARN.

Mayor Leaves City Before Order Is Served—Ahearn Appeals.

The final act in the removal of Borough President Ahearn of Manhattan from office was postponed yesterday through the absence of Mayor McClellan from the city. When the Attorney-General's office attempted to serve upon him the order of judgment signed on Wednesday by Justice McCall of the Supreme Court it was learned that the Mayor had gone to Princeton.

Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Ahearn filed a notice of appeal from the judgment in the afternoon and this may operate as a further stay.

When the Mayor was asked about the matter early in the day he declared that unless there was further delay ordered by the courts he would call the Manhattan Aldermen together for the re-election of Ahearn's successor as soon as the order was served upon him.

CORPORATION TAX ASSESSABLE

Accountants Pleased by Changes in the Interpretation of the New Law.

Accountants and corporation officials here say that the statement by the Secretary of the Treasury in his message to Congress, that the new corporation tax would be levied on the basis of net profits of a corporation has swept away all the difficulties which seemed to lie in the path of the law as originally interpreted. They say that while the law has been made more untenable perhaps from a legal standpoint by this construction of the measure, nothing remains to prevent the preparation of corporation reports showing the amounts to be taxed, as soon as the lists which are being printed by the Treasury Department reach here.

That a test of the validity of the law will be made by some of the corporations here is likely, it is said. Ernest S. Suffern of the accounting firm of Suffern & Son, a close student of the new law, said yesterday that the steps which have been taken by the Treasury Department to put the application of the law on a profit-and-loss basis has been received with general approval by accountants here.

"It is obvious that there has been a complete change of base between that of the Attorney General, when he framed the law and explained its intent, and the application of the Secretary of the Treasury on the basis upon which the law is to be worked out," said Mr. Suffern. "This is probably caused by the Administration's discovery of the absolute impossibility of successfully applying the law upon the original basis. One reason for the difficulty is because it is almost impossible for large manufacturing corporations to obtain from their books the information required on a receipt and disbursement basis.

"Books of account are so arranged that the results of al the operations of all the business are gathered together through all the books and summarized in the profit and loss account. The cash book generally shows simply receipts and payment and records nothing as to the original transaction involved. It does not ordinarily concern a man whether the money he pays out is on account of expense or investment; he knows that he owes it—the rest is cared for elsewhere in his bookkeeping system. So with the receipts—at the time the income is earned. The books show that fact, but at the time the funds are received no indication is given as to the nature of the original transaction, which is now settled.

"Were the tax carried out on the basis originally intended, it would have been necessary for bookkeepers to analyze each account as of the date of receipt or payment to determine its nature. Hardships would have resulted, because there is often a great difference between profits and excess receipts.

"A concern might receive a large cash income during one year from the sale of merchandise not paid for until the following year. In such a case, a company might easily be taxed for a year when it was losing money.

"From the point of view of public accountants, the steps which have been taken in applying the law upon a basis of profit and loss is the only sensible course which was open to the Administration; on no other basis would the law have been feasible.

"At the present time the question of depreciation alone seems to remain a question which is likely to cause serious difficulties with the law as applied, and and on this point we have no information as to the attitude of the Administration, except that we have been informed that the Administration will meet corporations in this matter on a fair basis.

"While the accounting difficulties appear to have been largely eliminated the legal situation has become infinitely involved. Apart from the question as to the constitutionality of the law as framed, concerning which, as well as on various other points we have heard adverse comments from lawyers, we should imagine that lawyers would have little difficulty in effectively opposing a law, impossible of enforcement as enacted, which is therefore interpreted in a radically different manner from the obvious intent and clear wording of the law.

"It is our information that many large corporations will oppose the law, some by taking direct steps to test its validity; many more, negative measures, refusing to pay the law until the very latest date in any way possible, without themselves being the principals in the litigation which is sure to arise."

BIG EMPLOYERS REFUSE AID.

Corey, Marshall, and Others Keep Away from Liability Law Inquiry.

At the resumption yesterday of the hearings before the Legislative Commission appointed to investigate the question of the revision of the employers' liability laws of the State, Chairman Wainwright announced that the members will be unable to profit by the advice of some of the largest employers of labor in the country on account of their declination to appear before the Commission.

Among these are William E. Corey, President of the United States Steel Corporation; W. H. Marshall, President of the American Locomotive Company; W. H. Truesdale, President of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company; Cyrus McCormick, President of the International Harvester Company; Washington D. Thomas, President of the American Sugar Refining Company; John S. O'Rourke, President of the O'Rourke Contracting Company; C. S. Mellen, President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, and F. D. Underwood, President of the Erie Railroad.

George B. Cortelyou, President of the Consolidated Gas Company, the principal witness of the day, favored the establishment by law of a definite form of agreement as to the liability for all accidents, the contracts to be standard and drawn up and passed upon by some State Board.

A. F. Lyman, general counsel for the New York Central; Hinsdale Parsons, Vice President and General Manager of the General Electric Company; Edgar M. Atkin of the New York Edison Company, and James L. Quackenbush, General Counsel for the Inter-Met system, also took the stand. Mr. Quackenbush said the Interborough was planning a pension system for its employes, but he opposed a law providing for a compensation fund for all accidents, declaring that the burden would be very heavy on small employers.

Mr. Wainwright announced that he had received a letter from William G. McAdoo, President of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company, setting forth his views on the subject, which he thought would be of great value to the Commission.

LOANS TO BANKRUPTS NOT FOR CREDITORS

If Loan Is Made Without Discounter's Knowledge of Borrower's Impending Failure.

COURT OF APPEALS DECIDES

Payments to Preferred Creditors Also Upheld Where There Is No Secret Trust in the Payor's Favor.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals handed down a decision yesterday in the case of Robert Van Iderstine, trustee in bankruptcy of A. Fellerman & Son, against the National Discount Company of 682 Broadway, which adjudicates for the first time a question of interest to banks, trust companies and others engaged in discounting accounts. The decision, written by Judges Lacombe, Coxe and Noyes, reverses a verdict of $5,802, holds that Judge Holt, before whom the case was tried, should not have allowed it to go to the jury, and dismisses the original complaint, with costs to Mr. Van Iderstine.

At the trial it was shown that the senior Fellerman, two days before the clothing firm of which he was a member, had certain outstanding customers' accounts discounted by the National Discount Company, and applied the money to making payments to certain preferred creditors. The Circuit Court of Appeals holds that since the discount company acted in good faith, without knowledge of Fellerman's prospective bankruptcy and of his purpose to make preferential payments, it cannot be held liable. The decision, the first on this point of law, means that hereafter no discounter of accounts for fair consideration can be drawn into a bankruptcy dispute. Another interesting part of the decision is that which holds that payments to favored creditors, unless there is provision for a secret trust in the payor's favor, are not fraudulent, though they may be overthrown if shown to be in contemplation of bankruptcy.

The case arose in 1905. On Aug. 15 of that year the elder Fellerman applied to the defendant for advancements upon his firm's accounts, and a written agreement was entered into, wherein the defendant as "banker," agreed to advance to Fellerman & Son as "customer" 75 per cent. of the face value of such accounts as might be transferred to and accepted by it. Fellerman agreed to pay the discount company 5 per cent. commission upon the gross amount of the accounts pledged, and 6 per cent. interest upon advances.

At the time of the execution of the contract, the defendant advanced to Fellerman $3,000 in cash upon accounts amounting to $5,232, and on Aug. 18 made a further advancement upon accounts amounting to $2,495. Of the latter advancement Fellerman actually received $1,006, the amount of the commissions upon the accounts being treated as a part of this advancement. Fellerman used most of the money which he received in paying certain creditors whom he desired to prefer.

On Aug. 19, 1905, a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed against Fellerman & Son, and they were subsequently declared bankrupts. After the bankruptcy proceedings the defendant, through an attorney, collected upon the pledged accounts an amount in excess of the advancements upon them, and subsequently accounted to the trustee for the balance collected after deducting a small sum for interest and a large sum for attorney's fees.

On the trial of the action, brought by Mr. Van Iderstine on behalf of the creditors, I. Gainsburg, as attorney for the discount company, moved that the complaint be dismissed and judgment given for his client. This motion Judge Holt denied and Attorney Gainsburg took the case to the Circuit Court of Appeals on the proposition which has just been sustained.

FREIGHTER SINKS, 5 DROWN.

W. C. Richardson Goes Down in Lake Erie Five Miles Out of Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 9.—The W. C. Richardson, a big steel freighter, sank early to-day at a point five miles up the lake from Buffalo harbor and five members of the crew went down with the ship.

The remainder of the crew of fourteen were rescued by the Steamer William Pain which, with the Richardson had anchored off Waverly Shoal early in the night, fearing to enter the harbor because of the storm. The sea was high and early to-day the Richardson shifted her cargo and listed, the water rushing into her before she could be righted. She now lies in about twenty feet of water with her bow in the air.

Those lost were Chief Engineer Mayberry, of Cleveland, the second mate and three deck hands. Captain E. J. Burke of Detroit, in command of the Richardson, is with the rescued aboard the William Pain.

The W. C. Richardson is a propeller boat of 3,818 tons, built in 1902 and owned by W. C. Richardson of Cleveland. She carried a fargo of 200,000 bushels of flax consigned here for Winter storage. It is insured for $385,000. The steamer is insured for $200,000.

HE DIDN'T STAY REFORMED.

Manufacturer's Protege from the Jail Disappears with a Few Checks.

George C. Sleeth, head of the Sleeth Manufacturing Company of Belleville, N. J., has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of Robert K. Wardell, who was in his employ until Wednesday.

Wardell, it is alleged, took three blank checks out of Mr. Sleeth's check book, and two of them have already been returned signed with Mr. Sleeth's name, it is said. One was drawn for $30 and cashed by Mrs. Jacob Kieferdorf; another for $20 was cashed by a man named Statz, a saloonkeeper in East Orange.

Mr. Sleeth is interested in Young Men's Christian Association work and first met Wardell in the County Jail, where he was awaiting trial for forgery. Wardell is well educated and of good appearance. He told a plausible hard luck story to Mr. Sleeth, saying he was the son of a wealthy physician in Philadelphia. He had squandered his patrimony, but was prepared to lead a Christian life.

With the assistance of the Rev. C. E. Scudder of the Wesley M. E. Church Mr. Sleeth succeeded in patching up the forgery case, and two weeks ago Wardell started in as bookkeeper in the Sleeth factory. He was last seen on his way to New York.

Buncke Back to His Old City Job.

Commissioner of Accounts Buncke filed his resignation with Mayor McClellan yesterday. He announced the time that he will return to his old place as Auditor in the office of the Board of Water Supply. Mr. Buncke was appointed by the Mayor a few months ago to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Commissioner Gallaher on charges of unfairness and persecution in his investigations.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

DAVID C. SEARS.—David C. Sears, clerk, of Walden, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $2,964 and no available assets. He was formerly a grocer.

HENRY GARFINKEL.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Henry Garfinkel, shoe dealer of Yonkers, show liabilities of $7,398 and assets consisting of stock in the hands of the receiver, amount unknown, and $10 cash in bank.

PERLSTEIN & MORRIS.—Judge Hough of the United States District Court has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on Monday against Perlstein & Morris, manufacturers of waists and dresses as the Wellesley Manufacturing Company at 34 West Houston Street. It was asserted that the firm is solvent.

BRENNER & LESSER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Harry Brenner and Samuel Lesser, who compose the firm of Brenner & Lesser, manufacturers of cloaks and suits at 26 Division Street, by these creditors: Louis Wilson, $857; Israel Zionson, $263, and R. and S. Printing and Paper Company, $25. It was alleged that they are insolvent, made preferential payments, and suits have been brought against them by various creditors. Mr. Brenner, in September, 1908, formed the firm with a claimed cash capital of $6,500. It was said that most of Mr. Lesser's capital was obtained from a damage suit against a city railway for injuries.

JOHN C. HEENEY.—John C. Heeney, a laborer, living at 55 East 122d Street, formerly a builder, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $190,887 and no assets. Of the liabilities $181,000 were on bond and mortgages and $9,887 for materials, labor, and loans. Among the creditors are the Germania Life Insurance Company, $105,000; Trinity Library, $64,000; A. Dievendorf, $12,000; Fort Plain National Bank, $2,066; Light & Lauder, $1,500; Bingham Brothers, $1,500, and John W. Deenican, $1,368. Mr. Heeney became involved in a building operation of five houses at West End Avenue and Ninety-second Street, and several judgments were taken against him by creditors. He filed the petition yesterday to stay an examination in supplementary proceedings on one of the judgments.

HYDLEATHER MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Hydleather Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of artificial leather, with offices at 5 Beekman Street and a plant at Union Hill, N. J., by David B. Galbally, a creditor for $1,000 on an assigned claim of Herman Fries for money loaned. It was alleged that the company is insolvent, has admitted insolvency, and has disposed of a large part of its assets, including the factory at Union Hill. It is a Delaware corporation, organized early this year. Judge Hough appointed W. C. Low receiver. The assets in this city are estimated at only $200. It was alleged that the factory was closed a short time ago and all the machinery was removed, that money for the sale of stock, instead of being turned over to the company and put in bank to its credit, has been retained and kept by three of the Directors, who refused to account for it.

MRS. BROKAW SAYS SPIES TRAILED HER

WARNED AGAINST KISSING

Kept in an Endless State of Anxiety, She Asserts, Because of His Jealousy.

Continuing her allegations of cruelty at the hands of her husband, W. Gould Brokaw, whom she is suing for a separation and $60,000 a year alimony, Mrs. Mary Blair Brokaw, in the Supreme Court at Mineola, L. I., before Justice Putnam, told yesterday how her husband, while they were in Paris, deserted her and went to London.

Mrs. Brokaw said she followed him and was forced to ride with the servants on trains in which her husband occupied luxuriant compartments. When she caught up with him in London, she said, he told her he did not know her and returned to New York, Mrs. Brokaw following on the same steamer. On the voyage, she testified, her husband had a comfortable suite and ate at the Captain's quarters, while she traveled with her nurse in one little room. She told how he repulsed her efforts at a reconciliation then, although they continued to live together after reaching this country.

Mrs. Brokaw testified that her husband had established an elaborate system of espionage upon her, instructing their servants not to allow her the use of his automobiles when she wished to motor to town from their home at Great Neck. She said that a butler carried the telephone receiver around in his pocket so she couldn't communicate with friends, and that her husband continued to swear at her and call her names and accuse her of flirting with guests and Mr. Brokaw's physicians. He also warned her not to kiss her physician. She was allowed to say that Mr. Brokaw appeared many times to be under the influence of liquor.

Another Day on the Stand.

She was still on the stand at adjournment time last evening, and her counsel, Arthur J. Baldwin, said it would take another day for her to finish her story. John F. McIntyre, counsel for Mr. Brokaw, plans to cross-examine her for a day and a half.

There were not so many spectators in the courtroom yesterday as on the preceding day, but the many witnesses which both sides have subpoenaed were on hand. Mr. Brokaw was in the courtroom all day.

Most of the morning session was taken up with a wrangle between counsel over the admission of several hundred telegraph messages which had passed between husband and wife during the year preceding the separation suit. Mr. McIntyre contended that they were not admissible as evidence on the ground of their being privileged communications between husband and wife. Justice Putnam, however, decided not to exclude them, and later in the day several of them were read. Walter B. Hayes of the Western Union Telegraph Company was called to identify the telegrams.

Mrs. Brokaw went on the stand at noon. She was asked about the time she was ill in a sanitarium in Paris in April, 1908. She said Mr. Brokaw had rooms in the sanitarium at the time, and every time the physicians went to Mrs. Brokaw's room, he would enter and remain until they left. He objected, she said, to the physicians making two visits a day. He further objected, she said, to her having a girl friend visit her, as he said it "made him nervous." Leaving the hospital, the Brokaws went to the Hotel Astoria. The witness said her girl friend invited her to a luncheon, but Mr. Brokaw refused to allow her to go, saying that it would make him too nervous.

A Motor Trip in France.

She told of a motor trip from Paris to Fontainebleau and Tours. Arriving at the former place, she said Mr. Brokaw discharged her nurse and sent her back to Paris for a trivial reason. On the way to Tours, she said, Mr. Brokaw took half a dozen drinks from a large bottle he carried. When she spoke to the chauffeur, she said, about the road, her husband called her names and told her to mind her own business.

At Tours, she said, there was a scene because she refused to return in the motor car with her husband when he insisted in driving. Going to her room in the hotel that night, she said, he broke down the door when she refused to let him enter.

"Next morning," testified Mrs. Brokaw, "when I insisted upon returning to Paris by train he said if I did he would get a divorce for desertion. He gave orders to his valet not to give me any money. I returned to Paris by train, and when I went to the hotel the manager requested me to leave, as Mr. Brokaw had sent word that he wouldn't be responsible for my bills."

Mr. Brokaw, she said, went to London alone. He returned to Paris on May 20, the date of the death of his nephew, "Jimmy" Martin. That night, she said, Mr. Brokaw again broke in the door of her room at the hotel.

"He told me," she said, "to go to his room and look on the bed and I would see a revolver there. He said he could easily blow out my brains. I went to his room, and the gun was there."

The witness testified that Mr. Brokaw again came to her room, and when she tried to keep him out the door hit his head. He ran into the hall screaming, she said, that his wife had struck him, and that he was going to have her arrested.

He Bandaged His Head.

He bandaged his head, but there was no blood on the inside of the bandage when he took it off, but there was some stuff which looked like red ink on the outside. Next day, she said, there was another scene, and Mr. Brokaw informed her he was going to London. He left a note saying where some money would be left for her, but when she went for it there was none. Then she cabled for money to her lawyer in New York and traveled on the same train with her husband to London.

At a hotel in Southampton, she said, Mr. Brokaw registered as Mr. Smith, and when she passed him in the hotel she asked him if he didn't think they had better be friendly on their way home. Mr. Brokaw, she said, merely remarked: "Who are you? I don't know you."

While on board the steamer, she said, her husband didn't speak to her at all.

Arriving here, Mrs. Brokaw went to the Plaza Hotel, and her husband to Great Neck. He called her up on the tlephone, she said, and expressed sorrow at the way he had treated her. From July 5 to Sept. 17 she lived with him at Great Neck.

One day, she said, her husband telephoned her to come in and have luncheon with him and Dr. Chipman at the St. Regis. During luncheon, she said, her husband turned to her and told her not to talk to the physician as it "upset" him. Returning to Great Neck in a motor car, Mr. Brokaw insisted on driving, and as she thought he had been drinking too much, she and the physician refused to go and got out of the car.

Mr. Brokaw, she said, then accused her and the physician of trying to elope. Dr. Chipman, she said, resented this, and threatened to have her husband arrected. Finally the chauffeur drove them out, and when they reached Great Neck, she said, Mr. Brokaw discharged the physician.

"On Oct. 5 he left for the South because he said his physician had ordered him to keep away from me for two or three months," said the witness. "Dr. Reinze and Dr. Chipman went with him."

A Warning About Kissing.

While they were separated Mr. Brokaw sent his wife many telegrams. One of them contained minute instructions regarding her conduct in his absence. In another Mr. Brokaw wanted to know what plays she attended. When her husband went to his hunting lodge at Fairview Park, N. C., his physician wrote Mrs. Brokaw advising her for the sake of her husband's health not to go there. Writing her a long letter from his lodge, Mr. Brokaw asked his wife not to go to Mrs. Martin's when she had company. Then the letter went on:

> If you go telephone first, as that man is always there. I don't like them and they make me nervous. You promised to see no men at all while I am away. You know what I told you about kissing the doctor. If he attempts to kiss you tell him that you do not kiss any one but your husband. I will know if you do, and if you kiss any one I will not want to kiss you again.

In one message Mr. Brokaw asked his wife not to go to a dinner and the theatre with a Miss Burgess. According to Lawyer McIntyre, Mr. Brokaw computed that the telegrams which passed between him and his wife amounted to more than $10,000.

At the close of the day's session Mr. Brokaw had this to say regarding his wife's testimony:

"The Blairs were people of limited means. After my marriage they sought to live on the Brokaw money. The father and mother of Mrs. Brokaw both borrowed money from me. I emphatically deny all the charges she made on the stand and will base my defense on that denial."

As he entered the courtroom in the morning Mr. Brokaw was served with a summons in a suit brought against him by Renault Freres & Co. for $125. Mr. Brokaw at first denied his identity.

The case will be continued to-day.

STEERS NAMES MORE AIDES.

Republicans Not Joyful Over Brooklyn President-Elect's Appointment.

Borough President-elect Steers of Brooklyn yesterday announced four more appointments to office under him. John Thatcher, an independent Republican, is to be Superintendent of the Bureau of Buildings; William J. Taylor, a Republican, who has been active in the Hearst organization, is to be Superintendent of Sewers; John B. Creighton, a Republican, Secretary of the Borough President, and William A. Coakley, a prominent labor man and President of the Lithographers' Union, Deputy Superintendent of the Bureau of Buildings.

The Republican organization leaders who had been counting on having a big say in the distribution of the plums were not greatly pleased apparently by the appointments. The placing of Lewis H. Pounds in the office of Commissioner of Public Works by Mr. Steers is the only appointment thus far credited to the Republican organization.

There was talk yesterday that three of President Coler's men would resist being ousted from office. These are Commissioner of Sewers James Dunne, Supt. of Highways Patrick F. Lynch, and James McQuade, confidential Inspector for the Borough President. It was said that if removed by Mr. Steers at the first of the year these officials would resist removal in the courts, taking the ground that they could not legally be removed for purely political reasons. They say they have a precedent for such action in the case of a man who was removed from office by Borough President Ahearn in Manhattan and who was reinstated by the courts.

MAJESTIC MEETS HEAVY SEAS.

Liner Brings Heaviest Mails Since Last Holidays.

The White Star liner Majestic, in yesterday from Southampton, met rough weather for most of her journey. It began as soon as she stuck her nose in the English Channel. The liner was nearly thirty hours getting from Cherbourg to Queenstown, a journey which ordinarily consumes but half that time. The Majestic brought 4,270 bags of mail—the first of the Christmas mail and the largest consignment to arrive on a steamer since last year.

Col. W. J. Sutherland, who is interested in mining ventures in Alaska, was a passenger. He has just completed his 350 trip across the Atlantic. He said that the storm was not the most severe he had been through, but it was the most spectacular and beautiful. He had some criticism to make regarding the methods of the Guggenheims in acquiring property in Alaska and a word of praise for Secretary Ballinger, who, in his opinion, is absolutely honest and eager to probe any semblance of fraud.

REMBRANDTS IN AS BAGGAGE.

Dr. Mitchell Back with Two Paintings —Other May Be Morgan's.

Passengers arriving here yesterday on the White Star liner Majestic were a good deal interested in three of Rembrandt's paintings which were brought over as passenger baggage. Dr. Hubbard W. Mitchell brought two of the paintings. The canvases, which are small, are said to represent Rembrandt when young, painted by himself, and the other his wife. According to the story of some of those on board, Dr. Mitchell took the paintings abroad with a view of determining their genuineness. His mission was successful, the paintings being found to be the work of the master.

The third painting was brought to this country by Charles R. Williams, connected with Agnew's, London. He refused to tell what the painting represented. It has been sold to an American and rumor on the steamship had it that the canvas had been bought by J. P. Morgan. It is said to be valued at $75,000.

Jewelers Sue Banker White for $31,500

A diamond and emerald brooch valued at $31,500 figures in a suit begun before Supreme Court Justice Platek yesterday by Milton T. Bagg and George W. Post, Jr., jewelers, against Archibald S. White, a banker at 21 Pine Street, to recover this amount. The plaintiffs say that the brooch was ordered by Mrs. White, but her husband declares that his wife refused to receive it. He also asserts that there was never any written agreement covering the order, and that no money was paid down.

MORSE TELLS WHY HE ASKS RETRIAL

ACCUSES DEPUTIES, TOO

Says They Misconducted Themselves by Getting on Intimate Terms with Jurors.

In response to the continuous requests of reporters for an interview, Charles W. Morse, the banker, issued a statement from his cell in the Tombs yesterday regarding his view of the appeal to be made by Martin W. Littleton in the United States Circuit Court to-day for a new trial of his case. Here is Mr. Morse's statement:

"I am coming close to the end of a bitter, nerve-racking struggle for justice. What that end will be I am not able to foretell; whether servitude under a sentence which is rarely imposed even upon a murderer, or a new trial, with a chance to submit my case to another jury after the passions of the panic have cooled and the cry for a victim has ceased.

"If it be servitude in a distant State and climate, away from my family and friends, I shall meet it with the firm consciousness that I have not violated the law or done wrong to a single individual.

"If it be a new trial, I shall be willing to have a jury impaneled at once, placed in the custody of impartial officers, kept free of hostile influences, and abide by the result.

"A new trial could not hurt the Government's case, because all of the evidence is a matter of record, and if any witness is absent or dead his testimony could be read.

"If the Government has a good case it can prove it again; but if I am denied a new trial there is no remedy for me against the wrongs and misconduct of which I think the special officers and jury were guilty.

"You ask me what misconduct of the jury I refer to. Well, I refer to the fact that the majority of them, instead of keeping their heads clear and their blood cool, drank enough and often enough to prevent them from receiving and understanding and calmly weighing the complicated facts of my case.

"I refer to the fact that they drank at places and under circumstances and quantities which of itself shows that they did not realize and understand the grave duty which they were called upon to discharge. I refer also to the fact that when they had emptied a bottle in their cardroom they would call the empty bottle an 'exhibit,' indicating the frivolous and irresponsible way in which they looked upon the most important evidence in the case.

"In speaking of the misconduct of the paid agents in charge of the jury, I mean the fact that they were the paid agents of those officials of the Government who were engaged in trying to convict me, and not the impartial officers of the court designed to guard the jury.

"I refer to the further fact that they wore the big badges of their authority with their official title upon them; that they carried pistols on their persons, and that they drank with the jurors in their rooms and in saloons at different intervals.

"While I do not know that any of these paid agents, except in one instance, said anything to the jury injurious to me, I know they were employed and paid by those officials who were trying to convict me and that they had the incentive and opportunity to do so, and even if they had done so I would have no way of proving it.

"Again, I mean that these paid agents allowed the jury to drink all they wished to, that they allowed them to read the newspapers containing bitterly hostile articles against me, all of which was against the spirit of the order given by the court.

"I refer to the fact that one of the jurors had been incompetent for several years, and his three physicians say so under oath. I refer to the fact that another of the jurors was in such a state as a result of drink as to require the attendance of a physician while deliberating on my liberty.

"With all of these facts, and more that I cannot give, I leave to any fair-minded citizen if the verdict against me should stand, or whether I should not have another chance before a different jury surrounded by different influences, to establish my innocence.

"There is not a business man in New York who would rely on the result of any business conference in which the members conducted themselves as this jury did. There is not a Judge in the United States who would knowingly permit the paid agents of the prosecution to take charge of the jury and conduct themselves as these men did.

"I shall await the result and abide by it."

WILL PROVIDES FOR HER DOGS

Mrs. Falk Directs That $100 Each Be Paid for a Home for Each of Her Pets.

Under the will of Mrs. Emma Falk of Woodlawn, The Bronx, which was filed for probate in the Surrogates' Court yesterday, charities connected with the Lutheran Church will benefit. The testatrix also makes express provision for the future welfare of her many dogs. Of them the will says:

> I direct my executor to find good homes for any dogs which I may have at the time of my decease and who have been my companions, and I direct my executor to enter into an agreement with such person or persons who will agree to take and care for my dogs during their lifetime, to pay such person or persons the sum of $100 for each dog so taken and cared for. I express the wish that my executor will exercise care in finding responsible persons, and, if possible, persons who have affection for animals with whom to make such agreements.

The residue of the estate is left in equal parts to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the German East Side Aid Society for Widows and Orphans, and the Wartburg Orphan Farm School of the Evangelical Lutheran Church at Mount Vernon, N. Y.

The last two charities also profit by additional clauses of the will to the extent of $3,000 and $2,000 each. Other charitable bequests are to St. Stephen's Church at Woodlawn, which receives $1,000, and the German Masonic Home at Tappan, N. Y., which receives a like amount.

Frederick H. Seacord of New Rochelle, who is named as executor, receives $2,000, "in appreciation of services rendered as attorney and business adviser."

Besides these bequests, a number of distant relatives, some of them in Germany, receive amounts ranging from $1,000 to $2,000. The will was dated July 28, 1905, but the value of the estate could not be learned last night.

WANTS ALL ROCKAWAY POINT.

Metz Proposal Brings Out More Objections to City's Purchase.

When the question of confirming the purchase by the city of the strip of land on Rockaway Point for a public seaside park comes up for consideration at today's meeting of the Board of Estimate, there will undoubtedly be new objections to the project on account of the recommendation by Controller Metz that the city buy not only the 348 acres in the first plot, but also some 700 acres including the rest of the Point. This land is owned by the Harriman estate, and the Controller declares that if the city cuts it off by buying the proposed strip some large damages can be obtained. He proposes that a public hearing be held on the proposal.

This is likely to complicate the question, owing to the plan, on account of the inaccessability of the site.

December Overcoat SALE

REAL Overcoat weather has been slow in coming. Overcoats have been slow in going. This condition faces every retailer in the city. We're not going to wait for the weather—we're going to face the condition. To reduce our overcoat stock we're reducing prices. This sale affects some Overcoats at every price. The greatest number of garments, however, is represented by the coats and prices listed below.

Every new and smart style effect is to be had in these lots. All garments are of our own manufacture, and bear the same service guarantee that we issued with them at the regular prices. Those who are familiar with our values will appreciate the unusualness of these reductions.
